This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PROOFS OF THE FRESCHEVILLE AND MUSARD PEDIGREE.

Mr. Wolley has contented himself with adding a mere list of authorities, which, for the most part, refer to a transcript of St. Lo Kniveton's collection of Records relative to the family of Frecheville,[a] contained in the same volume whence the preceding pedigree is extracted. But as this would prove unsatisfactory to any one who had not the MS. before him, and as numerous Additions and Corrections have been made in the Pedigree itself, it was judged more advisable to substitute a short abstract of most of those documents referred to, which are not printed, with such additional illustrations as occurred in the course of a somewhat laborious examination of the Cartularies of Derley and Dale among the Cotton MSS.; of Welbeck, MS. Harl. 5640; of Newstead, in the College of Arms; an abstract of the Frecheville Evidences transcribed by Col. Colepeper (who married a female coheiress of the family) in the reign of Charles the Second, from a copy "made by some Herald," MS. Harl. 7535; voluminous materials relating to the family interspersed in the twenty volumes of Adversaria of Col. C. in the Harleian collection, Nos. 7587—7607; the Collectanea of St. Lo Kniveton, referred to above; a volume of documentary evidences relating to the families of Musard and Frecheville, made by Gervase Holles, in the Lansdowne library of MSS. No. 207 F.; and the Heraldic Visitations of the counties of Derby and Nottingham.

(1.) Monast. Anglic. vol. iv. p. 607, new edit. from MS. Cott. Nero, D. VIII. Hence Dugdale's account, Baron. i. 109.

(2.) Liber Domesday, tit. Derbyscire, ca. 10. Dugd. i. 510. On the authority of Matthew of Westminster, p. 243, ed. Franc. 1601, it is stated, that this Ralph Fitz-Hubert was put to death —"more latronum suspensus"—by an adherent of the Empress Maud, in the year 1140.

(2. a.) Monast. iv. 607. Mr. Wolley, finding the names of Hubertus de Norw. and Adam de Cantia, in Thoroton, vol. i. p. 86, ed. Throsby, inserts them, without comment, in the pedigree, but changes Norw. (very absurdly) into Norway. Adam was one of the Commissioners for making the Conqueror's survey; and held large possessions in Kent, but there is no authority for calling him de Cantia. See Dugd. i. 109.

(2 b.) Monast. iii. 290. Henry de Rya was living in 1146. Dugd. i. 110.

de Rya, and his foundation of the monastery of St. John at Colchester; the first stone of which was laid by himself, the second by his wife Rohais, and the third by her brother Earl Gilbert (also called Gilbert de Tonebrigge) in the year 1097. Under the appellation of Eudo filius Huberti and Eudo Dapifer he occurs very frequently in Domesday Book. Eudo died at the castle of Preaux, in Normandy, and his body was brought to England, and buried at Colchester, 28 Feb. 1120. Cf. Dugd. i. 109, 110. A shield of arms or armorial distinction assigned to him may be found in MS. Cott. Nero, D. VIII. f. 345.

(2 d.) Sad confusion has been made between this lady and her mother by the author of a genealogy of the founder of Tintern abbey; and his statement has been very carelessly adopted by Dugdale, although he had better authorities before him. Cf. Monast. v. 209. Dugd. i. 110. 207. This statement makes her daughter of Walter Giffard, Earl of Buckingham, and relict of Richard Fitz Gilbert, Earl of Owe; but the anachronism is apparent, and has been pointed out by Hornby, in his severe but merited censures on the author of the Baronage (pp. 22, 23. 65). The history of the foundation of Colchester Abbey (the monks of which are most likely to have been well informed) expressly declares her to be the daughter of Richard Fitz Gilbert, by Rohais, sister of William Giffard, Bishop of Winchester [1107-1128].[b] The same authority calls her Rohaisa junior, and states that she was married to Eudo Dapifer "ante habiles annos," and had cohabited with him thirty-two years, which, reckoning from her death (which took place in 1141, the year after her husband's), will place her marriage about the year 1089. She was buried by her brothers, against her wishes, in the abbey of Bec. See Monast. iv. 609, or MS. Cott. Nero, D. VIII. f. 346.

(2 e.) Monast. v. 209, from MS. Cott. Vitell. F. IV. By her husband William de Mandeville, she became the mother of Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex, who in 30 Hen. I. (being then of full age), received livery of his lands. Dugd. i. 200. Mr. Wolley has here committed a strange blunder in the pedigree, by omitting the daughter and sole heiress altogether, and making Hubert de Rya, Castellan of Norwich, the son of Eudo Dapifer, although he had previously entered him as Eudo's brother.

[b] This William is not mentioned by Dugdale. He must have been a son of Walter Giffard who died in 1103. Baron. i. 60.

Lib. Rub. Feod.* MS. Add. 6697, p. 98. Cf. Lib. Nig. p. 226. ed. Hearne. This was in the 12 Hen. II. 1165. Dugdale refers to other accounts rendered by him to the Exchequer, in the reigns of Henry II. Richard I. and John. See Baronage, ii. 510. Several charters from this Hubert to the monastery of Derley, in Derbyshire, are printed in Monast. vi. and there are many others in the Derley Cartulary, MS. Cott. Titus C. IX. 2. among which may be noticed: 1. Controversy and agreement between Albinus, abbot of Derley, and Hubert Fitz-Ralph, respecting the manor of Cruche, by which he concedes to the monks "terr. de Pentriz et de Rippel' et de Ulkerthorp' et terr. illam de Chillewell' que pertinet ad pred. maner. de Pentriz, quam pater ejus eis dederat, et Rad. fil. Steph. eis postmodum concessit" (in the time of R. bp. of Coventry [Rich. Peche, 1162-1182],) "et ecclesiam de Cruche sicut pater suus eis concesserat, cum omnib. ad eand. eccl. pertin. &c. sicut eam tenuerunt die Purificationis S. Marie, prox. post captionem Will. Regis Scocie." Dated at Worcester, 23 Aug. 1175, f. 114 b. 2. Grant to the church of St. Giles at Scardeclive, of "illud incrementum pomerii quod Matild' mater mea prius dederat Petro persone et sacerdoti de Scardeclif." ib.[d]

The precise period of Hubert Fitz-Ralph's death is unknown, but he was living in 3 Hen. III. and probably died not long after. Cf. Dugd. i. 510. Thorot. vol. i. p. 85. (See No. 8. 9.)

(6.) The documents already cited will prove that Edelina was the first wife of Hubert Fitz-Ralph, and she has been rightly so designated in the pedigree drawn out by Richard St. George,[e] Thoroton, and Wolley; but they were all ignorant of her being the daughter of William Fitz-Ralph, Seneschal of Normandy, and founder of the abbey of Dale, in Derbyshire, otherwise called De Parco Stanley, as proved by the charters in the cartularies of Dale and Derley. The examination of this fact, with a notice of a great many other members of her family, would lead me too far at present from the object in view; but at some future period I propose to illustrate this descent, which has hitherto escaped every genealogist. On the authority of these evidences I have removed from the pedigree the names of William Fitz-Ralph and Robert his son, which were copied by Wolley from Thoroton, and supposed (erroneously) to be the brother and nephew of the above Hubert Fitz-Ralph.

(7.) Dugd. i. 510, and Lib. Nig. i. 226, on which Hearne appends a note, correcting the error in calling him Henry de Costentyne. In the Derley register is a grant from this Geoffrey to the monastery, of his share of the manor of Cruche,[f] which was confirmed by Walter, Bishop of Coventry.[g]

(8. 9.) Wolley refers to Dugdale for this Anker de Frechenville,[h] but the latter does not make the slightest allusion to

As his son Ralph was of age in 9 Hen. III. (Dugd. ii. 6) this Anker must have been married before the year 1203, and probably died in or before the 3 Hen. III. when the wardship of his son was granted. MS. Lansd. 207 F. p. 83.

The following writ will prove the period of his widow's decease, the daughter and heir of Hubert Fitz-Ralph:

MS. Harl. 3375, f. 27.

In the Harl. MS. 5809, f. 35 b, are notices of two instruments executed by the above Ralph, one of which is an agreement with Walter, abbot of Derley [Walter de Walton, 1247—1260]. To both of them is annexed a drawing of a seal appended to the originals, on which is a shield bearing a border indented, and around it: + SIGILLVM : RADVLFI : DE : FRESCHEVILL' : At f. 34 b the same seal is said to have been appended to a charter without date, wherein it is mentioned "quod Radulfus de Freschevill' miles dedit, &c. Julianæ filiæ suæ," &c.

In MS. Lansd. 207 F. p. 72, is also a copy of a charter from this Ralph to the Monastery of Newstead, of lands in Scardeclive and Palterton, to which the same seal is affixed,[1] as follows:

Sciant pr. et fut. q. ego Rad'us de Freschenvile miles, conc. et h. p. c. mea conf. Deo et Eccl. B. (19.) Dugd. ib. From Dugdale's statement, that he did homage and received livery of his lands, 31 Hen. III. it would appear as if this Ralph were then only of age, but this is not true, as will appear by the following authorities; the livery in 31 Hen. III. was of the lands of his elder brother Robert, who died s. p. and Ralph was then upwards of 40 years old.

In the 31 Hen. III. inquisitions were taken respecting the lands held by Robert, brother of this Ralph. The jury of Berkshire return,

"Quod predictus Robertus Musard tenuit duas carucatas terræ cum pertin. in Spersholte, per servic. feodi unius mil. que valent per ann. sexdecim libr. Dicunt etiam quod Rad'us Musard, frater predicti Rob'ti, propinquior heres ejus est. Et est de etate quadraginta annorum, et eo amplius."

The jury of Notts. and Derby return on the same occasion:

"Quod predictus Robertus habuit in Derbisyre, apud villam de Staveley, 60 bov. terr. et sept. et valent per ann. 19^{li}. 10^{s}. 8^{d}. Item, redd. liberor. homin. ibid. valet per ann. 4^{li}. 14^{s}. 10^{d}. Dicunt etiam quod molendina sua ibid. val. p. a. 8^{li}. Dicunt etiam quod dominicum suum et pratum val. p. a. 6^{li}. 8^{s}. 6^{d}. Dicunt etiam quod auxilium villanor. val. p. a. 4^{li}. Glovernie, Berkesyre, et Warewycsyre. Et Rad's Musard est propinquior heres ejus, et plenar. etatis."

This Ralph died 49 Hen. III. leaving Ralph his son and heir thirty years of age, and upwards.

(21.) This Ralph Musard, son of Ralph, is stated by Dugdale, i. 513, to have died 1 Edw. I. which is followed, rather too precipitately, by Mr. Wolley. But the Inquisition on his death, taken on Wednesday next after the feast of St. Simon and St. Jude, 56 Hen. III. [1271] proves that he died that year, and held the manor of Staveley, in co. Derb. &c. "Et Juratores dicunt quod Nich. Musard frater predicti Rad. est ejus heres proximior, et est etat. xxx annor. et ampl."

Another Inquisition on the same individual, by virtue of a writ "ad melius inquirendum," was taken 1 Edw. I. which occasioned the mistake of Dugdale, which repeats the substance of the one before taken, with the addition that Nich. Musard was then 22 years of age. In the writ mention is made of Matilda, wife of this Ralph, and the dower to be assigned her.

Notwithstanding these returns respecting the next heir, which are confirmed by the Frecheville Evidences, pp. 23, 24, yet it is certain that the above Ralph left John,[p] his son and heir, then in minority. See Dugd. i. 513, and No. (22.)

(21 a.) "Matildis fuit uxor dicti Radulfi, ut in Rot. Claus. de eod. a° [1 Edw. I.] m. 8." MS. Harl. 3375, f. 79 b.

"Rad. de Musard, son and heir of Ralph Lord Musard, dyed seised of the manor of Staveley wthout issue, temp. Edw. I. Matilda his wife survived, & releases to Nicholas Musard all her right of dower in the manor of Staveley, 23 Edw. I. 1295." Frechev. Evid. p. 13.

[p] It is scarcely necessary to warn those who refer to the pedigree of Musard entered in a Visitation of Derbyshire, MS. Harl. 1537, f. 57 b (in which John is made son of Nicholas) that it exhibits only a mass of error.

In the Parliamentary Writs, vol. i. Matilda Musard is returned as holding lands, &c. in co. Glouc. to the amount of 40*l.* yearly, and is summoned to perform military service against the Scots, 28 Edw. I. 1300.

(22.) The Inquisition taken 15 Edw. I. to prove the age of this John Musard (then in the King's ward by reason of his minority) is exceedingly curious; the evidence given on the occasion is subjoined from the original preserved in the Record Office in the Tower, and may serve as a specimen of these Inquisitions ad proband. ætat. (many of which exist) which, if collected together, and printed, would supply a large fund of valuable historical and genealogical information. The writ to the Sheriff of Glouc. is dated at Westm. 18 May, 15 Edw. I. and directs a Jury to be assembled before Will. de Saham and John de Metingham, to prove the age of the said John, son and heir of Rad. Musard.

(25.) A writ was issued to the Sheriff of Gloucestersh. dat. 1st Feb. 28 Edw. I. (1300) to seize the manor of Seynesbury, formerly held by Nicholas Musard of the King in capite, on account of Malcolm Musard having taken possession of it without licence. An Inquisition was taken thereon, 1 March the same year, and the Jury return that the manor is worth 15*l.* and held in cap. by the quarter part of one knight's fee. Inq. 28 Edw. I. n. 22.

In the Parl. Writs, Malcolm Musard, Lord of Seynsbury, is returned as holding lands to the amount of 20*l.* yearly, and summoned as such to perform military service against the Scots. Muster at Carlisle, 24 June, 28 Edw. I.

"Know all present and future, &c. that I Malcolm Musard, son of Nich. Musard, lord of Seynesbury, have given, &c. to God and the church of the blessed Mary and St. Egwin, and to John abbot of Evesham, &c. all my manor of Seynesbury, co. Glouc. with the advowson of the church of the same manor, &c. which Maud, the lady of Sodintone, holds in the same manor, in the name of dower, &c. To have and hold the aforesaid, by the service of a quarter part of a knight's fee," &c. (no date). MS. Add. 6697, p. 439.

(26.) "Be it known to all people, &c. that I John, son of Malcolm Musard, have remised, released, &c. to William abbot of Evesham and to the convent of the same place, all my right and claim in the manor of Seynesbury, &c. Dat. at Evesham, on Monday next after the feast of Pope Gregory, 7 Edw. III." MS. Add. 6697, p. 441.

This release was repeated by the same John in a deed dated 23 Edw. III. Ib. p. 442. See Dugd. Warwicksh. p. 621. ed. 1656.

In the Cotton collection of original charters, occurs a release from John "filius et heres Malculmi Musard," to Will. abbot of Evesham, of his right in the manor of Wytheleye, co. Warw.

and in all the lands and tenements which Malcolm his father had of the gift of Nich. de Kyngeleye, in Kyngeleye, &c. Dat. die Ven. px. p. Epiph. 23 Edw. III. A seal of dark wax is suspended to the deed, bearing a small shield (defaced) surmounted by a helmet, over which, as a crest, is a ram's head, the horns of which form a hoop, from which hangs a bell. Around are the words: S. IOH'IS MVSARD.

(27.) "Omnibus, &c. Amicia quondam uxor Ancheri de Freschenvile, sal. Noveritis me charitatis intuitu in legit. viduit. mea dedisse, &c. in lib. elemos. deo et eccl. S. Trin. de Gratia Dei, et sanctimonialib. ibid. deo servient. et in perpet. pro anima mea servitur. et animab. (no date.) St. Lo Kniveton's Coll. MS. Harl. 3875, f. 21. See No. (30.)

"Prior de Cheleford [Shelford, co. Nott.] summ. fuit ad resp. Amicie, que fuit ux. Ancheri de Frecheuill, de placito, quod permittat ipsam presentare idon. person. ad medietat. eccl. de Athelwaldeston, &c. Unde dicit, quod quidam Will. fil. Rad. antecessor predicti Ancheri, temp. Joh. Regis, ultimo presentavit ad pred. eccl. &c. Et post mort. pred. Ankeri, D'n's Rex, capitalis D'n's feodi illius, assignavit pred. Amicie manor de Athelwaldeston in dotem, ad quod pred. advocatio pertinet," &c. Plac. de Banco, 4 Edw. I. t. Trin. r. 29 dors.

The period of her death is uncertain; but she was dead before her brother Nicholas, 29 Edw. I. when her son Ralph de Frecheville inherited in her right (as coheiress) one-third part of the manor of Staveley. See Nos. (23) and (30).

(28.) The escheat which states Margaret (not Margery, as erroneously written by Mr. Wolley) to have been 50 years of age in 29 Edw. I. 1300, and to have succeeded to one-third part of Staveley on the death of her brother Nicholas without legitimate heirs, has been already quoted, No. (23.)

"Amicia [Musard] cepit in virum Ankerum de Freschevile, temp. Hen. III. et habuerunt exitum Rad. de Freschevile. Amicia Ankerum supervixit. Margareta cepit in virum Johannem de Hibernia, et habuerunt exitum Johannem." Frecheville Evid. p. 9.

The above Margaret died 2 Edw. II. as proved by the Inquisition taken at Staveley 10th Oct. in that year (the writ was dated 13 Sept.) when it was found that she held one-third part of the manor of Staveley of the King in capite, by service of one-third part of a knight's fee. Value 6*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* The Jurors also say, that "Johannes filius Johannis est fil. ejusdem Margarete et propinquior heres ejus, et est et. 36 ann." Esc. 2 Edw. II. n. 10.

Thoroton (erroneously) marries this Margaret to her nephew Ralph de Frecheville, and it is so falsely stated in a Pedigree in MS. Harl. 1093, f. 48 b.

Her husband seems to have died in the reign of Edw. I. for in 1 Edw. II. 1307, she is termed "vidua." Frech. Evid. p. 18.

(29.) "Johannes fil. Joh. de Hibern. vendidit D'no Rad. de Freschevile totum boscum suum porcionis suæ de Staveley, &c. à die fest. S. Petri apostoli 1314, usq. ad fest. S. Joh. Bapt. pr. seq. &c." Frech. Evid. p. 18.

The same person, called "sone and heire of Margaret Musard," releases unto Will. Dolfin of Plumley, &c. certain rents, &c. due to him for lands in Hanley, 8 Edw. II. Ib. p. 20.

An Inquisition was taken at Staveley, 9 Edw. II. by the oaths of, &c. who say, it is not to the prejudice of our lord the King, if John de Hybern' give and grant to Ralph de Freischevile, the third part of the manor of Staveley, with the third part of the advowson of the church of the said manor, &c. held of the King in cap.; that the said third part of the manor is worth yearly 4*l.* and that the church is worth 6 marks yearly in all its issues, and that the said John had no other lands in England. MS. Add. 6697, p. 56.

A licence of alienation passed accordingly, bearing same date. Frech. Evid. p. 21, and the release was granted two years afterward, 11 Edw. II. Ib. p. 22.

Concerning this one-third part of the church of Staveley, and the other two-third parts, as divided on the death of Nich. Musard, some curious information is contained in a plea of Quare impedit, in 1325, 19 Edw. II. here abbreviated.

"Joh'es de Crumbwell et Idonea ux. ej. summ. fuerunt ad respond. Rad'o de Freshenvill et Margaretæ ux. ej. de placito, quod permittant eos præsentare idoneum personam ad mediet. eccl. de Stavely, quæ vacat, &c. The defendants deny the right, and allege:

The Baron's great seal remains attached, on a closely plaited cord of green and pink silk. It is of green wax, and round, of 4 inches diameter; but the engraving is somewhat singular in form, being on each side comprised in a quatrefoil, at the interstices of which are holes formed by the pins by which the two sides of the matrix were duly adjusted. Within the lines of the quatrefoil runs on either side the same inscription: SIGILLVM IOHANNIS DE MOVBRAY. On one side the Baron is represented on horseback, holding a shield before him, which is charged with a lion rampant, and the same bearing is placed twice on the housings of his charger, on the neck and on the haunches. In his right hand, extended at full length, he brandishes a long sword, the hilt of which is attached by a chain to his breast. The loose sleeve of his mail shirt is remarkable; as is the cross-barred vizor of his helmet. It is pretty plain that he has a lion statant for his crest; but a large stag's horn, or antler, also projects from the front of the helmet: the impression is not perfect at the back of his head, where a corresponding antler in all probability was placed, in the fashion of the German crests. The reverse of the seal is quite as remarkable for the contrivance and the elegant taste with which the armorial insignia are arranged. In the centre is a large shield of the lion rampant; above which is a feathered serpent or cockatrice, with extended wings; and below is the more ordinary dragon. On either side, in the situation of modern supporters, are the heads and mail-shirted arms of two figures bearing banners; the dexter one of which is charged with the three chevrons of Clare, in allusion to the Baron's grandmother Rose, daughter of Richard Earl of Gloucester and Hertford; and the other with the lion and crosslets of Braose, in token of his mother Aliva, daughter and heiress of William de Braose or Brewes, through whom he had inherited the great fees of Gower and Bramber. A more pleasing device of the times antecedent to the practice of quartering arms, can scarcely be found. It is at the same time worthy of remark, that at the period this seal was designed no plan had suggested itself for introducing the armorial insignia of a wife; for we find nothing allusive to the Baron's own marriage, though his alliance was still more illustrious than those of his predecessors. His wife was one of the blood royal,—the Lady Joan of Lancaster, granddaughter of King Henry the Third. They were married some years before the date of this charter; their son and heir having been born in 1326. The Lord Mowbray of the present charter was grandfather of the first Duke of Norfolk of the name. Having been summoned to Parliament for the first thirty-four years of the reign of Edward the First, he died of the pestilence, at York, in the year 1362.

MS. Cole, vol. i. p. 5. He gives rude drawings of the south side of the Church and of the two large Alington Monuments.

Aug. 12 to 16, 1742.

This is a neat small Church, without any side isles, & has a thin high tower, built chiefly of flint plaister'd over with mortar, as is the rest of the Church, with a pretty chancel, in wch are several monuments, & some of them of great antiquity.[a] This is divided from the body of the Church by a sort of wooden screen, and over it are the Royal Arms.[b] The chancel is tiled, as are the 2 porches of the nave, the north of wch serves by way of vestry, & has its outward entrance bricked up. There are 5 bells in the tower.[c] The body of the Church is leaded & handsomely embattled wth brick, as is the tower. There are in the chancel on each side of the wall, without the rails of the altar, two very noble monumts for the antient family of the Allingtons, formerly Lords of the Manor. That on the south side is the more antient one, so [I] will begin with that. It is entirely of stone, handsomely painted and gilt; and on the ground floor, if I may be allowed the expression, between 6 Gothic fluted pillars, lies a man in compleat armour, in a praying posture, wth his head on his helmet, his sword by his side, & a dog Ermine at his feet, wch is the crest of the Allington family. On his right hand, against the wall, are 2 shields with these arms on them, carved & blasoned in stone. That at the knees has 1st Sable, a bend engrailed between 6 billets Argent, wch is the coat armour of Allington; 2d. Gules, 3 cups Argent, for Argentine; 3d. Azure,

[a] Mr. Cole notes elsewhere, that it is "a Rectory, and dedicated to All Saints, and is in the patronage of the Charter House." The church appears to have been built towards the end of the 14th or beginning of the 15th century.

6 martlets Or wth a canton Ermine, for [Fitz Tek, or Fitz Tecon]; [d] the 4th as the 1st. The other at the hands is parted per pale, Baron & Femme. The 4 first as the former for Allington, ye 2^d^ Parted per fess Argent & Sable, a pale Counterchanged, & 3 goat's [e] heads erased, of the 1st, for Gardener. On the rim of the middle floor is this inscription in capital letters:

Over this, on a flat stone, supported by 6 of the same sort of pillars I mentioned before, lies another person in the same attitude, & exactly like the other, except that the last seems much older than the former. At the feet, withinside of the canopy wch is over this figure, the which canopy [h] is supported by the aforesaid thick pillars painted & gilt, are 2 small shields, one for Allington, the other for Drury, viz. Argent, on a chiefe Vert 2 mullets Or. On a shield on the south rim within the canopy having 2 on each side of it quite plain, are the following bearings, viz. party per pale Baron & Femme, Or, on a fess between [f] He desires, in his will, to be buried in the priory of Wymondley, co. Herts, founded by his ancestors, and leaves two standing cups and covers, received for service done at the coronations of Henry VIIIth and Elizabeth, to his son Giles; whose 'marriage' he desires his executors to 'sell,' 'so that he be married without disparagement.' The coronation service was performed by the Argentines and Alingtons, as Lords of Wymondley, till the death of Giles Lord Alington in 1691. Of the three coheirs, nieces of Hildebrand, and sisters of Giles, only two have left surviving issue. The co-representation of the eldest is in Earl Howe and the Marquess of Sligo; of the youngest in H. C. Sturt, Esq. of Critchill, M. P. for Dorset. This property descended in uninterrupted lineal succession for the period of six centuries and a half, from the conquest until its alienation.

[g] He was Lord Mayor of London in 1478, and married Audrey, dau. of William Cotton of Lanwade, who remarried Sir Gilbert Talbot, of Grafton. Vincent's Camb. 131. His daughter, Lady Alington, was buried in 1541, at Westley, co. Camb. See Cole, vol. 18, p. 103.

three ravens regardant Sable, a garb between two crosses patriarchal & fitched at the bottom, of the 1st, for Tallakarne, wth a crescent Gules for difference. 2d. These 4 coats for Allington, (wch, by ye by, I conceive should have been first,) 1st his own, proper: 2d Argentine: 3d ye 6 martlets & canton, for [Fitz-Tec]: 4th Gardener.[i] On the large rim over the pillars is this inscription in capitals.

"Sir Gyles Alington, Knighte, sonne and heyre of Sir Gyles Alington, Knight, died 22o Augusti, Ano 1586, and in the year of his age 86.[j] He first married Ursula, daughter of Sir Robert Drury, Knighte,[k] & by her had issue Robert. Secondly he maried Alice, daughter & heyre of John Midleton, Esquier, before wife of Thomas Elrington, Esquier,[l] and by her had issue Thomas, Richard, William, Philip, Anne, Fraunces, Elizabeth, Jane, & Margaret. And thirdly he maried Margaret, daughter of John Tallakarne, Esquier,[m] before wife of Thomas Argall, Esquier, & had by her no issue."

On the front of the canopy are 3 pretty large shields for his 3 wives, impaled with his own, thus: towards the feet, the 4 last blason'd for himself with Drury impaled; 2dly, & in the middle, his own impaled with Midleton; viz. Argent, fretty Sable wth a canton of the Last. Thirdly, towards the head, his own again impaling Tallakarne. Over the 3 I last blason'd are his own in a shield by themselves & pretty large, wth his crest, viz. a dog passant Ermine.[n] Over all these a harpy with wings expanded & gilt, wch finishes a sort of pyramid, & has a good effect. The rim at the feet has this inscription on it.

[j] It would appear that his father was not interred at Wymondley, or that his body was removed on the dissolution of monasteries; for this Sir Giles, in his will, desires to be buried in the chancel at Horseheath, near his wife Alice, and a tomb to be erected on the wall near the place, describing his marriage, issue, &c.; and also a stone to be placed on the grave of his father, Sir Giles, similarly inscribed. This south monument was therefore erected by his executors. Amongst his bequests of plate, he mentions "a deep basin of silver, commonly used by me to wash after oisters, & before dinner," and a "standing cuppe wherein I most commonly drincke sack." He urges his friend Lord Burleigh to press a marriage between his "young nephew," sc. his great-grandson Giles, and the daughter of his (Lord Burleigh's) son, and which ultimately took place. There was already a connection between the families, Sir Giles's brother and Lord Burleigh having married the two sisters of Sir John Cheke.

"Robert Alington, Esquier, sonne & here apparant of Sir Gyles Alington, Knight, died 22o Maii Ano 1552. He maried Margaret the daughter of William Coniesbye,[o] one of the Judges of the Law, and by her had issue John, Gyles, James, George, Alice, Anne, Margaret, Elizabeth, Fraunceys, & Beatrix."

Above this in the midst of a smaller pyramid are the following arms in one escutcheon, viz. the 4 quarterings of Allington impaling Coniesbye, viz. Gules, a crescent between 3 conies couchant Argent, a bordure engrailed Sable. At the head of the abovementioned rim is the following inscription:—

"Gyles Alington, Esquier, sonne & heyre of Robert Alington, Esquier, and heyre apparent unto Sir Gyles Alington, Knighte, died 25o Novembris Ano 1573. He maried Margaret, daughter of Sir John Spencer, Knight,[p] and by her had issue Gyles, John, & Margaret; which Gyles last named, beinge great-grandchild unto the said Sir Gyles, was also at his decease his next heyre."

Over this, in the same form as at the feet, are the following arms, viz. the 4 usual quarterings for Allington, impaling 4 quarterings for Spencer, thus: 1st. Party per cross Argent & Gules, in the 3d & 4th [q] quarters a fret Or, on a bend Sable 3 escallop shells of the 1st, for Spencer proper; 2d. Ermine, five Bezants on a chevron Gules, for [Grant]; 3d. wch is as perfect & intire as if it was put up but yesterday. Just at the foot of this monument is a hole in the wall for the Holy Water, & fronting of it on the east well hangs up an old atchievement for a Lord Allington; but the damps of the wall have so damaged it that I can't make out the bearings in it.[r]

Here follows a description of the opposite monument of Sir Giles Alington and his wife Lady Dorothy Cecil; but as this is "more exactly" (as Cole says) and certainly more interestingly described by him in a letter to Horace Walpole, it is thought preferable to print the latter.

MS. Cole, vol. xxx. p. 229.

For the Honbe Horace Walpole in Arlington Street, Westminster.

Dear Sir, Blecheley, Dec. 1, 1763.

After I left Strawberry Hill, I staid in Cambridgeshire near 3 weeks; & tho I have been returned near as long to this place, yet I could not prevail with myself to sit down close to my business till now, from an indolence of disposition, & enjoyment of myself & fire-side, after so long a ramble.

The first thing I did when I got to Horseth was, to go to the Church, & take as exact a draught of the monument of your great-grandmother as I could;[s] the which I have now copied out on this paper from my rough awkward notes: however, such as it is, it will serve to give you some idea of the monument, which I was glad to find wanted no reparation; the late Lord Montfort, at my repeated request, having just before his death ordered it to be repaired. I will now give you a very minute description of it.

On the north side of the chancel of Horseth Church, on the steps of the altar, is erected against the wall a very noble monument of various-coloured marble and alabaster. On the altar part lie 2 complete figures in alabaster, of a Knight in armour, nearest the wall, with a stiffened collar about his neck, his head on a cushion, & a talbot at his feet. His lady has a ruff about her neck, her hair nicely dressed out, & her head lying on 2 cushions, with the Cecil crest of a garb between 2 lyons rampant at her feet. Her clothes are painted black, & his armour painted & gilt,[t] & both figures in a recumbent supplicating posture, very well executed for the age they were done in. On the side & ends of the tomb are the statues of 10 children in marble on their knees, painted & gilt. At the head are 2 females, full grown, & a child. On the front are 6, 3 men & 3 women. The 1st son in armour, & a death's head by him;[u] the 2 others in short cloakes, & the 3 ladies in stiffened collars, hair dressed out, with farthingales; at the foot is a child with a death's head in its hand, a female. All the children's habits are painted black. Above this tomb is erected against the wall a sort of canopy, supported by 2 black marble Corinthian pillars: the whole richly painted, carved, & gilt. On the top, under a death's head with gilded wings, & between 2 pyramidal obelisks of white marble, is a round figure which surrounds a shield of 6 quarters for Allington.

These, as drawn in the Church Notes, are, 1. Alington; 2. Argentine: 3. Fitz Tek; 4. Gardener; 5. Midleton[x]; and 6. Alington.

On the helmet above it is placed the crest, viz. a Talbot passant Ermine. Immediately under this coat, on a freize, is another plain sheild having the 6 coats of Allington impaling the single coat of Cecil. On the said freize, & on each side of the first-named coat of Allington, near the 2 obelisks, are also 2 other coats in ornamented shields; that on the right hand has the 6 quarters of Allington singly; and on the other side the 6 quarters of Cecil Earl of Exeter.

These, as drawn in the Church Notes, are, 1. Cecil; 2. Party per pale Azure and Gules, a lion ramp. Argent, holding a [tree uprooted Proper] for [Winston]; 3. Sa. a Plate between 3 towers Argent for [Carlion]; 4. Argent, on a bend cotised Gules 3 roses Or, for Heckinton; 5. Argent, a chevron between 3 chess rooks Ermine, for Walcot; 6 Cecil.

[t] "The paint and gilding are almost entirely obliterated; the figures were so covered with green mould that, in removing the latter, but little was left of the former; four of the children were composed of clunch stone, and were so mutilated as not to be worth preserving." Inf. Inc.

[y] There is an admirable portrait of him by Cornelius Janssen, from which the engraving in Lodge's Lives of the Cæsars was made, now in the possession of H. L. Long, Esq. of Hampton Lodge, Surrey, descended from Catharine the fourth daughter.

[z] Sir Giles did penance at Paul's Cross, and at St. Mary's, Cambridge, in 1631, besides being fined £12,000, by sentence of the Archbishop and the High Commission Court, for having married his niece. Much error has arisen on this subject. Clutterbuck, in his History of Herts, makes the son Giles, who died at twelve years of age, a knight, and attributes the penance to him, besides giving him issue of the marriage. Lodge, in his Lives of the Cæsars, does the same, stating that he had three children. The facts, which have been established by the researches of C. G. Young, Esq. York Herald, are as follow:

Sir Giles was married 2dly Dec. 2, 1630, at West Wratting (the seat of her father) to Dorothy, daughter of Michael Dalton, the eminent lawyer. Her mother was Mary, the daughter of Edward Elrington, Esq. by Margaret, the daughter of Sir John Spencer, and relict of Sir Giles Alington's father. She was therefore niece only by the half-blood; and they seem to have dealt him somewhat hard measure. His children were all, as is shown by the monument and register, the issue of the first marriage.

At the foot of this monument, on the N. wall hangs a fresh atchievem^{t} with these arms on it, viz. Argent, on a bend Sable 3 eaglets Or [for Ernle]; impaling the single coat of Allington.[c] Directly fronting this monument, on the N. side of the E. window, hangs an old atchievem^{t} for a Lady Allington. Over the monument hang a couple of penons for the same family.[d] Betw^{n} these 2 noble monuments, & at the feet of the rails of the altar, in the middle, lays a stone of very great antiquity, having a person in brass in compleat armour,[e] in a supplicant posture on it, wth a dog at his feet, wch makes me conclude that it belongs to some of the Allington family; but for whom particularly it is impossible to determine; for almost all the rest of the brass work, except the figure itself, wth a gothic sort of angel supporting a canopy over the head of the person on ye left side, & part of the label on the same side, wch formerly surrounded the whole stone, is torn away & lost. What remains on ye part of ye label wch is preserved is in French, wch alone proves its antiquity, & is no more y^{n} this in old characters: "De Novemb' L'An De l' Incarnacioñ." The rest is gone, as are the 2 escutcheons that were formerly on each side of his head. On the right side of this marble is a freestone monum^{t}, but without either brass or inscription. On the S. side at the foot of the great monument, directly under the hole in the wall for the water, lies, out of its place, a curious old peice of carved grey marble of seeming great antiquity.[g] These monuments are divided off from the rest of the chancel by an iron rail to preserve them; & on each side of the door of these rails, as you ascend this part of the chancel, are the crests of the Allingtons & the Cecils; wch discover that it was divided by that Sir Giles Allington who lies buried on the north side. Without these rails, on the S. side by the chancel door, lies a blewish marble slab, with a figure of a priest in his sacerdotal habit, with a label coming frō his mouth, & an inscription at his feet, the brass of wch is torn away, so we can only conjecture that it belongs to some former rector of this parish, some hundred years since. Immediately as you enter the chancel lies an old grey marble slab wth ye arms of Allington on each side of the head still remaining; that on the left side impales some other, but it lying so under every body's feet, that it is now not intelligible; and in the middle of the stone lie 2 personages, a man & a woman; he in armour, & at their feet a plate for an inscription: all wch is gone, except the 2 aforsd escutcheons wch have this particular to them, that they have each 10 billets wth ye bend.[h] Directly at the foot of this lies another blewish marble slab[i] of so much the same dimensions as the other, viz. abt 7 feet long, having a man on it in brass, compleat except the head, in a lawyer's habit. The brass for the inscription at the feet is torn away, but the arms on the left side sufficiently demonstrate to whom it belongs. That on the right side has the 4 usual quarterings for Allington, with this difference, however, that the bend is between 12 billets, wth a label of 3 points for difference. On the other side the same 4 quarterings impaling Coniesbye; wch informs us that it belongs to Robert Allington, son of Sir Giles, who died in 1552,[k] & of whom mention is made at the foot of the great south tomb. Under the north wall, & close to the rails wch divide the chancel, lies an exceeding antient stone, wch formerly had the figure of a woman on it, but now nothing remains but the brass at the feet of her, wch is quite plain & legible, being so near the wall, that no feet could come very well at it to damage it; it has this inscription in old characters:

"Hic jacet Johaña Alyngton soror et una heredū Johis Argentein, filii Johis filii Wilłm Argentein militis que obiit xvo die Maij Ao Dñi Mo CCCCo xxixo."[1]

On a part of the brass label wch formerly surrounded it, are still these words remaining in Gothic letters: "Ut misericordia et...." Directly over this is a good neat mural monumt of stone, for one of the Rectors of this parish, carv'd, &, for the time, handsomely painted & gilt. Over the inscription is a Gothic sort of pyramidal stone work, & on each side of it 2 large Church Bibles in stone, painted & gilt also: in the middle is this inscription in gold letters on a peice of black marble:

"Depositū Thomæ Wakefield 37 annos Ecclie hujus Rectoris, nec non Judithæ uxoris ejus, quibus parentavit Filius Thomas, qui patri in hac Rectoria successit. Ao Dñi 1627."

On the same wall, & very near this last to the west, is another neat mural monument of black & white marble, for another of the Rectors of this Church, and on a peice of black marble this inscription:

"M. S. Here under interr'd lieth the body of William Eedes, A.M. late Rector of this parish of Horseheathe, who departed this life the 23d day of April, Anno Dom̄ 1709, aged 68."

Over it are 3 white marble urnes with gilt flames: one larger & 2 smaller on each side of it. Close by this hangs a sword & buckler of the late John Bromley, Esq. Lord of the manor;[m] the sword in a scabbard of black velvet, & on the buckler the Bromley's arms, viz. Quarterly per fess dancetté Gules & Or, with an escutcheon of pretence over it, viz. paling Azure, 3 crosses potent in bend Or, for [White], 2d Bromley, 3d and 4th in lozenges as the 1st.

There is nothing particular in the window of the chancel; but in the very top of the window are these arms in painted glass: Checquey Argent & Sable [perhaps Brooke],[n] impaling Gules, fretty Or, in a bordure Argent, semeé de fleurs de lys Sable [for Audley].[o] Under this window is a way broke in the wall for the entrance into the burial dormitory of the family of the Rt Honble the Lord Montfort, Baron of Horseheath. The dormitory itself being built up of brick on the outside of the chancel. Several personages of that noble family lie interred there.[p] The roof of the chancel is handsomely vaulted & white-washed, & has several ornaments of fleurs de lis & roses on it, in stucco. Over the S. window of the chancel, wch has no painted glass in it, hang six penons[q] for the Bromley family. The 2 first Bromley, with the escutcheon of pretence; the 3d & 4th Bromley impaling Bromley; the 5th & 6th the same as the two last on the opposite side. The chancel, as I said before, is divided from the body of the church by a wooden screen; over wch are the King's arms, and over them 1721, and on each side G.R. & under them, "Fear God and honour the King." In the middle isle of the church lays a pretty large grey marble slab, wth an inlet for a small brass inscription, wch is lost. Besides this, there are no other monuments in the body of the church which I can discover, the whole being, I suppose, when the church was last beautified, newly layed wth brick. However, that there were other stones in the church is plain, from a brass inscription now in the possession of the present worthy rector of this parish, I mean the Revd Mr Barker, who did me the favor to lend it me;[r] but upon strict examination in every part of the church, could find no stone that had an inlet to fit it. There are the following verses on the brass in old letters:

[o] The "Topographer" says a fleur-de-lys and trefoil alternately, but it is not so.

In the middle of the pannel of the lower division of the 1st N. side window is a compleat large picture, except the head, of the Blessed Virgin, wth these Gothic letters at her feet: "Sca Maria." There are yet remaining in almost all the 5 pannels of this window, though a good deal broke, pictures taken from some stories out of the New Testament, & particularly one of the Last Supper, wch is pretty perfect.[t] In this, as indeed in most of the other windows of the nave (sometimes one, sometimes two in a window) are 2 very neat shields, with these arms in painted glass, viz. The pulpit cloth & altar ornaments being of a purple cloth, with a silk fringe of the same colour. There are in the next window several pretty large pictures of saints, but the upper parts of them chiefly demolished; I suppose at their general destruction through this county by that enthusiastical fanatic, whose diary of such barbarity was published by Dr Zachary Grey. At the bottom of the middle pannel of the lower division of this window are these arms, viz.

Baron & Femme, 1st the 4 usual bearings of Allington, I suppose, tho' the 3d & 4th quarters are broken, & filled up with other glass, & only the 1st & 2d are remaining, viz. Allington wth 12 billets, & Argentine; impaling barry of 6 or 8 Ermine & Gules [? Husee]. Over the north door is the creed painted within a frame of a yellow colour, of festoons of flowers & fruits, wth angels supporting them, & at the bottom is this Greek inscription:

Ἐπιθυμοῦσιν Ἄγγελοι παρακύψαι.—1 St. Peter, i. 12.

In the last N. window, next the bellfry, are the same arms as before, & the remains of two broken saints. In the 1st S. window is one of the same coats of arms, with some old painting on glass. Betwn this & the next window in the wall is fixed, painted & carved on stone, Gardener impaling Argent, a chevron betwn 3 griffon's heads Or. But I fancy it is blazon'd wrong, when the church was new painted; for in the next window are the same arms, but thus blason'd: Baron & Femme, 1st Gardener, impaling Sable, a chevron betwn 3 griffon's heads Argent, for Cotton.[x] In this window is also another of the foregoing arms. Over the S. door is the Lord's Prayer, painted in the same manner as the Creed opposite to it. In the 3d and last window of this side, is neither painted glass, nor arms. The whole church is neatly adorned with texts of Scripture, surrounded with festoons of fruits and flowers, &c. painted in yellow, with angels in various attitudes supporting them: & on the wall on each side of the screen wch divides the nave and the chancel, are the 10 Commandmts, done in the same manner. The Font, wch has nothing remarkable in it, stands under the gallery wch is erected at the W. end of ye church agst ye bellfry, for the use of the Singers. Over the great arch of the bellfry in a sort of frame, painted as the rest of the church, is this written, "Repaired & beautified, Año Domini 1721, John Slaney & Joseph Wakefield, Church Wardens."[z]

In the midst of the oak roof of the nave are the arms of the kingdom of the East Angles, or as I should conclude them to be, those of the Bishopric of Ely, being in that diocese, viz. 3 ducal coronets. [Gules, 3 ducal crowns Or.] Over the S. porch is a stone cross, but before it, so as in a manner quite to cover it, is

In a pediment, above one of the offices near ye place where the bell hangs wch rings for dinner, &c. adjoyning to the noble house of the R^t Honb^le Henry Bromley, Lord Montfort, is this inscription on a board y^t fitts ye place:

"This bell was brought over from the seige of Bulloyne in the kingdome of France, by Giles Alington, Esq. Master of the Ordinance in the thirty-seventh Yeare of Henry the Eight, Año Domini 1546."

Continuation of the Church Notes, from vol. vii. p. 169.

Being at the Right Honorable ye Lord Montfort's ye beginning of Oct. 1745, I walk'd down to ye church, & made ye following remarks, unobserved by me before, or at least not regarded.

Mr. Cole here gives rude drawings of the north side of the church, and of the brasses of Sir John de Argentine and Robert Alington, with a second description of them; to repeat which would be superfluous. He then continues,

In ye chancel ag^st the E. wall hang 2 old atchievements, ye 1st for a Lord Alington wth these arms, viz. Q^ly of 6, 1st Alington; 2^d Gules a bend S. if the colours are not changed, as I suspect, for [Burgh, viz. Gules, on a bend Argent 3 leopard's faces Sable], 3^d Argentine; 4th B. 6 martlets Or, wth a canton Erm. for [Fitz Tec]; 5th Gardener; 6th A. fretty, a canton S. for Middleton; impaling Q^ly of 6: 1st Russel; 2^d Az. a castle Arg^t. [De la Tour]; 3^d Or, 3 bars Gules [Muschamp]; 4th Gules, 3 fish hauriant in fess Arg^t [Heringant]; 5th S. 3 chevrons Ermine [Wise]; 6th S. 3 castles Argent [Sabcotts]. On it a Baron's coronet & supporters of Allington, and motto, "En Dieu est tout."[b] On ye other, these arms in a lozenge, & a Baroness's coronet, viz. 1st Q^r, Allington; 2^d Gules, a bend Argent [Burgh, as before]; 3^d Argentine; 4th Gardener; impaling 4 coats, 1st & 2^d so decayed by damp that nothing is left; 3^d S. Here follow some extracts from the Register, which, with the exception of the following, are printed in the Topographer, vol. ii. p. 377.

Burials.—1638. Dec. 23. Sir Giles Alington, Knt.
1648. Oct. 25. Will. Lord Alington.
1659. Mar. 20. Giles, Lord Alington
1662. Dec. 4. Catharine Lady Alington.
1666. Mar. 24. Mrs. Diana Alington.
1703. Oct. 29. Mrs. Alington.
1703. Dec. 24, ob. Dec. 13. Diana Lady Alington.

The exact date of the baptism of Catharine, dau. of Sir Giles and Lady Dorothy, is omitted in the extracts given in the Topographer. It was Dec. 5, 1608, according to the Register.

In the dormitory belonging to ye family of the R^{t} Honb^{le} ye Lord Montford, on the N. side of the chancel, are 4 coffins at ye E. end; all of them covered with black velvet. On ye 1st to the S. next ye wall, wch is a very large one, are these arms: Bromley, with an escutcheon of pretence, a griffon saliant for [part of the Bromley coat]. Underneath, on a plate is engraved this inscription: "The body of the Hon. John Bromley, Esq. who departed this Life Octob. 7 1707, in ye 56 year of his age."

This was my Lord Montford's grandfather, who purchased this estate of ye last Lord Allington, who built ye noble seat in this parish at a vast expence. This Lord Allington lies buried at Wethersfield church in Suffolk, according to his own desire (vide vol. v. p. 128).[e] The said John Bromley was one of ye members for this county at ye time of his decease.

On ye 2^{d} coffin close to it, wch is smaller, is this inscription on a plate: "M^{rs}. Dorothy Bromley died July ye 14, 1709, aged 60 years."

[e] It was William the 2d Lord Alington who built the house in 1665. Hildebrand the last Lord Alington his brother, was buried at Wetherfield. See in Cole, vol. v. p. 128, the Mon. Insc. of Sir John Jacob of Gamlingay, which states that he was executor to his uncle, Hildebrand Lord Alington, and buried him in the chapel there by his order. A curious miniature of him on copper, from which Lodge's portrait was engraved, is now in the possession of H. L. Long, Esq.

On ye 3d, wch is a very large one, are ye same arms as before, without ye bordure gobony A. & B. as my Lord bore it before he was created a Peer of England, viz. Bromley, with the escotcheon of pretence: crest as before. The present Lord Montford bore his arms before he was called into the Peerage in this manner; Qly per fess dancette G. & O. a border gobony A. & B. Since he was made a Lord ye Heralds altered ye coat, taking away ye border, wch, as my Lord told me, ye Heralds said was a mark of bastardy, and made it Qly per pale crenelle G. & O. sans bordure, & altered ye crest, making it a mural coronet. But to return to ye said 3d coffin, under ye arms is this inscription on a plate: "John Bromley, Esq. died Octob. 20, 1718, in ye 36 year of his age."

This gentleman was my Lord's father, & was also representative for this county. My Lord was under age when his father died, & his guardians were Samuel Shepherd, Esq. one of ye present members for this county, & Samuel Gatward, Esq. late Recorder of Cambridge. He was at Eton School, & from thence removed to Clare Hall, where he was a Fellow Commoner. On ye 18 of March 1726, he married Miss Frances Windham, by whom he had a daughter Frances, now abt 16 years of age, & a son Thomas, of whom she died in childbed in 1733 in London. The son survived, & is now a fine youth, tho' smalle of his age, of great parts and vivacity, at Eton School. His mother was a little, but very beautifull person. My Lord Montford continues a widower. He was member for ye county, & Lord Lieutenant & Custos Rotulorum for this county also; wch he resigned to ye Earl of Lincoln when he came of age to accept of it. In 17[41] he was made a Peer of England, by his Majesty K. George ye 2d, for his good services to him, & was abt 2 years since made Lord High Steward of ye Corporation of Cambridge.

The 4th coffin has nothing on ye plate, & is a smallish one. I suppose it was for Capt. Bromley, my Lord's uncle, who died here in 1729. In ye Register is also this entry:

"1729. Wm. Bromley, Esq. ob. Nov. 26, buried Nov. 29."

This gentleman died a bachelor, & upwards of 30 yrs of age. He left a natural daughter now married to ye Revd Mr. Challis, nephew to Mrs Harrison of West Wickham, of whom my Lord lately bought ye great tithes of that parish. I have seen a mourn-

Rectors of Horseheath fr' ye Register.

Thomas Wakefield sign'd ye Register, wch begins 1558, but that I take only to be a copy of ye old one, wch he attests, wth the Church Wardens. He died 1627. Thomas, son of ye aforesaid Thomas, was presented by ye Charter House in London, & was inducted ye same month that his father deceased. He died Feb. 4, 1668, and lies buried in this church.

1669. William Eede or Eedes, on ye death of his predecessor, was presented to this Rectory in 1669, wch he held 40 years, dying on ye 23 of April 1709, aged 68. He was an odd kind of man. His wife died at Cambridge, at least was buried in St. Andrew's there, Aug. 8, 1680.

1709. Edward Basset, LL.D. of Trinity College, succeeded, being presented by ye Charter House. His father was a bookseller in London. He built an exceeding good rectorial house fr' ye ground, & made a very good garden on one side of it, at no inconsiderable expence. He is a Justice of the Peace for ye county of Cambridge, & in 1732 he was removed fr this Rectory to that of Balsham, ye neighbouring parish, by ye Charter House, thro' ye interest of my Lord Montford; a living of much greater value: for I heard Mr. Lagden, of Balsham, offer ye Doctor 316 per añ for it; whereas this of Horsheath is a bare 100 pounds per añ. The Dr married a neice of ye Revd Mr. Markham, a non-juror of Abingdon.[f] She was a Presbyterian when ye Dr married her, but by this time I suppose she goes to church. He has two daughters; one a poetess & a woman of genius, whom ye Dr taught Latin & Greek; but all these accomplishments prevented her not marrying ye miller of her town, one Wollard, by whom she has children. The Doctor's other daughter is unmarried. [Added subsequently in a marginal note] She married an apothecary at Linton.

1732. Thomas Rowell, B.D. of Corp. Xti Coll. Camb. was presented to this Rectory by ye aforesaid patrons, & was inducted into it Oct. 28, 1732. He chiefly resided in London, where he had a Lectureship or Curacy; and Mr. Howes, Fellow of Clare Hall, was his Curate here. He died in London in September 1737, where he was buried.

1737. Roger Barker, a Sussex man, bred at ye Charter House, and then removed to Clare Hall, in Camb. where he was made Fellow. In 1736 he was one of ye Moderators of ye University, & examined me for my degree of Bachelor of Arts. In Dec. 1737 he was removed to this Rectory by ye Charter House, where he continues unmarried. He has also ye Curacy of West Wickham just by, wch he serves also. [Added afterwards.] M^r. Barker is now Rector of Castle Camps, & a Bachelor, 1763.

[Philip] Bearcroft, of Oxford, son of D^r. Bearcroft, Master of the Charter House, died at Horseth, about the last week of January 1776, in very bad circumstances, &c.

Here follows an account which, as it casts unnecessary reflections on the mode of life both of the Incumbent and Lord Montford, is omitted.

John Maule, M.A. Chaplain to Greenwich Hospital, presented by the Governors of the Charter House, void by the death of Mr. Bearcroft. See General Ev^g Post, May 30, 1776.

The present Incumbent, the Rev. Thomas Cozens Percival, M.A. formerly Student of Christ Church, Oxford, whose kind attention in replying to several enquiries it would be unpardonable to pass unnoticed, succeeded Mr. Maule, March 3, 1825.

In ye Register is this entry of a benefaction to the parish:

"1613. William Casor, alias Webb, by his last will gave to the poorest of ye parish of Horseheath, to be distributed yearly on Good Friday, ye sum of 6^s. 8^d." [g]

In ye rectory house, in ye staircase window, are work'd into ye other glass 2 old coats, ye 1st ye emblem of ye H. Trinity in S. & A. ye other G. fretty O. ye same, except ye border, as is in ye N. window of ye chancel for Audley.[h]

I suppose when D^r. Basset built this house, he found y^m in ye old one, & so placed them ag^n in ye new rectorial house.

At ye end of ye nave, & by ye S. side of ye chancel by ye walls, is placed a head-stone with this inscription:

"Here lyeth the body of John Offord, jun^r. yeoman, who departed this life, Nov. 28, 1737, æt. 33." [i]

[g] This charity has ceased, according to the following entry in the register, A^o 1612. "Phillipe Webb, who gave 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly on Good Friday for 99 years next after his death to the poorest of this parish, was buried Oct. 4th."

Amongst the Harl. MSS. 980, f. 74, is the following notice of Sir Giles Alington's marriage:

Sir Giles Alington of Cambridgsh maried with the daughter of his sister, viz. Mrs Dorothy Dalton, and being sued for that in the Ecclesiastical Court, prohibition was brought in the Common Pleas & consultation granted, whereupon the hy Commissioners at Lambeth, in Trin. Term 1631, adiudged the mariage unlawfull, & inioyned the parties corporall penance, both at Pawles Cross & at Cambridge, & proposed a fine of 10,000*l.* upon Sir Giles Alington, & 1000*l.* upon Dalton the father.[1]

Lysons states that Dorothy Dalton died in 1644. There is no notice in the register of West Wratting of her interment in that year; or in the years immediately previous or subsequent. Her father was buried there Nov. 19, 1644.

[1] In the same page of this MS. is the following miraculous tale, arising out of a question as to the legality of a marriage between the families of Delaval and Selby. "A weaver in Scotland had by one woman 62 children, all living till they were baptised, of wch ther wer but fower daughters onely who lived till they were women, and 46 sonns, all attaining to man's estate. During the time of this fruitfullnes in the woman, the husband, at her importunity, absented himself from her for the space of 5 years together, serving as a soldier under the command of Captaine Selby in the Low Countries. After his return home his wife was againe delivered of three children at a birth, and so in due time continued in such births till, through bearing, she became impotent. The certainty of this relation I had from John Delavall of Northumb', Esq. who, ann. 1630, rid about 30 miles beyond Edenburrough to see this fruitfull couple, who were both then living. Ther statures and features he described to me then more fully. Ther was not any of the children then abiding with ther parents. Sir John Bowes & 3 other men of qualitie having taken at severall times ten of ther children apeece from them, and brought them up. The rest wer disposed of by the other English & Scottish gents, amongst wch 3 or 4 out of them are now alive & abiding at Newcastle, 1630."

There are two similar cases, though of not quite such incredible fecundity, recorded in the College of Arms. One, the case of Mr. Ricketts, the father of the present Lord St. Vincent, who was the 23d of 27 children of the same mother. The other, a case which occurred in the year 1698, when Thomas Greenhill, surgeon to Henry Duke of Norfolk (son of William Greenhill of Greenhill in Middx. by Elizabeth, daughter of John Jones of London) petitioned the Earl Marshal as follows: "That in consideration of your petitioner being the 7th son & 39th child of one father & mother, your Grace would be pleased to signalize it by some particular remark or augmentation in his coat of Arms, to transmit to posterity so uncommon a thing." The confirmation of the arms contains no reference to the fact.

In the Gentleman's Magazine for Feb. 1743 is recorded the death of Mrs. Agnes Milbourne, who was aged 106, and had 30 children.

SAXON CHARTERS TO THORNEY ABBEY, IN CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

In the Cartulary of Thorney, called "The Red Book," which in the year 1640 was in the possession of Mildmay Earl of Westmoreland, were entered copies of several Saxon Charters, viz. two of King Edgar, three of Æthelred, one of Æthelstan, one of Edmund, one of Eadred, and one of Edwin. The first of these, which is the foundation charter, granted by King Edgar in 973, is printed in the Monasticon, vol. ii. p. 598, new. ed.; the remainder have hitherto not been noticed, and an abstract of them is now first printed from the Add. MS. 5937, f. 178, (a volume of collections made by Strangeman and St. George, temp. Eliz. and Jac. I.) collated with the excerpts in MS. Harl. 258, f. 136 b, and the extracts made by Bishop Kennet, MS. Lansd. 994, f. 100. In the second Charter of Edgar here given, conceded to the abbey the same year as the former one, some repetitions will be obvious, but it was not deemed advisable to omit them. The concluding document is in the form of a Will or bequest, and is curious, from the comparative scarcity of documents of this nature.

land at Cunnington to priests and deacons, who yearned it of me in my life. And they have promised to God, and confirmed to me in hand, that they should each year do for us two hundred masses, and two hundred sauters, and thereto eke many holy prayers. Now pray I you for God's love, and for our wretched request, that no man pervert this; and that shall be made known of you in the life to come. The King of heaven's angels protect you here in life, and lead you in his light with him, where without sorrow ye may ever dwell! Amen.

PEDIGREE OF BARD, OF LINCOLNSHIRE, MIDDLESEX, AND BUCKS, AND VISCOUNT BELLAMONT OF THE KINGDOM OF IRELAND.

The following pedigree is compiled from one in the MS. Addit. (Brit. Mus.) no. 5533, f. 173, entitled "The genealogie or lineal descent of Maximilian Bard, citizen and girdler of London, most part whereof is registred in the visitation of Lincolns: marked G 4, fol. 19, remaining in the Office of Armes, and the rest confirmed by sufficient testimonies. Perused & examined by me Wm Rily Lancaster," and from wills, parish registers, &c.

Maximilian Bard.—The following notices have been collected relative to this personage:

1641, 15 Nov. Ordinance of both Houses empowering Max. Bard and others to take and seize horses; revoked July 25, 1642.

1642, — Sept. Max. Bard appointed by the Lords and Commons to purchase horses for 1000 Dragoons raised to suppress the malignants in Lancashire.

1642, Dec. With other citizens, signed a petition to the House of Commons seeking Col. Lunsford's removal from his post of Lieutenant of the Tower.

1650. Purchased the manor of Pallenswick in Fulham, Surrey.

a She probably died before the Prince, as her name is absent from his will, whilst the mother of his natural daughter Ruperta—Margaret Hewes—is mentioned therein.

b Qu. by second wife? He is not mentioned by his grandfather as son of Thomas by his first wife. Maximilian, Mary, Sarah, and Thomas are so mentioned.

1679, 16 June. Presented to the vicarage of Caversfield.

His epitaph in Caversfield church, on a black marble in the pavement: "Here lyeth the Body of Maximilian Bard, Esquire, who deceased the 16 day of February, in the year of our Lord 1690, in the 85th year of his age."

Sir Henry Bard, Viscount Bellamont. See note in vol. III. p. 18.

Thomas Bard, with his sons Thomas and George, sold the manor of Caversfield, Feb. 3, 1704, to William Vaux.

At Caversfield was a hatchment of Bard impaling Goff, ... Az. and Sa. within a bordure Counterchanged, painted on a lozenge, probably for one of the wives of Thomas Bard. (Willis's Hundred of Buckingham, p. 172.)

Among the Deaths, Gentleman's Magazine, vol. iii. p. 439, occurs:

"1733, Aug. 17, the relict of Sir ——— Bard, Knt. near Watford, in Hertfordshire."

Persiana Bard in her will styles herself "the Right Hon. Dame Persiana Bard, widow." The manor of Pallenswick was sold in 1747, by Henry Laremore, trustee under her will.

TOURNAMENT AT STEPNEY, 2 EDW. II.

The following Roll of Arms is given by Cole in the 47th volume of his MSS. p. 98, &c. His account of the MS. from which he made his copy, is this:

"Mr. Lort, Senior Fellow of Trinity College, in November 1776, lent me a curious MS. of Heraldry in folio, containing 211 pages, having 16 coats of arms on each page. The table of Contents on the other side will explain the design of the book. The arms are all very neatly tricked by an herald, with letters to explain the colours.[a] The leaves are of paper; but the shields are all divided one from the other, and the shields themselves are all printed and filled up by the hand," &c. &c.

"On the first inside cover is this, wrote in a good modern hand: 'This book belonged to Joseph Holland, the Devonshire antiquary, in [a] Cole has coloured them.

Digitized by Google

the year 1578, as appears from a note in the margin of page 97, and probably was transcribed by him.'

"I take it that the book formerly belonged to Mr. George North, Vicar of Codicote, in Hartfordshire, by the few MS. notes added in that county, p. 116, to whom Mr. Lort was executor about 1769."

The table of CONTENTS may be briefly enumerated as follows:

1. Arms of the Nobility and Knights in the reign of Edward I.[b]
2. Arms of Nobility.[c]
3. Arms of the Tilters in the Tournament at Dunstable 2 Edw. II.
4. Arms of the Knights at the siege of Carleverock.[d]
5. An Ordinary of Arms.[e]
6. Arms from the Register of Furnes Abbey.[f]

The heading of this Tournament is incorrect; it should undoubtedly be Stevenhithe, otherwise Stepney, and not Dunstable.

Amongst the tournaments mentioned in the Bibl. Topog. vol. iv. under Dunstable, that of 1279 will be found at p. 114; that of 1301 does not appear; and the one now printed is thus noticed p. 193, "Mr. Cole has the arms of the tilters at a tournament here 1308."

That this was the one held at Stepney is clear from the date. Tyrrell seems to allude to it where he says, that it "was held in London shortly after the coronation, and that the King fearing for his favorite [Gaveston], the Earl of Lancaster and others being of the opposite party, ordered the gates of the city to be shut all day."

Carte distinctly mentions it, and the cause and object of it. "The English nobility meeting, (he says,) on Feb. 28 [1308] in the refectory at Westminster Abbey, made another attempt for removing the favorite, and amending the state of the realm; but they being the only estate then assembled, and the King deferring to give his answer till after Easter, when the Commons, as well as they, were to meet in Parliament, they proclaimed a Tournament at Stivenhithe, in honour of his Majesty's coronation. Gaveston in his turn[g] was afraid of appearing at it; and engaged the King to forbid it; on a suggestion that it was designed for his destruction."

[b] [c] This is nearly the same as Rowe Mores' "Nomina et insignia," &c. published in 1748.

[d] Edited by Sir Harris Nicolas, with Memoirs of the Personages commemorated, in 4to. 1828.

[e] Compiled about the time of Henry VIII. "Lord Fuller, Abbot of Waltham," and some others being mentioned.

[f] Mostly printed, though in a desultory manner, in the Appendix to West's History of Furnes Abbey.

[g] This alludes to Gaveston's tournament at Wallingford, Dec. 2, 1307, where Warren, Hereford, Arundel, and others were foiled in the lists. After this Gaveston proclaimed another at Feversham on the 18th of Feb. 1308; but none of the nobility attended.

It will be observed that the principal persons in this tournament at Stepney were attached to that party opposed to Gaveston, and headed by Thomas Earl of Lancaster and Guy Earl of Warwick. The fate of Lancaster is well known, and some curious discoveries relating to the loss of his military chest in the Dove near Tutbury, appeared in the Archaeologia, vol. XXIV. p. 148. Many of the persons mentioned in this roll perished either in the field or on the scaffold, at Bannockburn or at Boroughbridge. Clare Earl of Gloucester was killed at the former; and Bohun Earl of Hereford, taken prisoner at the former, was killed at the latter. And here we must not omit to notice the hero of our tournament, Sir Giles de Argentein, whose death at Bannockburn "was so displeasant to King Robert for the familiaritie which he had sometime with him in England, that he rejoiced little of all the fame he got by so famous a victorie." The details of his exploits and fate have been celebrated by Scott in his "Lord of the Isles," by whom the materials were drawn from Lord Hailes, Leland, Barbour, &c. He was probably the great-grandson of Sir Reginald de Argentein who fell at Antioch in 1237, and according to M. Paris, like another Witherington, 'indefessus vexillum sustinebat, donec tibiæ cum cruribus et manibus frangerentur.' He was grandson of Sir Richard de Argentein, another Templar, who died in 1246, "qui in terra sancta diu Deo fideliter militaverat."

Sir Giles left no issue, and the line of the Argentines was carried on by his brother, whose descendants are mentioned in an article on Horseheath in the preceding pages of this volume.

There is, among the Cotton MSS. (Otho, D. IV. 92.) but much burnt, and the leaves adhering closely together, a roll of a tournament at Dunstable, in the 7th of Edward III. It is not mentioned by Froissart, Holinshed, or any of the Chroniclers. Fortunately, amongst the Sloane MSS. 1301 (paged 257 in red) is a transcript, but miscalled in the Catalogue Henry III. This will probably be given in the next number.

NOTICES CONCERNING RELIGIOUS HOUSES IN YORKSHIRE, WITH THE NAMES OF THEIR FOUNDERS, AND OF PERSONS BURIED THEREIN.

The manuscript, from which the following Notices are taken, is preserved in the library of the College of Arms, and marked L 8. It belonged originally to John Wrythe, alias Wriothesley, Garter, who died in 1504. It is partly in his handwriting, and partly in that of his son Sir Thomas Wriothesley, who succeeded him as Garter, and lived until 1534. A strict adherence to the spelling of the names has been observed, without any attempt to correct apparent errors.

CHARTERS RELATING TO FINCHALE, CO. DURHAM, AND MATFEN, CO. NORTHUMBERLAND.

The following curious Charters were, some years since, copied from originals in the Treasury of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The first of them is a Grant by Henry the Second of two bovates of land in his manor of Satberg, to the Chapel of Finchale, in the County of Durham: the second a confirmation by Adam Sheriff of Northumberland of a grant which his brother William had made to Saint Cuthbert, for alms and money of the same Saint, of Arkil of Matfen with all his substance, which confirmation he made for the good of his brother's soul, and of his own and their heirs, and with the concurrence of his brothers John and Ernald.

Each of the charters has its seal remaining, and the latter is of the ordinary size of a signet ring, and bears a full-faced human head, covered with a tight caul. To what family Adam the Sheriff of Northumberland belonged I am unable to tell, but wishful to learn. His name does not appear on any of the existing Pipe Rolls for that county; and I should therefore infer that he lived prior to the time of Henry the Second. Odard, who was Sheriff in 1130, was a son of Hildert, who at the same time was Sheriff of Carlisle.

ABSTRACTS OF ORIGINAL CHARTERS IN THE TREASURY OF THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF DURHAM, RESPECTING RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS AND PRIVATE PROPERTY IN NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

Communicated by the Rev. John Hodgson, Vicar of Hartburn, M.R.S.L., Vice-President of the Antiquarian Society of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Fellow of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries at Copenhagen, &c.

The following abstracts were made some years since from original Charters remaining in the Treasury of the Cathedral Church of Durham, and may be found useful, not only in illustrating the topography of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, but in throwing light upon the municipal history of that highly important town, and illustrating the pedigrees of several families, the superstructure of whose influence in society was founded on wealth they accumulated within its walls.

Two of the evidences are given at length in Bourne's History of Newcastle; but are here repeated in a very abstracted form, for the reasons assigned in the notes below them.

1. Seal, a fleur-de-lis; inscription, SIGILL' MILES DAREINES. Date about the latter end of the reign of King John. Number 20 is a grant, probably of the lands conveyed by this deed, from the Master and Brethren of the same Hospital to William de Meneuille.

The family of Dareines, or De Arenis, Of-the-Sands, were, I apprehend, cadets of the great family of Balliol, lords of Bywell St. Peter, in which parish Whittonstal is situated. The difficulty of identifying persons in early times, is plainly shown from the grantee in this deed being described in its premises by one surname, and on its seal by another.

Ralph Kernech was Prior of Durham between 1214 and 1233. Philip de Ulecotes was a favourite of King John, and in great power in the bishoprick of Durham from the death of Philip de Poictou in 1208 till the election of Richard de Marisco to that see in 1214. He was also Sheriff of Northumberland from 1215 to 1219, and mention of him and his heirs is of frequent occurrence on the Northumberland Pipe Rolls. King John gave him West Matfen, Nafferton, and Lourbottle, in that county, besides houses in Newcastle, which had become escheats to the Crown on the death of Sewal Fitz Henry. (See Rot. Hund. Rot. Char. Rot. Claus. &c.)

The chief magistrate of Newcastle is frequently in early charters styled Head Bailiff; but in this deed the style of the bailiffs "his under bailiffs" is unusual, as far as I have observed, and seems to imply that they were mere deputies of the Mayor. This deed is printed at length with a translation in Bourne under 1331; but on what authority he assigns it to that year he does not mention. An original duplicate of the deed of Thomas de Karliolo in 1334, given at p. 193 by the same author, is also in the Treasury at Durham; but it is not to Peter, son of Peter Draper, as in the printed copy, but to Peter, son of Peter Graper, and in this deed the copy of my amanuensis, in the name of the last witness, reads Sapakre, not as in Bourne, Sapakape.

Bourne attributes the charter of Sybilla Gategang, No. 15, to this year, though it is without date, and has not the same bailiffs as this, to which the year is affixed; but Brand says, he found Thomas Daulyn one of the bailiffs in a record of 1331, which agrees with this deed.

HERALDIC CHURCH NOTES, AND EPITAPHS, TAKEN AT VARIOUS PERIODS, IN THE CHURCH OF ST. DUNSTAN'S IN THE WEST, FLEET-STREET; TO WHICH ARE ADDED, EXTRACTS FROM THE PARISH REGISTER.

The following Church Notes are derived from three distinct sources. Of these the most important is the valuable MS. by Nicholas Charles, Lancaster Herald, MS. Lansdowne 874. Some additions are made from Dr. Matthew Hutton's MS., also of the time of James the First, in the Library of the College of Arms, described in vol ii. of this work, p. 91. The last are supplied by a MS. in the possession of Mr. Henry Gwyn, collected by one "Maurice Prior, Servt to Dr Timothy Baldwine Dr of the Civill Lawe & Fellowe of All Soules Colledge in Oxford, Anno Dom' 1656."[a] The epitaphs formerly in St. Dunstan's church have been printed in the several editions of Stow's Survey (most fully in the last and best edition of 1754, vol. i. pp. 734—736), as also in Seymour's History of London 1735, and in that by Maitland; those remaining shortly before the demolition of the church, will be found in the "Historical Account," by the Rev. J. F. Denham, accompanying "Views exhibiting the Exterior and Interior, and Principal Monuments of the very ancient and remarkable Church of St. Dunstan in the West in the City of London." published in very large quarto, the prints (in number six, including the title) in lithography. In none of these, however, have the armorial bearings been recorded; and much genealogical information is consequently supplied and suggested by the following notes.

[a] The volume contains Notes of the following churches: Of St. Andrew's in the Wardrobe, St. Bartholomew the Great, St. Bartholomew by the Exchange, St. Bride's, St. Faith's under St. Paul's, St. Gregoryes by St. Paul's, St. Matthew's Friday Street, St. Paul's Cathedral, Temple Church, Priory of the Charterhouse, St. John of Jerusalem Gate (which Mr. Storer availed himself of in his History of Clerkenwell), Westminster Abbey, Cathedral Church of Bath, and some Roman antiquities there; in Oxford, All Souls College Chapel, Allhallows Church, Brazenose College Hall, St. Mary's church, St. .... Church (either St. Ebbs or St. Giles), Wadham College Hall; and a Coat of Rowe in Cirencester Church.

The name of Powle frequently occurs in the register of St. Dunstan's from the commencement to the year 1620, but generally without any additional designation.

Church Notes of Saint Dunstan in the West, taken A.D. 1656-7.

In the right-hand Isle, as you enter in at the great south door, is a monument wrought in stone, and therein a laten plate affixed, and not fare from it a shield hangs upon a naile thereby, with these arms [as in p. 106] and following inscription:

"HERE LYETH BURIED THE BODIE OF JOHN CAVE,[b] WHILST HE LIVED, FREE OF TRE COMPANYE OF THE CVTLERS IN LONDON, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE Ye 21 DAY OF NOVEMBER AN'O DOM' 1601, IN THE 44th YEARE OF HIS AGE."

On another plate close by, the following arms and inscription:

Arms, Sa. three leopards gardant in pale Erm. Walker, impaling, Gules, three dexter arms in armour embowed, the hands clenched, Proper, Armestronge.

"Neere unto this place lieth buried the bodie of Beale Walker, the wif of John Walker of this Parishe, gent. She was daughter of William Armestronge of the Bishopricke of Durham. She died the fourth of May, in the year of our Lord 1630."

Perpendicularly under the two last is an old worne gravestone, all the brass that is left is one piece in ye forme of an escocheon, & thereon is graven the picture of an eagle with an inke-pot in his bill [the arms of the Scriveners' Company, or device generally attributed to St. John the Evangelist].

Upon an old worne stone below the little east door the following arms [Poyntz and Sibelles, as in p. 106.]

Cuthbert Fetherstone, 1615, with his statue.[c] Arms, Gu. on a chevron between three feathers erect Argent, a Pellet.

[b] "John Cave, cutler, was buryed" Nov. 23, 1601. Register.

[c] Cuthbert Fetherstone, Gent. was Usher and Crier of the King's Bench, "nuper Ostiarius et Proclamator D'ni Regis in Curia ipsius Regis coram ipso Rege ubicumque fuerit in Anglia: functus est hoc munere an. 35; ob. 10 Dec. 1615, æt. 78." Epitaph: to which is added this sententious professional motto: "Quem sæpe transiit casus, aliquando invenit." His monument still remains, and exhibits the best piece of sculpture in the Church; an aged bust, with a bare head, beard, falling ruff, and furred gown. (See it slightly sketched in one of the plates of Denham's Account of St. Dunstan's.) "Cuthberte Fetherstone and Catharine Almonde, marr. Nov. 6, 1575." (Register.) Catharine died Nov. 1622, æt. 85, and had a separate monument, of which see the inscription in Strype's Stow, 1754, i. 735.

Also the two ensuing coats cut in brasse upon 2 distinct gravestones; but the inscriptions are pluckt up, & ye effigies. The bearing is ye same as Fleetwood [p. 101], and Hynde [p. 100].

These four ensuing coats are in the south windows of the same church, between the little east & little south door: [1. Foster; 2. Wyke; 3. and 4. Callow; as in pp. 105-6.]

Upon another gravestone, also in the south alley, are these coats:

1st. The Merchant-Taylors'. 2nd. A coney lieing on a mount of grass, with the initials C R G I conceive that the man's name there buried was Cony, by the devise and letters.

Upon a gravestone in the south alley of the said Church, directly below the little east door, is a brass plate infixed, conteyning a gentlewoman's picture, a coate of arms, and the inscription following:

"HERE LYETH ROSAMUND, THE DAUGHTER OF GEORGE NEVILL, GENT. AND LATE WIFE OF THOMAS WIGHT, CITIZEN AND DRAPER OF LONDON, A VERY GODLY AND VERTUOUS WOMAN, BY WHOM HE HAD ISSUE 5 SONNES & 3 DAUGHTERS; WHEREOF REMAINED ALIVE AT HER DEPARTURE ONE SONNE & ONE DAUGHTER. SHE DEPARTED OUT OF THIS LIFE Ye 6th OF DECEMB. 1604, ÆTATIS SUÆ 36."

Arms. (Gu.) a chevron Erm. betw. three bear's heads erased (A.) & muzzled (S.) within a border engrailed (of the Last) for Wight [or White]; impaling Neville (Gu.) a saltire Ermine.

Between the former & the little east door, is this coat cut in brass upon a gravestone chequy (Ar. & Sa.) & a chief (Or). [Cawood c.]

In the same alley, a little above the former inscription, is a gravestone, whereon these six coates are cut in brass. 1. Barry of six (Or and Azure) on a bend (Gu.) three roses (Arg.) Lyngen, impaling (Ar.) a chev. between three crosslets fitché (Sa.) [Russell?] 2. Lyngen, impaling (Az.) a chev. (Erm.) betw. three fleur-de-lis (Ar.) [Burgh]. 3. Lyngen, impaling (Sa.) an eagle displayed with two heads within a border engrailed (Ar.) [Mil-water]. 4. Lyngen, impaling, Barry of six (Gu. & Ar.) in chief (Or) a lion passant (Az.) [Englefield]. 5. Lyngen, impaling (Ar.) a chevron betw. three birds (Sa.) [Brenton.] 6. [Shelley] (Sa.) a fess engrailed betw. three whelkshells (Or), impaling Lyngen.[d]

And the effigies of a man in armour, his helme & cognizance, lieing under his head, and this inscription below his feet:

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF JOHN LYNGEN, LATE OF SUTTON, IN Y^e COUNTY OF HEREFORD, ESQUIRE, WHO DECEASED Y^e 3 DAY OF MAY, IN THE YEARE OF OUR LORD GOD MCCCCCLIIII."

There was beneath his effigies on the same gravestone another of a woman,[e] as one may guesse by the dimensions of her garment; for the brasse is stolen away, and likewise a square plate containing the inscription, is become a prey to sacrilegious hands.

The other inscriptions that were in this Church at the time these notes were taken, are all printed in Stow.

These four coats are borne singly upon the foure corners, & borne thus marshalled on the upper end of Gerrard Leigh's monument, on the left hand of the little east doore [as before, in p. 106].

[d] Some account of the family of Lingen, who were seated at Sutton, co. Hereford, will be found in Duncombe's History of that County, vol. ii. p. 183; but the pedigree seems not correctly stated, and may be taken with more confidence from the "Sheriffs of Shropshire," where Mr. Blakeway has interwoven with his account of the family several curious documents. The following extract of the pedigree will explain most of the coats above mentioned:

Sir John Lingen, Knt. of Sutton, co. Hereford. = Isabella, one of the four daughters and coheirs of Sir John Burgh, Lord of Mouthwy, co. Salop.

Sir John Lingen, Knt. = Eleanor, dau. of Thomas Milwater.

John Lingen. = Margaret, dau. of Sir Thomas Englefield, Speaker of the House of Commons, temp. Hen. VII. and VIII.

John Lingen, d. 1554, bur. at St. Dunstan's. = [....., dau. of ..... Brenton ?]

Jane, born 1544, sole heiress, d. 1609, bur. at St. Dunstan's. = William Shelley, of Michelgrove, Sussex, ob. 1597, s. p.

[e] This probably represented his daughter, Mrs. Shelley, whose name is thus entered in the Register: "Mrs Jane Shelley, wife of Wm Shelley deceased, buried from the house of John Wellard in Holbourne," March 11, 1609-10. In the Baronetage she is incorrectly called the first wife of William Shelley, esq. She founded by will an almshouse at Hereford; see Duncombe's History, i. 395, where for 1709, read 1609.

Harl. 1099, f. 69, is a drawing of the effigy of Lawrence Dalton, but erroneously inscribed (by a subsequent hand) "This gravestone lyeth in the church of Great St Hellins, London, 1639." He is represented at full length, with hands raised in prayer, wearing his tabard over a furred gown, his crown on his head, and on his breast a large collar of SS. remarkable as an example of the fashion in which that collar was then made, of gold and silver SS. alternately, and in front an S. suspended between two portcullises, with a rose dependent from it.

Armorial bearings on the Monuments now in St. Dunstan's Church, 1836.

Since the introductory remarks in p. 96 were printed, I have found that Edward Hatton in his New View of London, 1708, published, though not very correctly, some of the arms then on the monuments in St. Dunstan's. It may not, however, be useless to take yet another survey.

The new Church of St. Dunstan's is octagonal in form,[o] and the central area is surrounded by eight deep recesses, on the walls of which the monuments from the old Church have been carefully re-erected. The communion table is placed in the recess to the north. In that next adjoining, towards the east, are monuments bearing the following coats of arms:

Margaret Talbot, widow,[i] died March 31, 1620. Two coats: 1. Gu. a lion rampant Or within a bordure of the Second Be-

[o] An architectural description of this edifice (with a view) will be found in the Gentleman's Magazine for October 1832; and a plate of the north window, of stained glass, designed by Mr. T. Willement, F.S.A. in that for July 1835. I cannot pass this opportunity of noticing the very beautiful and interesting plate by the late Mr. George Cooke in his "Views in London and its vicinity," representing the new Church of St. Dunstan's rising from the ruins of the old, from a drawing made by Mr. D. Roberts in July 1832.

[i] Margaret, widow of John Talbot, of Grafton, co. Worcester, Esq. ancestor of the Earls of Shrewsbury; dau. of Edward third Lord Windsor, by Lady Katharine Vere, dau. of John Earl of Oxford, by Lady Dorothy Nevill, dau. of Ralph Earl of Westmoreland, by Lady Katharine Stafford, dau. of Edward Duke of Buckingham, &c. &c. This very illustrious descent was not forgotten by the writer of her epitaph, in which (see Strype's Stow, 1754, i. 735) it is stated that,

"Both Vere's and Windsor's best blood filled her veins:"

and the Church is told,

"More honour hast thou by her burial here, Dunstan, than to thee chanc'd this many a yeare."

The Lady is represented in a small gilt engraving on the tablet, kneeling at a table,

In the third recess from the altar is no shield of arms; nor in the fourth, which is that opposite the altar, and containing the entrance to the Church from Fleet Street.

In the next recess, Gerard Legh [as in p. 106].

In the western recess:

Mr. Richard Peirson,[o] Citizen and Goldsmith, ob. May 19, 1718, æt. 70; [and others of the family, see the epitaph in Denham,[p] p. 32.] Az. three shuttles Or. Crest, a bird's head Or.

[m] This monument has been twice repaired at the expense of the parish, first in 1820, and secondly in 1832, when a tablet bearing the following inscription was added (in lieu of that printed in Denham): "This Monument, removed from the ancient Church of this Parish, was restored and erected in this place by the parishioners, A.D. 1832, as a sincere though inadequate expression of their feelings towards a family long resident among them, and whose many virtues and extensive munificence command their respect, admiration, and gratitude."

[n] These colours are now all mispainted.

[o] Not Pierson, as in Denham.

[p] One of the most ancient altar tombs was in the old church appropriated to receive these tablets, as represented in one of Mr. Denham's plates: they are now placed in a neat mural monument of new masonry, and the remains of the ancient tomb are not preserved.

BURIALS.

The Rev. Thomas Snow, M.A. the present Vicar of St. Dunstan's, having kindly given me access to the Parish Registers, I have examined the whole of the first volume, and have made the following extracts, besides those already inserted in the notes. This volume is fairly engrossed on vellum, and extends from 1558 to 1631; but the original paper books are also preserved, and sometimes their entries are fuller, and have therefore been preferred.

[m] Hatton has given these arms as, Sa. a stag at gaze Ar. (which is certainly a coat of Jones), impaling, Az. (Ar.?) three bucks lodged Gu. His widow was Hannah, dau. of Otwell Jolly, of Betley, co. Stafford.

[n] Now wrongly coloured Gules.

[o] This coat has been erroneously painted, the fess being now Or, the roundles Ogresses, and the lion's heads Or.

[p] Thus more fully entered in the original paper book: "M. Rythe a benchar of Lyncolnes yne, buryed owte of the newe bryke byldynge, beynge in owre p'ishe, the hether syde of lynkcolnes yne, xvij daye of Februarij." George Rythe was Autumn Reader at Lincoln's Inn 1555; and chosen Lent Reader for 1561, but "non legebat causa ægritudinis suæ,"—the sickness which proved fatal.

The word chrizam, or chrisom, which occasionally occurs in these notices, seems generally employed when a child had no name, and therefore had not been baptized: but this was not its original or correct application. In earlier times a "chrisomer" described a child whose head had received the consecrated ointment, or chrisome, in baptism, and thenceforward wore on the spot a white cloth, called the chrisom cloth, until the eighth day; when, on the purification of the mother, the cloth, or a money payment in lieu (the appointed fee was 4*d.*) was paid to the priest. The term is of frequent occurrence in St. Dunstan's registers during the reign of Elizabeth, and there was an entry of "chrysoms" in the London Bills of Mortality for a century after. There are many remarks on the subject, by several antiquaries of the last century, in the Appendix to the History of Herne, in the first volume of the Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica.

EARLY CHARTERS RELATING TO LAND IN BABRAHAM, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

From the same muniments as the preceding.

The two following Charters were both made in the reign of Stephen, or early in that of Henry II. Hugh Abbat of Colchester, in whose time the estate of Sunderland in Badburgham (now Babraham) was relinquished to the Abbey of Sawtrey, was Hugh de Hay, who succeeded to the abbacy about 1135, and presided over the society for seventeen years. The Abbat Gilbert, who made the confirmation, was his successor Gilbert de Wicham or Wechen.

William Archdeacon of Ely, who, with his brother Nicholas, was a witness to the second Charter, was William de Lavington, who held that dignity for forty-three years, from 1117 to 1160. These brothers were nephews to Henry the first Bishop of Ely, who died in 1131. Nicholas we see was the dapifer to the Bishop (unnamed) who was witness to this Charter. From the two charters we gather that the land had been first given to the Abbey of Colchester by the father of Ralph Pirot in the reign of Henry I.

At the taxation of Pope Nicholas in 1291, the temporalities of the Abbey of Sawtrey in Badburham were returned at 6*l.* 1*s.*; but in 26 Hen. VIII. its rents and fines here produced only 3*l.*

Add. 5679, p. 668, we find this memorandum: "Gervasius de Lunesford, pro Lunesford et Wokenolle, to find one man at arms and two archers. Pelham Deeds, H. No. 8." This furnishes a name evidently unknown to the compiler of the pedigree, who strung together all he found with an ingenuity more curious than happy.

[b] In the original the descent of Barrington is traced up to Odinel de Barrington in the time of the Conquest; and also the issue of Thomazine's second marriage down to Robert Sydney, Earl of Leicester, and his son Philip Viscount Lisle, a° 1631.

[c] This marriage, supported by the authorities above quoted, is inserted in the place of "Eleanora, filia Johannis Fynes, soror Tho. Fynes, mil. Baro Dacre," as in the original pedigree; which appears to have been inserted solely on the authority of the document hereafter, No. 30, p. 149. That document, imperfect as it is, certainly seems to show that there was a contract with Elianor (unless some mistranscript has been committed, for Lord Dacre was cousin to Margaret Fynes); but there is no evidence to show that a marriage with that lady was consummated.

[d] In Collins's Peerage the descent of Townshend from Lunsford and Barrington is derived in a totally different way, but without proofs.

[a] It may fairly be doubted whether in the fabrication of these earlier evidences the name of David was not assumed by mistake instead of Daniel; as a person of the latter name occurs in the Testa de Nevill, as holding the fourth of a fee in Yalding, co. Kent, in which parish is situated a manor now called Lodingford, which was probably the place whence this family originally derived its name:

"(Kancia) Heres Danielis de Lodenesford quartã ꝑtẽ feodi [in Alding'] de Johne Chanu & iꝑe de p̃dc̃a Alicia [Wathm] & iꝑa de eodem comite [Glov̊nie]." Testa de Nevill, p. 206.

"Woodfolde in the parish of Yalding was held in the reign of K. Edw. II. by Anceline Quynton and the heirs of Daniel de Lodneford, who held the same of George Cham, as he did of the Earl of Gloucester.

"In 20 Edw. III. at the making the Black Prince a knight, Robert Reickyn by his wife, sister of John de Lodneford, paid respective aid for it, as one-fourth part of a knight's fee." Hasted's Kent, ii. 304.

(End of the charters and proofs of the Pedigree in MS. Coll. Arm. D. 14, and MS. Harl. 5800.)

Of the preceding charters there are other copies of Nos. 8, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 24, and 26, in the MS. Lansdowne 269, "Ex chartis Tho. Lunsford, Milit. et Baronetti, 1647." These were evidently transcribed from the originals, and their authenticity need not be suspected. Some of them are now taken from this source, as being the more complete and correct, together with others which do not occur in the former collection. To these charters is added a copy of the pedigree as made out by Owen, but with the names of Hugh and Richard placed as we have inserted them in italics in p. 140, and Hugh omitted between Lorenzo and John. This was evidently done on the authority of a plea roll of the 9th John, thus noticed in the "Placitorum Abbreviatio:"

This record supplies, it will be perceived, the following pedigree:

Alured de St. Martin. Mabil de Canteleworth. Hugh de Lundresford.

Alicia.=Richard. Matilda.=William Gulafre.

and gives to the asserted marriage of Hugh to the sister of Alured de St. Martin, (as in Owen's pedigree, p. 140) an appearance of being rather an imaginary than an ascertained match.

Hugh de Lunesford is a witness to two charters of John of Eu, and Ralph de Yssondun, Comte of Eu, to the Abbey of Robertsbridge, in Dugdale's Monasticon, vol. ii. p. 921. The period of the first must be about 1200.—The tithe of the demesne of Lunsford (xij*d.*) was granted to the Priory of Hastings by Henry Comte of Eu. Ibid. p. 84.

FURTHER ACCOUNT OF REGISTERS OF PRIVATE CHAPELS IN AND NEAR LONDON.

(See vol. III. p. 381.)

GRAY'S INN CHAPEL.

The Chapel of Gray's Inn is of ancient foundation. The present site of Gray's Inn and the neighbourhood was in the manor of Portpool, and in 1314 John de Grey, with the King's license, conveyed to the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, to provide a priest to sing mass for his own soul and for the souls of his ancestors in the Chapel of his manor of Portpool, Holborn, thirty acres of land in Portpool, together with 10s of his free rents there, and four acres of meadow.[a]

Marriages were performed in this Chapel for many years prior to the commencement of the present Register, as will appear by the matrimonial allegations in the Bishop of London's Registry, from which many of the matches hereafter given, were obtained. The Register of Gray's Inn is a small folio book bound in rough calf, containing both marriages and baptisms. The marriages commence with one on the 7th of May 1695, and from the subsequent ones the following are extracted.[b]

25 May 1714. The Honble Richard Parsons, Lord Ross,[c] of ye Kingdom of Ireland, & Mary Pawlet of the parish of St. James, Westminster.

6 May 1718. Thos Catesby Pagett, Esq.[d] commonly called Lord Pagett, & Lady Eliz. Egerton.

[a] See Cases of supposed Exemption from Poor Rates. By Edward Griffith, Esq. F.A.S. &c. Butterworth, 1831.

[b] The writer has had an opportunity of inspecting the Register by the permission of the Benchers of Gray's Inn; a permission which he has for some years past been soliciting, but which has been withheld in consequence of the pending of a suit touching the exemption of the Inn from poor rates.

[c] Second Visct. Ross, married Mary, eldest daughter of Lord Wm. Pawlett, brother of Charles second Duke of Bolton.

[d] Only son of Henry seventh Lord Paget, first Earl of Uxbridge; married Elizabeth, third daughter of John third Earl of Burlington.

20 May 1753. Jefferey Amherst, Esq.[g] Sevenoaks, & Jane Dalyson of Wrotham.

14 July 1753. Rd Nicholas, Esq. & Anne Hatley, both of Hackney.

15 Nov. 1753. Fras Ireland, Horton Kirby, Clk, & Elizth Wade of New Shoreham, Sussex.

The last marriage in the Register is:

12 March 1754. Benj. Prior, of St. Ann's, Blackfryers, & Ann Sankey, of St. Anne's, Westmr.

WILL. NOBLE.

The Baptisms in the Register are not more than 20 or 30. They commence in 1707, and are entered at two different parts of the book. There are the baptisms of several of the children of Joseph Girdler and Sarah his wife; also of Mary, daughter of —— Wickliff, Esq. & Katherine his wife, 6 June 1708.

Benjn, son of Fras Foote, Esq. & his wife, 6 July 1715.

Ann, daughter of Richd Bond, Gentn, & Magdalen his wife, 20 Feb. 1749.

Fisher Littleton, son of Joseph Girdler & Sarah his wife, 23 Aug. 1754.

Edward, son of Edwd Gale Baldero & Ann, 14 Aug. 1755.

Wm Hammond, son of Joseph Girdler & Sarah his wife, 11 Jan. 1757.

There are several baptisms of foundlings or illegitimate children, who are named "Grays," or "Graysin;" but this Inn does not appear to have had many Foundlings; at least not so many as the Temple was compelled to provide for, which, from the proximity of its gardens to the Thames, afforded an easy and unobservable opportunity to the wicked and profligate to leave their children on its banks.

There is no mention in the Gray's Inn Register of any Burials, and it is supposed therefore that there was no spot suitable for interment. Besides which, Gray's Inn had a Chapel in St. Andrew's church, Holborn, which is thus noticed in the Register kept by Mr. Bently (a parishioner in the 16th century) "14th of Elizabeth.—Note, That one [g] He was created Lord Amherst in 1788, and died in 1797; he married Jane, daughter of Thomas Dalyson of Hampton, Kent.

Mr. Copston of Gray's Inn being slain at Fleet Bridge, on Ludgate Hill, was this year buried in Gray's Inn Chapel, at whose burial and sermon there was assembled so many people as I never saw the like in this Church to my remembrance."

7 June 1661. Henry Ingram, Esqr. Whitkirke, York, B. 20, & Dame Essex Montague, Sp. 17. (Daūr of Edwd Earl of Manchester).

KNIGHTSBRIDGE CHAPEL.

On the north side of the Road at Knightsbridge stands this Chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, which belonged formerly to an ancient Lazar House, held as it appears under the Church of Westminster, at the rent of four shillings per annum, by the family of Glassington. The Chapel was rebuilt in 1629, and an engraving of it will be found in Wilkinson's Churches. See Lysons's Environs, vol. ii. p. 179.

Henry Walker was presented in 1655 to be Minister, by Cornelius Holland and George Prime, joint Governors of the Chapel.[h]

In 1699 the Chapel was again rebuilt at the charge of Nicholas Birkhead, Citizen and Goldsmith of London. The front was a third time rebuilt and the whole Chapel repaired in 1789. The patronage is in the Dean and Chapter of Westminster.

There is no Register to be found, but by the Matrimonial Allegations in the Bishop of London's Registry, it appears that many were married at this Chapel in the years 1667, 1668, and 1669. The following matches are extracted from these Records.

REGISTER OF CHERTSEY ABBEY.

In the library of Lord Clifford at Ugbrook, Devonshire, is a Register formerly belonging to St. Peter's Benedictine Abbey at Chertsey in Surrey. This Folio MS. consists of 152 leaves, and has been fairly preserved; but owing to the ignorance of the binder, the series of events has been disjointed, and thrown into some confusion; and, unfortunately, some portion has perished. The principal part of the MS. relates to the Acts of John de Rutherwyk, who was elected Abbat of Chertsey 9 Aug. 1307, and died 28 January 1346. A few deeds which belong to his predecessors Alanus, William, and Bartholomew, are copied into the MS.

One cannot sufficiently admire the precision and method with which these Registers were kept, with what diligence the Crown Grants, and all purchases and exchanges and donations were registered, and the yearly events of the Monastery recorded.

This MS. bears intrinsic evidence to the enterprise and ability which distinguished the government of John de Rutherwyk. He must have been unwearied in improving and extending the Abbey estates, in draining marshes, erecting mills and stone bridges, inclosing lands, sowing acorns, repairing chapels and farm-houses, sinking wells, building barns, &c. The property was very extensive in Chertsey, Thorp, Chabeham, and Egham, and in Coveham, Colesdon, Bocham, Ewell, White Waltham, Horlee, Sutton, and Kersaulton. The Convent had property also in London, in the parish of All Saints de Hayward apud Danegate, in St. Nicholas Olave's parish, in St. Giles' parish beyond Cripplegate, at the Wood-wharf in St. Bennet's parish, and in St. Mary's Southwark. The town house of the Abbat was in the parish of St. Peter the Less, and once belonged to the Chiggewell family.

Perhaps the following particulars may interest the readers of the Collectanea:

Sept. 1310. Sir John Horne covenants to pay at Michaelmas of the year following, the sum of 53*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* "in Ecclesiâ Sĉi Magni Martyris prope pontem London."

1313. The Abbat did military service in the expedition against Scotland, by his proxy Paulinus de Waltham, "qui occubuit apud Stryvelyn, cujus animam Dꝰ absolvat. Amen."

1314. The copying of a new missal for the high altar of the Abbey church was deemed an event of sufficient consequence to be recorded in the annals, "Eodem anno fecit scribi novum Missale, & summo Altari deputavit."

1316. This year the Abbat purchased of Michael le Waps a certain messuage with a garden, curtelage, & a croft of arable land in Horlee, which he assigned as a manse for the Vicars of Horlee.

1320. Amongst very many erections and improvements this year, "Fecit Tanneriam juxta gardinum Infirmarie."

1323. "Emit ymagines Sĉe Katarine & Sĉe Margarete stantes super summum altare; eodem anno fecit fieri novum baculum pastoralem."

1324. Richard Hall of Thorpe resigned his appointment of Porter to the Abbey gate. To this office was attached a weekly allowance of seven convent loaves, fourteen gallons[a] of convent beer, seven dishes from the kitchen, and ten shillings at Easter for his robe. The Abbat, upon this resignation, assigned to the said Hall an apartment for his life within the inclosure of the Almonry, "infra clausum Elemosinarie nr̃e," and the Celerar was directed to provide him with a weekly allowance of seven conventual loaves called Miches, 14 loave, called Knygte-loves, 12 jugs of convent beer, & 20*s.* per annum for his kitchen, and a robe every year "de sectâ Clericorum nostrorum."

1325. The Abbats of Chertsey had possessed the privilege of keeping the King's gaol at Chertsey, within the hundred of Godele. It frequently occurred, that in the act of removing the prisoners from thence to Guilford gaol through Windsor Forest, "per vastum & nemora foreste de Wyndesore," attempts were successfully made by their accomplices to rescue them, to the great prejudice of justice and the public tranquillity. At this time there were but two Coroners for the whole county of Surrey. At the petition of the Abbat, King Edward II. on 31 May this year, allowed a third Coroner, with jurisdiction in this hundred of Godele. His Majesty further permitted the Abbat to rebuild a wear in the river Thames at Chertsey, at a place called La Halle.

1326-7. "Memorandum quod vicesimo nono die Januarii ejusdem anni Dñs Edwardus Tertius post Conquestum incepit regnare, quamvis annus vicesimus Patris ejus in multis rotulis Compotorum continuatur usque ad festum Sĉi Mich̃is proxime sequens." Then follows the writ of the new King directed to the Sheriff of Surrey, "de Pace Regni custodiendâ," dated Westminster, 29 Jan. anno regni nr̃i primo. He states that the late King had withdrawn, "spontanea voluntate," from the government of the realm; and that with the good pleasure of his father, "ipsius Patris nostri beneplacito," and the advice of the Prelates and Barons, he, as the first born and heir to the Crown, had assumed the reins of government, and had received their homage. He commands the Sheriff to proceed to the publication of the accompanying writ, and that he will always be ready to deal out equal justice to the rich and to the poor.

1327. William de Henlee held the manor of Henlee, with its appurtenances and tenements in Fremelesworth, "per servicium reddendi Abbati de Certeseye xxii*s.* & viii*d.* ad quatuor anni terminos, & ad festum Sĉi Michaelis xii lagenas mellis." An Inquisition taken at Harpesford on Ladyday this year, reported that the value of the property over and above the said rent was 30*l.* per ann.

On 26th April, Hawysia, relict of Sir Walter de Gloucester, Knt. granted to the Abbat a release of ten marks annual rent charged on property in Chertsey, Thorp, and Egham, "ad sustentationem duorum capellanorum in Ecc̃tiâ b̃ti Mich̃is de Haydour in com. Lyncolñ.

On 26th Dec. this year, the King published the Charter of the Perambulation of the Forest. The boundaries are thus set forth: "Perambulatio inchoanda est apud Wayemuthe; & abinde sem-per in longitudine Tamisie usque Loderlakeshatch ubi tres comitatus conveniunt, videlicet, Surr̃, Berkꝭ, & Bukꝭ; & abinde usque orientalem corneram parci de Wyndesore, & abinde usque ad molendinū de Harpesford: & abinde usque ad Thornhulle, & abinde usque ad Sydweye, & abinde usque la Lee, et sic usque ad Horton; et abinde per medium la Shete usque Gomerychesford; et abinde usque Rolvestrouche, & abinde usque Wysshemoredene; & abinde usque Brydeforde, ubi tres comitatus conveniunt, videlicet Surr̃, Berkꝭ, & Suthf̃. Et quod totus comitatus Surr̃ est extra Forestam."

This year the Abbat rebuilt the chancel of Egham church, and caused the following verses to be inscribed. We take it for granted, that he was a better architect than a poet.

Hec domus efficitur Baptiste laude Johannis,
Bis deca septenis trescentis mille sub annis Christi, quam statuit Abbas ex corde Johannes De Rutherwyka per terras dictus et ampnes.[b]

1332. Abbas construxit tabernaculum super magnum altare apud Egeham; reparavit cameram apud Coveham cum nova capella.

1335. In this year the Abbat desisted from all purchases and fatigue of body and mind, in consequence of a libellous charge preferred against him by some of the community to Adam de Orleton, Bishop of Winchester, viz. that he was occupied in accumulating enormous property. He prays Heaven, that these degenerate children so wrongfully accusing their father, and so opposed to the common advantage, may have time given them for repentance, and that the brethren in future may have grace to refrain from such unworthy combinations.

1336. This year witnessed the Abbat as actively employed as ever in the work of improvement. Besides several small purchases of land in Egham, Bocham, Horlee, Aysshe, and Chertsey, he inclosed a moor called Frythbroke at Thorp, repaired the quay at Oxelake, &c. &c.

1341. On 22 September King Edward III. and Court visited Chertsey Abbey, and his Majesty was pleased to renew in its favour the charters of his progenitors from the time of Edward the Confessor, and at the request of his Queen Philippa, to grant an addition to the privileges of the Abbey.

On 25 Feb. 1342, the above-mentioned King, at the request of this favoured Abbat, was pleased to grant, that in the vacancy in his office, either by death, cession, or resignation, or any other way, the Prior and Convent should ever be vested with its custody, and with the sole administration of its temporalities, always excepting knight's service, and the presentations to the livings of churches appropriated to the Abbey, during such vacancy of the abbatial dignity. Should such vacancy not exceed four months, then the Crown was to receive but 50 marks; but proportionably more, according to the length of vacancy.

In this MS. are three memoranda written in a very different hand. The first states that in the reign of King Henry the land of Hamme "reddidit tres marcas & duos solidos, & octo falces, & seminavit vj acras Domino preter Preces, & fecit communes operationes, et reddidit pro quâdam piscariâ vij solidos." Abbat William wished the Convent to grant this estate to Robert the Chamberlain for 26s; they hesitated to do so, as being a royal gift; but the grant eventually was made in chapter of the estate, "preter nemus et piscariam, pro xxvj solidis et ceteris operibus."

The second memorandum is intituled, "Ruina turris nostri magni de Certeseia."

"Anno Dñi millo CCCmo Lxxmo nonis Julii videlt feria iiij. in crastino depositionis Sti Swithuni Epi, immediate post capitulum, dum conventus staret ad incipiendum Parliamentum, media pars campanilis nostri in materia ruebat ad ymum terre ad dampnum irrecuperabile dicti monasterii nostri."

The third asserts that to the manor of Reumond belong six messuages, 200 acres of arable land, 72 of meadow, 30 acres of pasture, with 110s of rent in Chertsey, Thorp, and Egham.

Sir Thomas is said to have served the office of Sheriff for Devon no less than seven times. John Hoker, the celebrated Historian, omits in his MS. this number of times (in p. 353) but delivers the following report of the worthy Knight: "Sir Thomas Denys, Recorder of this City of Exeter,[c] died the 18th of February 1560. He was a gentleman, born of an ancient howse, but by times spent and greatly decayed; but by this man restored again. He was well learned in the laws of this land; a man very wise and of great experience. He lived under, and saw the days of, seven Kings & Queens, viz. Edward IV. Richard III. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. Mary, and Elizabeth. He was servant to King Henry VII. and of the Privy Council to Henry VIII. He married two ladies, the widows of two Aldermen of London, by whom he attained unto great wealth; and the so much the better to keep countenaunce in Court, he was Chauncellor to the Lady Anne of Cleves, and in great favour with the King, and the best estates of this Realm. He had been Sheriff .... times, whereof two times now together in the reign of King Henry VII. having so soon ended one year, but he was chosen the next year also; whereof when he understood, he went to the King and told him, that when his Grace had chosen him Sheriff the second time, it was against his Laws. Then the King demanded what was the penalty; he answered it was £100, whereof the one moiety was to his Grace, the other moiety to him that would sue it. Whereupon the King sent to his Attorney, and required him to enter an action in his name against this Sir Thomas Denys for the said forfeiture; which he released for this unto him, and bid him to serve the office."

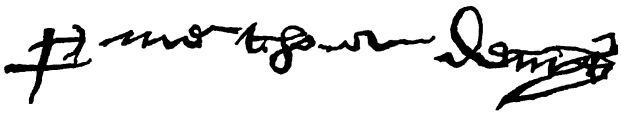
The annexed is a fac-simile of the Knight's hand-writing, from a deed dated 10 Oct. 5 & 6 P & M.



Q. Who was Richard Denys who died in Cornwall in 1528, or the year following? He left a cloak to St. Petrock's Church, Exeter, which the then Wardens sold for 15s. The carriage of the article from Cornwall cost them twelve pence.

Q. Who was the George Denys, the Franciscan Friar, who is thus mentioned in p. 55, "Historia Minor F. F. Minorum Provinciæ Angliæ," by Francis Davenport Duaci, 1665? The pedigree of Arundell of Trerice in Collins's Peerage, 1741, vol. iv. p. 183, is perfectly incorrect; another line of the family having apparently been confused with it. The correct descent, and the names of wives and children, are given in C. S. Gilbert's Survey of Cornwall, 1817, vol. i. p. 538: but this will proves that Sir John Arundell, who married Jane Grenville, was dead some time before 1550; and that the monument of a Sir John Arundell, at Stratton in Cornwall, on which his figure is represented in brass, lying between his two wives, attributed by Mr. Gilbert to the husband of Jane Grenville, is that of her son, who married first, Mary, dau. and heiress of John Beville of Garnake; and secondly, Julian, daughter of James Eresby of Eresby, and widow of —— Gamlyn. PEDIGREE OF THE FRECHEVILLE AND MUSARD FAMILIES, LORDS OF CRICH AND STAVELEY, IN DERBYSHIRE.

(30.) This Ralph did homage for his lands 15 Edw. I. 1286, and then had livery of them, except the manor of Boney, co. Nott. which was retained in the lands of Rich. de Grey,[a] until the fine imposed on Anker de Frecheville, father of the said Ralph, was satisfied (Dugd. ii. 6); which seems to have been paid by the 22 Edw. I. for among the original charters of the Harleian collection, is one containing a memorandum that on St. Stephen's day, 22 Edw. I. [26 Dec. 1293], Richard de Grey delivered to Ralph de Frecheville at Cruche, twenty-three deeds and writings, which had been in the custody of the said Richard.[b]

In the 25 Edw. I. he received a summons to sit in Parliament, among the Barons of the realm, but never afterwards, says Dugdale. (Bar. ii. 6.) He was, however, as appears by the Parliamentary writs, elected knight of the shire for Derby in 29 Edw. I. and sate in the Parliament at Lincoln in that year. In the 25 Edw. I. he was employed in the Scottish wars, and writs of summons to him on the same service are frequent, up to the 12

[a] In an Inquisition 4 Edw. I. Reginald de Grey is called "Custos terræ et heredis Anketerii de Freschenvile," and held, jointly with the Prior of Newstead in Shirwood, the manor of Scardeclive, formerly belonging to Hubert Fitz-Ralph. MS. Harl. 3375, f. 44[b]. And Richard de Grey holds the same office 9 Edw. I. Plac. de Jur. et Assis. rot. 8. Nott. It will be recollected that John Lord Grey of Wilton had the custody of Anker's lands, as early as 48 Hen. III. See p. 13.

"Rex cepit homag. Rad. de Freschevile, nepotis et unius hered. Nich. Musard defuncti; Margaretæ sororis et alterius hered. ejusd. The period of this Ralph's death (which, amidst the confusion that prevails in regard to himself and his son or sons of the same name, is of some importance) is proved by a letter of attorney made by Margaret, "relicta D'ni Rad. de Frechevile, and his executrix, dated 19 Edw. II. 1325. Frechev. Evid. p. 26.

This also is confirmed by the Rot. Original. Abbrev. i. 291, where in the 19 Edw. II. rot. 6, is an entry, "Mand' est Johi de Bolynbrok esc', &c. Et de terr' & ten' q' fuer' Rad'i de Freche- vyll def." and also by the Inq. p. mort. Rogeri Beler, 19 Edw. II. n. 98, which states: "Rog. Beler tenuit man. de Cruch in co. Alicia ux. Rog. Beler, supplicavit Margaretam quæ fuit ux. Rad'i de Frescheville defuncti, pro rationabili dote sua de man. de Cruch."

As no Inquisition after the death of this Ralph appears in the printed Calendar, it must probably have been lost, which is to be regretted, since it would throw more light on the subject.

(31.) This Margaret was the daughter and heir of Sir John de Beaufey, knt. (son of Sir Rich. Beaufey, of Park Hall), and by her marriage the manor or messuage of Park Hall was brought to the Frecheville family. She was the first wife of Sir Ralph Frecheville, and must have died before the 12 Edw. II. when he married Margaret Staunton, with whom his first wife has been strangely confounded by all the genealogists. The second wife, indeed, is totally passed over and omitted in the Visitations, and also by Dugdale, Vincent, Thoroton, and their followers. In the reign of Henry VII. a Petition was exhibited to Reginald Bray, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, by Peter Frecheville, in which he thus states his descent from Margaret Beaufey.

"Petitio exhibita Reginaldo Bray, Cancellario Ducatus Lancastriæ.

"Humbly sheweth unto your good worship Peirs Frechville, Esquire, that wheras Henry the son of Alan Parke de Denby, in ye County of Derby, was seized in and of a mess'e and 40 acres of land and meadow wth thappurtenances in ye same, called the Parkefeilde, in his demesne, as of Fee; and so therof seized, by his sufficient deed in the Law (the wch ye said Piers is ready to shew) therof enfeoffed one John Beaufoy, knight, Auncestor of ye said Piers, whose heire he is, that is to say, son of Gervase, son of Raphe, son of Anker, son of Raphe, son of Margaret, daughter of the said John Beaufoy," &c.

MS. Lansd. 207 F. p. 139. Cf. MS. Harl. 5809, f. 34 b.

This statement, however, is not to be depended on, for we shall find by proofs hereafter, that Gervase was not son but brother of Ralph, and Anker was not grandson but son of the Ralph, husband of Margaret Beaufey.

1326) and Sir Ralph Frecheville, is found in the following document, which has hitherto been overlooked, or neglected.

"Universis, &c. Will'us de Staunton, Miles, sal. in d'no. Licet Dn's Rad'us Frechevile mihi teneatur in ducentis marcis, solvend. certo termino, &c. Collectanea G. Holles, MS. Lansd. 207 F. p. 86.

Whether this lady had any children by Sir Ralph, is doubtful, but the evidence seems in favour of all Sir Ralph's issue being by his first wife.

The following notices must all be referred to Margaret Stanton, and not to Margaret Beaufey, as the genealogists have hitherto considered.

"Per Inquis. capt. p. mort. Tho. Bardolf, compertum est, quod Margareta,[e] que fuit ux. Rad. de Frescheville, et Rad. fil. Rad. de Lathebury, tenuerunt de eod. Tho. The claim of park is allowed, but that of infangenthef taken away, and the gallows ordered to be thrown down.[f] Plac. de Quo Warr. 4 Edw. III. rot. 7.

[e] Colepeper, in his voluminous Adversaria, professing to refer to Documents, states at one time that this Margaret was widow of Roger Belers, when married to Ralph Frecheville, and on another occasion he says, that after Ralph's death she married Rad. de Lathebury. Both of these assertions seem to require proof. See MS. Harl. 6833, p. 47, 7598.

[f] Joh. de Crumbwell and his wife say, that they hold one-third of the manor by term of the latter's life, "ex dimissione cujusd. Rob. de Clifford," to whose son and heir Robert the reversion of it belongs. See No. (29).

In MS. Harl. 1537 (which is another copy of the Visitation of Derbyshire in 1611, inferior to, but containing a few additions not in 5809), is a drawing of the seal of this Margaret, attached to a charter dated 1325. " S. Margaretæ ux. quondam Rad. Frechevill, Mil. defuncti." On the seal are four shields, placed at right angles, with the points towards the centre. On two of them are the Frecheville arms, viz. a bend between 6 escallops, and on the other two, 2 cheverons, the arms of Staunton.

(32.) The difficulty of ascertaining the truth in regard to the descent in this stage, makes it requisite to enlarge rather more than has hitherto been done. The MS. Visitations do not distinctly recognise this Ralph as an elder son, nor is he to be traced in the Frecheville Evidences with any degree of certainty. By the former authorities (with which agrees Vincent, in his Derbyshire, MS. Coll. Arm.) the pedigree is thus continued:

MS. Harl. 1093, f. 130 (Certified by the signature of Peter Frecheville 1611); 5809, f. 35.

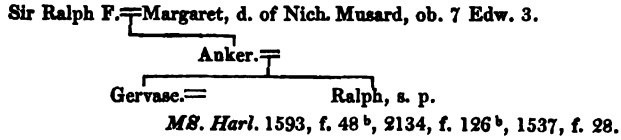
Other MS. authorities give it in the following manner:



MS. Harl. 1593, f. 48 b, 2134, f. 126 b, 1537, f. 28.

Or thus:

Sir Ralph F.=Margaret, ob. 7 Edw. 3.

Ralph, ob. 23 Edw. 3.= Anker, ob. 14 Ric. 2.=

John, ob. 48 Edw. 3. Ralph, ob. s. p. 4 Hen. 5. Gervase, ob. 8 Hen. 6.

MS. Harl. 1537, f. 57 [b].

Thoroton [h] agrees with the latter, except that he inserts a second Ralph, brother to Ralph and Anker. Dugdale, in his Visitation of 1664 (MS. Coll. Arm.), enters the pedigree (which is certified by the signature of John Lord Frecheville) as follows:

Rad. de F. miles.=Margareta, f. & h. Joh. Beaufey.

Rad. de F. mil. ob. 23 Edw. 3.=

Anker F. f. et h. (Fin. Mich. 36 Edw. 3.)=Agnes, relicta W. Favell.

Rad. de F. mil. ob. 4 Hen. 5.=Johanna, 42 Edw. 3.
(Carta penes Joh. D. Fr.) (Carta penes D. F.)

Gervasius=Margareta.

Lastly, Mr. Wolley, in an endeavour to clear up the difficulty, has rather increased it, for he marries Ralph, son of the first Anker, first to Isabel daughter of Rich. Grey, by whom he has Ralph the elder, and Ralph of Palterton (ob. 23 Edw. III.), and secondly, to Margaret dau. of Sir John Beaufey, by whom he has Anker. It is needless to point out the errors in each of the above statements, as the documents produced in the course of the present inquiry, sufficiently demonstrate them. I have adopted therefore what, on the whole, seems most probable, in the absence of positive testimonies in the shape of wills or monumental inscriptions, and submit the evidence, such as it is, to those who have an opportunity of looking more deeply into the matter.

III. in which the Junior Ralph is called son of the Senior Ralph, but the reference is no doubt erroneous, for the printed copy gives no entry of Frecheville under a° 11, but only under a° 10, rot. 23 as quoted above.

These last cited records would seem to favour the notion of Thoroton and Wolley, that there were two Ralphs, both sons of the Sir Ralph Frecheville who died in 1325; but this is contradicted by the entire stream of evidence, as well as by two documents never yet published, which I subjoin, and which are of considerable value in illustrating the Pedigree before us.

The first is an original charter preserved in the Harleian collection, in the following terms:

"Hec indentura testatur, quod cum Rad's Frecheuill' miles, filius Haunkere Frecheuill' milit', dederit Rad'o Frecheuill', filio predicti Rad' militis, diversa terr. et ten. in Staveley Wodethorp', habend' sibi et Issabell' uxoris (sic) sue et hered. int. eos legitime procreatis, idemque Rad's habitum sue religionis assumpsit apud Notyngham, in ordine Fratrum Minorum, in quo professus fuit; Et postea Rad's, filius predicti Rad'i, in predict terr. et ten. intravit, et obiit inde seisitus, post cujus mortem intravit Joh'es ut filius et heres, et feofavit de predict. ten. Robt'm Martell' Ric. Lewodde et Will. de Rempston'. Et predict. Joh'es Frechevill' obiit, et habuit exitum quemdam Joh'em, qui obiit infra [ætatem] qui habuit [duas] filias, videlicet Margaretam eniciam,[m] et Issabellam juniorem, qui in ten. predict. intraverunt, in quorum stat[u] predictus Rob's Martell' omnia predicta ten. confirmat et ratificat sibi et heredib. de corporib. predictor. Rad. et Issabelle ux. sue, secundum tallium prenominatum. In cujus rei, &c. Dat. die Jovis prox. post. Transl. S. Tho. Mart, a° r. r. Ric. Secundi p. c. decimo nono." (Seal lost.) Chart. Harl. 86, H. 14.

The second document I shall produce, and which confirms the statement of the former in regard to the elder Ralph, is contained in the Cartulary of Newstead abbey,[n] in which it is twice entered in a hand of the fifteenth century, for the purpose of shewing how the lordship of Scardeclive came into possession of the monastery, from the period of its being held by Hubert Fitz-Ralph (see p. 10). The annexed copy is taken from f. 166 b

The above documents fully explain the alienation of the property by Ralph Frecheville senior, and the subsequent oblivion into which he seems to have fallen, and also enable us to fix with certainty Isabel de Gray as his wife, and the family names of his son's and grandson's wives, hitherto unknown.

With regard to the period of this Peter Frechville's death, there exists great contradiction, and I do not find any Inquisition taken after it, in the records to which I have referred. A document among the Frecheville Evidences fixes it to 19 Hen. VII. 1503, the date assigned in the Visitation of 1611, and on his tomb at Staveley (25 March, 1503) where he was buried.[c] In MS. Harl. 1537, f. 57 b it is set down the 27 Hen. VI. 1448.

And in an obituary of the family inserted in an old Mass book, formerly preserved in the church at Staveley, it is thus entered: "Obitus Petri Frecheville, Armigeri, qui obijt octodecimo die mensis Apl' Anno D'ni [millesimo] quingentessimo tertio, l'ra d'nical. A. cujus aïe propicietur Deus. Amen." MS. Add. 6668, p. 301.

The death of his wife, Matilda, daughter of Thomas Wortley, Esq. is thus recorded in the same document: "Obitus Matilde Frechwylle, quond. ux. Petri Frechwylle, Armigeri, que obijt xii [die] Sept. Anno D'ni Mill'mo CCCC° lxxxix. l'ra dominical. D. cujus aïe propicietur Deus. Amen." Ib. Thoroton fixes her death to the year 1482, p. 43.

The effigies of this Peter Frecheville and his wife Maud are placed on the tomb, and according to Holles, behind him kneel eight sons, and behind her seven daughters, many of whom must have died infants, since they are not noticed in any visitation or record I have seen. The date of the death of the above John is adopted by Wolley from the Inquisition, 5 Hen. VIII. which fixes it to 27 Jan. 24 Hen. VII. [1509]. The prior Inquisition of 1 Hen. VIII. says 5 Feb. 1509, which is followed by Thoroton. In the old Mass Book already cited, it is entered thus: "Obitus Johannis Frechewill, arm. qui obiit vicesimo vij° die Januarij, A° D'ni M° CCCCC° octavo, litera dominicalis E. cujus aïe propicietur Deus. Amen;" which, allowing for the difference of calculating the commencement of the year, agrees with the latter Inquisition. On his tomb, at Staveley, the date is uncertain, from the brass having been injured.[d]

Among the Frecheville Evidences is, "Exemplification of an Act of Parliament, to restore to Elizabeth Sotell, cousen & heire to Walter Nuttill, all such lands as the said Walter Nuttill and Anthony his father lost, by their attainder of treason, 17 Edw. IV. 1476," p. 41, and from another document in the same collection it appears that she was the widow of .... Meverell, and was married to John Frechville, 19 H. VII. 1503, who settled on her a jointure of 24*l.* per annum. Ib. p. 46. Cf. MS. Lansd. 207 F. p. 164. In Cole's abstract of the escheat, 1 Hen. VIII. MS. Harl. 756, p. 346, the wife of the above John F. senior is called "Eliz. fil. Dracote."

"Inq. capt. ap. Derb. 1 Aug. 20 Hen. VIII. post mort. Eliz. Delvys, vid. que obiit xxvj die Maii, a° xvj°. Hen. VIII. Et Petrus Fretchevile fuit consang. et her. viz. fil. Joh. fil. Joh. The Inquisition also recites the descent of the two parts of Staveley in fee-tail, in the same terms as the Inq. taken 8 Hen. VI. from Ralph Frechville (who died 1325) to Sir Peter Frechville, named in the writ. It also mentions the sale of the one-third part of Staveley to him by the Earl of Cumberland, and the conveyance of the manor, &c. from Sir Francis Leake, to the same, by fine and recovery, term. Pasch. 30 Hen. VIII.

The period of his death, as usual, is variously stated. The Inquisition says 5 Nov. 1558. Mr. Wolley writes (perhaps by inadvertency) 1 Nov. 1558; and Thoroton places it in 5 Ph. and Mary. In the Frechville Obituary it is thus entered: "Obitus Petri Frechvile, Militis, qui obijt octo (sic) die mensis Novembris, Anno Dñi Mill'mo ccccc decimo octavo. cujus aïe," &c. which must be a blunder of the transcriber.

The same Margaret in 28 Eliz. bought of Godfrey Foljambe three farms in Hauley for 335*l.* and in 30 Eliz. two other farms of Tho. [h] A more circumstantial abstract of this Inquisition is given in two volumes of Wolley's Collections, MSS. Add. 6697, p. 428. 6710, p. 274. It thence appears, that Peter Frecheville held at his death: 1. The manor of Staveley, with lands in Staveley, Staveley-Woodthorpe, Staveley-Netherthorpe, Inkersall, Barley, Haugh, Hauley, and Coldaston; half of the rectory of Staveley, and the advowson of the other half of the church of Staveley; held in cap. for 1 knts. fee, worth per ann. 63*l.* 2. The manor of Alvaston, al's Alveston, al's Alwaston, and the manor of Stukeley al's Steteley, with lands in Alvaston, Steteley, Thurleston, Ambaston, Bolton, and Spondon, and the advowson of the church of Alvaston; held in capite, for one-twentieth of a knts. fee; worth per ann. 14*l.* 3. The manor of Hauley, and lands in Hauley, Over-Hauley, and Nether-Hauley; held in cap. for one twentieth of a knight's fee; worth per ann. 14*l.* A mess. &c. in Palterton and Scarclive; held in socage of the Earl of Shrewsbury; worth 40*s.* 5. A mess. &c. in Chesterfield and Newbold; held in like manner; worth 3*l.* 6. A capital mess. &c. in Inkersell (late belonging to Geo. Chaworth) held in cap. for one-hundredth of 1 K. f. worth 4*l.* per ann.

[i] From the dates in this pedigree, the compiler must evidently have had access to the Frecheville Evidences, and I have little doubt that St. George was the Herald alluded to by Col. Colepeper, as having made the abstract of them, re-copied in MS. Harl. 7335.

Mr. Wolley has, in this branch of the pedigree, committed a strange blunder, by calling the wife of Sir Gervase Holles Elizabeth, instead of Frances, and then entering as children of Peter Frechville by his 2d wife a Frances, whom he marries to Geo. Holles (an error of the copyist in MS. Harl. 1093), and Gervase, and consequently omitting Elizabeth, daughter of the 1st wife, who married Will. Tyrwhitt.

The will of Sir Peter Frecheville is dated 16 March, 1632, and was proved 29 May 1634. In it he desires to be buried at Staveley: he leaves his manors of Staveley and Staveley-Woodthorpe, with lands, &c. in Staveley, Staveley-Woodthorpe, Staveley-Netherthorpe, Nether Hauley, Middle Hauley, West Hauley, Echington, &c. and in Dronfield, Woodhouse, Palterton, &c. to his only son and heir John, and to his male issue, in default of which, to Ralph Frecheville his son's god-son; and to Isabel his wife he leaves a quarter part of the manor of Barlebrough, &c. purchased from the feoffees of the Earl of Devon. MS. Harl. 7602, voc. Staley.

The date of his death in the pedigree is taken from his tomb at Staveley (Collectanea, i. 36) and is two days earlier than stated in the Inquisition.

(70.) Visitation of Derbyshire by Sir Will. Dugdale, 1664, in College of Arms, Pegge's Derbyshire Collections, vol. iv. and tomb at Staveley, Collectanea, i. 36. Col. Colepeper states her death to have taken place 11 March, 1618 (MS. Harl. 6833, f. 1, 7335, p. 118); but he is, probably, in error.

(71.) Mr. Wolley has given no reference to any proof of this marriage. She is mentioned, however, in Sir Peter's will, and survived him. She had no issue.

(72.) The period of Lord Frecheville's birth is variously stated: "Nativitas Johannis Frechvile, filius (sic) predict. Petri, qui natus erat secundo die Martij." MS. Add. 6668, p. 301. Col. Colepeper fixes his birth on 4 Dec. 1607. MS. Harl. 7335, p. 118, and in a paper copied below, it is (erroneously) said to have been 26 Feb. 1577. The Visitation of 1611 declares him to have then been only five years old, and the Inquisition at his father's death, in April 1635, states him then to be 27 years of age and upwards.

In 1639 he was made gentleman of the Privy Chamber. Carlisle's Inquiry, &c. p. 141, 8vo. 1829.

Among Wolley's collections is an account of this nobleman written as a sequel to Dugdale's account, Bar. ii. 482, and as it contains some curious information, it is here transcribed: "To particularize somewhat further of this noble person, in the martyred King's service he commanded a complete regiment of horse, consisting of eight troops, and also four full regiments of good foot, and was a most active man; at a time marching his own troop only, on the east or peat moors, he met with Capt. Edward Revell's troop, Capt. Ashenhurst's, and Capt. Lingart's, and charged them with so great vigour, that he forced them to flee into the house of Mr. Eyre of Hassop; who forthwith sending to Staveley for a company of his foot, took them all prisoners, and brought them to his house at Staveley, being then garrisoned at his own proper charge. The sequestration laid on this worthy person was great; but, as I have been informed, was something mitigated by friendship, by some of the adverse party. After the happy restoration of K. Charles the Second, that King gave him the command of a troop of horse in the Royal regiment of Horse Guards, commanded by the Earl of Oxford, which, sometime before his death, he parted with to that worthy loyall gentleman Sir Tho. Slingesby, Bart. son and heir to Sir Henry Slingesby, who with Dr. Huyt was beheaded at Tower Hill. [Charles II.] also made him governor of his ancient city of York, and the tower of York, with gratifications of that king's favors for entertainment of the military officers in that garrison. Soon after the happy Restoration, he was elected a parliamentman for the shire. To say no more of him, he had the worthy character justly bestowed on him, which he left to posterity, viz. that he was a great courtier, an expert soldier, and a good com monwealth's man, to which may be added his hospitality and charity.

"He first [secondly] married 1630, Sarah, daughter to Sir John Harrington, Knt. by whom he had issue three daughters, Christian, wedded to Charles then Lord St. John (eldest son to John, Marquess of Winchester); Elizabeth to Philip, son and heir of Sir Phil. Warwick, Knt.; and Frances, to [Col. Thomas] Culpeper of[k] . In some writings she is said to be da. & heir of Sir J. Harrington, Knt.

"Secondly [thirdly] Anna-Charlotta, daughter and heir to Sir Henry de Vick, Knt. late Chancellor of the Garter,[l] but by her he had no issue. She is now living, anno 1710, and in quality of second Lady of Honor to our sovereign lady Queen Anne, whose life may Almighty God long preserve!

"Christian Frecheville, daughter to John Frecheville and Sarah his wife, was born the 13th day of Dec. 1633, being Friday, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon; she was married to Charles Lord St. John, eldest son to John lord Marquess of Winchester and Earl of Wiltshire, the 28th of Feb. 1651, and departed this life the 22d of July 1653, dying in childbed. John Pawlet, her son, was born the 15 of July 1653, and dyed upon the 28 of the same month (taken out of a Bible late John Lord Frechevill's) under written, Ve misero patri superstiti! being the hand-writing of the same John Frecheville.

Mownt, mownt my soul, adieu, vaine world, adieue,

"John Lord Frescheville, some years before his death, sold his manor of Staveley (reserving his life in it) to William Earle of Devonshire, the deed bears date,[m] (sic); his seal thereto appendant is, viz. (sic)

In consequence of the services rendered by this John Frecheville to the Royal cause, and on his petition to the King, a warrant was signed by Charles the First, at Oxford, 25 March 1644, for his creation as a Peer, by the style of Lord Frecheville of Staveley, Musard, and Fitz-Ralph, to him and his heirs male,

[m] In MS. Harl. 6820, p. 100, the manor is stated to have been sold in 1680, for the sum of 2600*l.* This was afterwards made the subject of much litigation by Col. lawfully begotten; and the following letter was written to him by Lord Digby, to apprise him of the circumstance:

"Mr Frechvile,

"I have delivered unto this bearer, Mr Tomkins, by his Ma. command, a warrant to confer upon you the dignity of a Baron of England, wherein his Ma. hath done himselfe much right, in placing so fitly the markes of his favour, which no man congratulates more hertely than your faithfull friend & servant,

GEORGE DIGBY.

"I send you herewithall a Commission to bee Colonell Generall of Derbyshire, in case you shall be invited to accept of it by an opinion of any remaining possibility of doing his Ma. service in those partes. Brecanock, 29 Aug. 1644." Frech. Ev. p. 97.

The preamble of the patent is copied in the same volume which contains the above letter (see p. 10 n.) and takes notice of the services of Ralph de Frecheville in the Scottish wars under King Edward I. for which he was summoned to Parliament, in 1297. Also the honour of knighthood received by Sir Peter Frecheville (great-grandfather of the present John) for his signal valour shewn at the battle of Muskleborough, in the reign of Edw. VI. and the loyalty of the said John Frecheville "exprest unto us through the whole course of this barbarous and unnaturall rebellion; who repayred unto us in our weakest condition, with considerable forces by him raysed and brought in, at the erection of our royall standard at Nottingham, with which he hath since performed many eminent services against the rebels, as well as in the first happy defeate given to the best of their cavalrye in the fight neere Worcester, as at Kineton, Braynford, Marleborough, Newbery, and many other places, where he hath received severall wounds."

This patent, however, by reason of the distractions of the period, and the absence of the intended Peer, never passed the Great Seal; so that immediately after the Restoration another petition was addressed by the same John Frecheville to the Crown, praying the accomplishment of the patent; and a warrant to that effect was signed by the King at Whitehall, 23 June 1660, to create him a Baron by the same title as above, "to him and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, and for want of such, to Elizabeth his eldest daughter, and the heirs of her body, and for want of such, unto Frances his youngest daughter, and to her heirs for ever." Frech. Ev. p. 106, and MS. Harl. 6820. p. 99(c). The patent, however, did not pass till the 16th of March, 1664, and limited the title "to him and the heirs male of his body." Mr. Wolley, on the authority of Thoroton, has erroneously dated it 17 Feb. 1664, and Dugdale in vol. ii. p. 482 (by a misprint) the 6th March,[o] 1664, for in p. 7, he has it right. The grant of supporters to Lord Frecheville's arms by Sir Edw. Walker, Garter, is dated 15 Apr. 1665, and recites the preamble to his patent, as above quoted. The supporters are thus blasoned: Two angels, winged and robed Or, each holding an arrow of the First, headed and fletched Arg. wearing coats of maile and armour, with morions on their heads, Proper, in the front of each a cross patée fitché Or." MS. Harl. 1052. f. 199 b. In Sir Edw. Walker's own MS. of Arms of Nobility, in the College of Arms, Lord Frecheville's coat is tricked with eleven quarterings, the same as in the window of Staveley church (see Collectanea, i. 35.) except that the coat of Trehampton, checky Or and Az. on an inescutcheon Ar. a bend Gu. is inserted between Brues and Dive. His motto is given on the same authority, "Qui aime le Roy, aime le patrie." The same quarterings, with the addition of Harrington (making twelve in all) is used as a seal by Col. Colepeper. See several original impressions attached to his letters, in MS. Harl. 7005. f. 206 b.

In 1677, Lord Frecheville claimed to be allowed to sit in the House of Peers under the Writ of Summons to his ancestor in 25 Edw. I. but as no evidence was adduced to prove a sitting under that writ, or subsequent summons, the claim was not admitted.[p]

Lord Frecheville died at London, on Friday, 31 March 1682, at 4 o'clock A. M. æt. 76, and was buried at Staveley, Sunday,

Copies of Lord Frecheville's Case (rather incorrectly drawn up); of the Attorney General's Report; and of the subsequent Petition to the House of Lords, are inserted among the Frecheville Evidences, pp. 114--118. From the same volume it appears also, that Lord F. had consulted Sir William Dugdale, as to the discontinuance of summonses to Parliament in other baronial families, and the resumption of seats under the ancient writs; and a certain number of cases, viz. those of Charlton, Lord Powis, Thomas Lord Mowbray, John Baron Darcie, William Earl of Ferrars, and Andrew Baron Windsor, were sent to Lord F. with a note from Dugdale, dated 25 Feb. 1677. Ib. pp. 108—113.

There are a great many original letters written by Lord Frecheville, his second wife Lady Anne Frecheville, and his daughters and their husbands, in MS. Harl. 7005, from which many particulars may be gleaned of the private affairs of this family. One of these letters addressed by Mrs. Colepeper to her father, 23d March, 1676-7, relative to an annuity proposed to be settled on her, is printed in Wilson's Hist. of St. Laur. Pountney, p. 240.

This Col. Colepeper was son of Sir Thomas Colepeper, of St. Stephen's, in the parish of Hackington, Kent, and is the individual who transcribed the MS. of Frecheville Evidences, and compiled the voluminous Adversaria, (MSS. Harl. 7587—7607) to which I have so often referred in the course of these researches. In these volumes is contained an immense mass of information relative to the lands and descent of the Frecheville family, and more particularly to the claims advanced by Col. C. in right of his wife, to the title and estate of Lord Frecheville, and to his own various schemes and undertakings; but the whole is written so negligently, and with so many errors, as to make these collections of less value than they otherwise would be.

The seal, of white wax, is round, and appears to have originally measured two inches and a half in diameter. It represents a knight in mail, on horseback, a shield on his left arm, and a long sword brandished in his right hand. The legend is gone.

It appears from a charter printed in Nash's Worcestershire, vol. ii. p. 60, that Simon de Mans was contemporary with a Robert Bishop of Worcester. There were two successive Bishops of this name, Robert de Norhill 1186-1190, and Robert Fitz-Ralph 1191-1192.

Seal, of white wax, and oval; being a female figure, from an antique cameo, set in a wide border, with this inscription: SIGILLVM ALDE BLOETE.

The three seals are appended to their respective deeds by narrow parchment labels.

The notices of the family of Despenser which occur in these deeds contribute to the early history of that family, respecting which (as will be seen by the three different lines printed by Mr. Baker in his Northamptonshire, vol. i. p. 108) genealogists have greatly differed. The wife of Almaric Lord le Despenser, who was Steward to King Richard the First, and father of Thurstan Lord le Despenser, has been said to be Elizabeth, daughter of Adam and again of Rowland Bluet, the latter of whom had the custody of the said Thurstan in 11 John. In Vincent's old pedigrees (in Coll. Arm) the name of Alda Bluet occurs, and this last name is now confirmed by the charter above. The name of Ralph le Despenser is new to the pedigree. It seems not improbable that it was the same Almaric who had first married (see Baker, i. 130) Amabil, daughter of Walter de Chesnei; as Juliana, daughter and heiress of that marriage, was married to William Bardolph in 8 Rich. I.

CHARTERS RELATING TO THE FAMILY OF DE ALTA RIPA, AND NUNNERY OF GOKEWELL, CO. LINCOLN.

From the Muniments of the Cotton family.

The Editors of the New Monasticon did not meet with any charters relating to this Nunnery; of which very little has been known, except that it was founded by William de Alta Ripa before 1185, being then named in a rental of the Templars, who received from the Nuns of Gokewell the rent mentioned in one of the charters which follow.

The site of the Nunnery is at first mentioned by the name of Manby, a hamlet in the parish of Broughton, in which Gokewell is also situated. It is possible the site was changed; or, on the other hand, the name of Goucwell may not have been assumed by the Nunnery for some time after its foundation.

In the first charter William de Alta Ripa grants Manby to his son Anthony, with the consent of his eldest son Peter.

RELEASE OF THE PRIOR AND FRATERNITY OF KALENDARIES IN BRISTOL, OF PROPERTY IN BRISTOL, TO THE ABBEY OF GLASTONBURY, 1466.

From the original, now in the possession of John Bowyer Nichols, Esq. F.S.A. and the same which is noticed in Tanner's Notitia and in Barrett's Bristol, p. 457, as "penes Petrum le Neve, arm. Norroy." P. Le Neve has written upon it, "Posted to Notetia Monasteca." There is also upon it, in the handwriting of the seventeenth century, the signature of "John Felton," a previous owner as it may be presumed.

Seal of red wax, a broad oval, two inches high by one inch and three quarters wide, and representing three men's heads as if in conversation, with a background of foliage. Legend SIG..... DE BRISTOLLE. The legend was probably more perfect when Le Neve possessed the deed; as he has written "Sigillum Prioratus domus Calendar Brestoll;" and again, "Sigill' Prioris domus Kalendar Bristoll." On the label is written (by the original notary), "Magist' Joh's Harlow." It is suggested in Barrett, p. 453, that the three heads "were probably designed to represent the three Persons in the Trinity;" there is no indication of such an intention, and they were doubtless drawn for three members of the fraternity, as on many other seals of collegiate bodies.

The Prior John Harlowe, "de Stoke," became rector of St. Stephen's in Bristol in 1465, and of Allhallows in 1484, and died Dec. 6, 1486. (Barrett, pp. 441, 511.)

John Shipward, the first witness, was Mayor of Bristoll in 1455, 1463, and 1469, and was interred Dec. 14, 1473, in the church of St. Stephen's, of which he built the magnificent tower.

"Agnes, wife of the late William Canynges," was grandmother of the great Bristol merchant of that name, the widow of William Canynges, six times Mayor, and M.P. for the city, who died in 1396. (See Dallaway's Essay on the Life and Times of Wm. Canynges.)

The Kalendaries occupied for their church the south-western part of the church of Allhallows. (William de Worcestre.) They had five chantries. (Barrett, p. 456.) Richard le White, whose chantry is mentioned in this deed, was vicar of All Saints 1326.

In the Survey of the possessions of Glastonbury abbey, temp. Hen VIII. the same property which was conveyed by this deed, is clearly described as "certayne lands and tenementes lying within the town of Bristoll, in the countie of Gloucester, whiche were only to the Abbat's use, that is to saye, iiij small tenementes, one square close, and a litle gardeyne, the rente whereof is by the yere C*s*. Also there are iij severall small tenements in the saide towne of Brystoll, whiche were to the use of the Convent, and doe rent by the yere xx*s*. viij*d*." (New Monast. i. 15.)

CHARTER OF WILLIAM DE EBROICIS, OR DEVEREUX, GRANTING TO THE PRIORY OF HEREFORD, HIS LAND IN BALINGHAM, CO. HEREFORD.

From the original in the possession of George Steinman Steinman, Esq. F.S.A.

William Devereux was one of the rebellious Barons slain at the battle of Evesham in 1295.

At the Taxation of Pope Nicholas IV. in 1291, the Priory of Hereford possessed at Balingesham two carucates, each worth 1*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.; fixed rents 18*s*. pleas and perquisites 3*s*. In 1534 the fixed rents with the farm of the demesne lands at Balingham within the limits of Irchenfeld, in the county of Hereford, amounted together to 5*l*. 12*s*. 8*d*.

CHARTER OF GODFREY GIFFARD, BISHOP OF WORCESTER, 1258-1301, TO HIS NEPHEW ALEXANDER DE FRYVILE, GRANTING LAND AT MAWENE (NOW MARDEN) IN HEREFORDSHIRE.

The original in the possession of G. Steinman Steinman, Esq. F.S.A.

An account of the family of Freville will be found in Dugdale's Baronage, ii. 103; but it was a mistake of Dugdale that this Alexander was summoned to Parliament in 1 Edw. III. (nor were ever any of the family) see Nicolas's Synopsis of the Peerage, p. 257. In his will, dated 1301, Bishop Giffard bequeathed "domino Alexandro de Frivill x libr. loricam unam caligis ferreis, et coopertorio ad unum equum, et meliorem equum quem voluerit eligere de carectariis meis;" and "domine Johanne, uxori domini Alexandri Friville, zonam unam et fermaculum aureum precii quinque marcarum." Thomas's Worcester Cathedral, Appendix, pp. 79, 80. The Bishop remembers a wide circle of his relations, and probably uses the word "nepos" (applied to several persons in his will, though not to Friville as it is here) with reference to his cousins as well as his nephews.

Dugdale (Baronage, i. 126) quotes a "Vet. Membr. penes .... Ingelby de Repley, in com. Ebor." for his statement that John Mowbray the first was born 2 Novemb. 14 Edw. I.; and in his Monasticon, ii. 194, he has printed from a Cartulary of Newburgh (MS. Cotton. Cleop. C. III.) a history of the Mowbray family, in which John the second is stated to have been born at "Heningham, anno 1321," the third John at Epworth 1326, and the fourth at Epworth 1365. Glover does not state whence he took the following memoranda, which are in his MS. separated by a line from the article last printed; but it is not improbable it was the old parchment mentioned in the Baronage. It appears however that "2 Nov." was a misreading for "2 Non. Septembris;" and in the Monasticon for "Heningham, anno 1321," we should read "Hovingham, anno 1310," and for "1326," 1341. The last date nearly agrees with the Inq. p. m. of John Mowbray the second, 35 Edw. III. (1361-2) when John his son and heir was found to be twenty-two years of age. Hovingham is in the North Riding of Yorkshire; Epworth was the mansion of the Mowbrays in the Isle of Axholme, in Lincolnshire.

CHURCH NOTES OF BURNHAM, CO. BUCKINGHAM. BY THE REV. WILLIAM COLE, F.S.A.

Mr. Cole was Vicar of Burnham from 1774 to 1782, and before that period had taken considerable interest in the parish, of which his half-brother, Dr. Apthorp, had been previously incumbent. He made large and multifarious collections regarding it, which are interspersed among his collections, as may be seen by his MS. Index to his first XLVI volumes, p. 64. Of these the most important relate to the Abbey and to the Church: the latter, together with his catalogue of the incumbents, and extracts from the registers, are now arranged and printed.

(Cole's Collections, vol. XXXII. MS. Addit. Brit. Mus. 5833, f. 1.)

Dec. 4, 1760.—BURNHAM IN BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

The church here is a very neat pile of building, consisting of a large nave, two side aisles, leaded, and a large chancel tiled, as is the nave and north and west porches. The tower stands on the south side of the chancel, and has on it a wooden turret, and in them five bells and a clock.

It gives name to the Deanery in which it stands, and is in the Archdeaconry of Buckingham. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and formerly was in the patronage of the abbey which was in this parish. It afterwards came into the hands of Mr. Hawtrey, who, being Fellow of Eton College, at his death gave it to them; and they presented, for the first time, my brother Stephen Apthorp, D. D. and Fellow of Eton, who quitted two better livings in Hampshire for it; but, it lying near to Eton, and commodious to him on that account, he was induced to take it on the death of Mr. Tate, who held it fifty-two years. It is a vicarage of about 160*l.* per annum.[a]

The altar stands on an eminence of four large steps under a noble east window, and has the Creed, Lord's Prayer, and Decalogue painted on the altar-piece, and has old carved rails before it, which came out of Eton College chapel, when that was new ornamented, which was before I went there to school. There are abundance of monuments in all parts of the chancel and church.

[a] Now improved to 505*l.*—Return of 1831.

Within the rails on the south wall, and between two windows stopt up, the lowest a lancet one, under which runs the rails to the other side, is placed a mural monument of various-coloured marble, and within an oval between two pillars, is the bust of a clergyman in his gown and cassock, with a ruff and skull-cap, whiskers and beard, all very well carved; at the top, over a pediment, and between two death's heads, are these arms: Argent, on a chevron inter three boar's heads coupé, and long necks to them, Azure, 3 Plates. Under the bust, on a black marble table, the following inscription:

"JOHANNES WRIGHT, hujus Ecclesiæ Pastor pius probus et pacificus.
Legite, qui transitis, et attendite.
Noli peccare, nam videt Deus, astant Angeli;
Testabitur conscientia, accusabit Diabolus, cruciabit infernus.
Sic vive cum hominibus tanquam Deus videat;
Sic loquere cum Deo, tanquam homines audiant.
Duo animi a Deo dati Custodes, Pudor, et Timor;
Qui Pudorem amisit bestiæ par est, qui Timorem excussit bestiâ pejor est.
Dies ultimus salubriter ignoratur ut semper proximus esse credatur.
Qui populum vivens cœlesti pane refecit,
Qui canit in cœlis Alleluja Deo,
Illi defuncto poni monumenta Johannes Filius hic fecit sumptibus ista suis.
Johannes filius natu maximus obiit Welliæ in Comitatu Somerset, decimo Novembris 1617, et sepultus est in medio Chori Ecclesiæ
Cathedralis ibidem decimo tertio mensis ejusdem."

This Mr. John Wright was inducted to this vicarage upon All Saints Day Nov. 1, 1561, and was buried here May 7, 1594.

Close under this monument on the floor, with their heads touching the rails and the altar, lie three black marble slabs; that close to the wall, under the monument, has this inscription and arms, viz. three lions passant en bend between two bars gemelles; or the three lions passant [guardant] on a bend cotised, as it is on a stone in King's College chapel for one of this family. See my first volume of MS. Collections for Cambridgeshire, p. 77. On this monument in Burnham church is a crest of a lion passant; but whether guardant, as the arms, I don't know; they not being so in my notes, which were taken above a twelvemonth ago, I writing them in this book, this 26th of December, St. Stephen, 1761; too long since for my memory to assist me in this trifle. Under them is this epitaph:

"Honorando patri EDWARDO HAWTREY, antiqua familia oriundo, nec minus ingenio et pietate quam genere eximio. Qui Etonæ spes, Cantabrigiæ delitiæ, ibidem sacri pulpiti diu insigne ornamentum; inde Burnhamiæ vicarius, Denhamiæ pastor, fidem Catholicam, non minus inculpabili vitâ quã concionibus promovit, donec exulante, cum Carolo, Justitiâ, et ipse (uti par erat) hinc expulsus, non nisi reductis iis est restitutus, ubi per novennium pie predicavit, pie vixit, et pie demum obiit. Filius devotissimus Johannes Hawtrey, honoris pietatisque ergo hoc monumentum dicavit. Obiit An° Dom. 1669. Ætat. suæ 69."

By the parish register it appears that he died Oct. 29, and was buried Nov. 1, 1669; so that if the date of his age is exact on his tomb, it would make him 22 years of age when he was admitted from Eton College to King's in Cambridge: for it is said in MS. Historiette of that College, vol. xv. p. 90, that he was admitted in the year 1622; but probably the monumental date may be faulty. It is said in the MS. aforesaid, that he was the son of Ralph Hawtrey, of Rislip, Esq. and was Bachelor of Divinity, and that marrying the widow of Mr. Wright, vicar of this church, by whom he had several children, he was provided to this living in 1643, and was ejected in 1650, for having two livings; which, if true, hardly corresponds with the meaning of the epitaph.

Close to this, on the second black marble, are these inscriptions:

"Hic jacet JOHANNES WRIGHT, fidelis Dei minister et quondam pastor hujus Ecclesiæ pius probus pacificus, qui obiit Maij .....

Christi Passio, Mundi Redemptio.
Orimur, Morimur.
Sequentur qui non precesserunt."

"Heere lyeth also JOHN WRIGHT, the soñe of Randal Wright, who was the soñe of the aforesaid John Wright, all Vicars of this church successively, who deceased May the 18, Año Dñi 1642. Pulchra sepultura est pietas."

The date of the first part of this epitaph, I suppose I have omitted; for it is not in my notes; but the register supplies it in a great measure, as it tells us he was buried May 7, 1594; Randal Wright, his son, was inducted into this vicarage, May 19, 1594, and was buried June 16, 1623; and his son John Wright was inducted into the same vicarage 19th June 1623, and was buried here May 21, 1642.

Close to the last lies the third black marble, which goes exactly half way the breadth of the chancel; on it is this inscription:

"Heare lyeth the body of JOANE WRIGHT, the worthy wife of John Wright, Pastor of this church, which Joane deceased the laste of December 1589. Death is to mee advantage."

About three feet to the north wall, and in a line with the other three, lies an old grey marble, with these arms on a brass shield, viz. three cross-crosslets fitché en bend, between two bendlets,[a] and a crescent in the sinister chief; impales a chevron between three leopard's faces; and under them, on a small plate of brass, these four verses:

"Knatchbulli conjux, Wentworthi septima proles,
Tempora post vitæ bis duodena suæ,
Anna immaturo comisit membra sepulchro;
Et quo nupta fuit mense, sepulta fuit."

In the register of burials is this entry under the year 1591:

"Mrs. Anne Knatchbull, the wife of Norton Knatchbull, 19 Oct. 1591," which I take for granted refers to this monument, both as the work is of that time, and the impaled coat is the arms of Wentworth.

By this lie two old grey marbles, small and contiguous, and near the south wall.

Against the south wall, within the altar rails, and near the east window, is a very handsome monument of black and white marble, containing the half-lengths of a man in a gown, with a book in one hand, and a woman with a sort of veil over her, and a handkerchief in one hand, under two arches between two black marble Doric pillars, the capitals of which are gilt, and above are these arms, between two angels sounding trumpets; Azure, a griffon passant and chief Or, with a crescent on the chief for a difference; Crest [on a wreath] a griffon Or. There had been painted at the bottom the same arms impaling the woman's coat; but they are now worn away, and only the colour of the field of her coat is to be seen, on the edges, which was gules, and the shade of the figure of a human leg; which are the arms of Balle of Cambridgeshire and Suffolk, viz. Gules, a human leg coupé at the thigh and erased at the foot Argent. The family of Balls of Newmarket gave them so; and with the difference of a falchion pierced through the knee by the name of Balle of Little Shelford, near Cambridge. Below the two said figures are two others very small and kneeling, the one in a military, the other in a lawyer's habit, and below them on a black marble tablet is this inscription:

"Here under lyeth interred the body of GEORGE EVELYN, of Huntercombe in this parish, Esq. the son of Thomas Evelyn, of Ditton, in the county of Surrye, Esqr. by Frances Harvy, his wife, sister to the Lord Harvy. He departed this life on the 7 day of August, Anno Dñi 1657, aged 64.

"And also the body of DUDLEY EVELYN his wife, daughter of William Balle of Catlidge, in the county of Suffolk, Esq. who dyed the third day of Septemb. Anno Dñi 1661, aged 61.

I suppose Catlidge, in Suffolk, is a mistake for that town in Cambridgeshire; and I have the more reason to believe it to be so, as I don't know of any such town in Suffolk, and that the name of Dudley, as a Christian name, is very common at Catlidge or Kirtling as the true name ought to be spelt, in Cambridgeshire, where Dudley Lord North lies buried; as also Mrs. Dudleia North, whose life is wrote by Ballard, p. 414, who died 25th April 1712. And there was also a Sir Dudley North, brother to the Lord Keeper, of that family.

On the same north wall, immediately above the rails, is a very handsome and elegant mural monument, adorned with cherubs and other ornaments, and at the top these arms: Azure, a chevron Argent inter three ears of wheat Or, with a crescent Argent for a difference in chief: Crest, a peacock Or, winged and beaked Gules. On the table is this inscription on white marble:

"Near this place, in the vault of the family, lyes the body of WILLIAM EYRE,[b] youngest son of Thomas Eyre of Huntercombes in this parish, Esqr. He was a young gentleman, adorned with all the accomplishments of an ingenuous and liberal education; of so sedate, courteous, and winning a behaviour, so free from all emotions of passion and resentment, that he was esteemed and beloved by all. If he had lived he would have proved an ornament, as he had been a comfort, to his family. He died 30 July 1731, in the 19 year of his age."

This young gentleman was my school-fellow at Eton.

The steps up to the altar are made of some old stones disrobed of their brasses. On the floor, at the foot of the steps, lie three large blue marbles; the first lying about four feet from the south wall, has this inscription on it:

"Here lyeth the body of RICHARD PURSELL, of Burnham, gent. who dyed the 3 of Dec. 1729; aged 66 years 8 months.

"Also, here lyeth the body of Mrs. MARY COX, who departed this life, September the 8, 1691. Annoq; Ætatis suæ 67.

"Likewise the body of ELIZth PURSELL, wife of the abovesaid Richd Pursell, gent. and ownly daughter of Mrs. Cox, (also of their children), obiit 14 Dec. 1702, ætatis 33

"Also the body of Mrs. MARY PURSELL, of Burnham, and daughter of George Haus, Esq. of Kingsenton;[c] she died August the 19, 1752; aged 60 years."

About two feet to the north lies the second marble, with this coat at the top, Ermine, on a pile a lion's head jessant a fleur-de-lis. Crest, an eagle's head erased. Underneath is this inscription:

"HENRY SOMNER, Esq. grandson of George Evelyn, of Huntercomb, Esq. departed this life July 29, 1736, in the 48 year of his age.

"Here also lyeth the body of Mrs. ELIZABETH SOMNER, mother of the above-named Henry Somner, who departed this life on the eleventh of May 1738, in the 70 year of her age."

Close to this, and about two feet from the north wall, lies the third marble, having these arms at top in a lozenge, viz. on a fess three lozenges, and under it this inscription:

[b] "William, son of Tho. Eyre, of Huntercombe, Esq. who died in London of the small pox, bur. 20 Aug. 1731." Parish Register. (MS. Cole, vol. xlvi. p. 435.)

"Here lyeth the body of M. ANNA FEILDING, daughter of Edward Feilding, Esq. of the citty of Bristol, deceased; she departed this life the 15 of July, in the year of our Lord 1710. Here also lyeth the body of Mr. EDWARD ALLEYN, son and heyre of John Alleyn, Esq. who departed this life the 8 of January 1709, aged 5 years."

On the wall near Mr. Eyre's monument hangs an achievement with these arms belonging to that family, viz. B. a chevron Arg. inter 3 ears of corn and leaved Or, for Eyre; impaling, quarterly, 1 and 4, A. a cross flory Sab. inter four mullets Gules; 2 and 3, Or, on a bend engr. Gul. three cross-crosslets fitché A. Crest, a peacock; and Motto, "MORS JANUA VITÆ." It was for a Mr. Eyre.

On the same north wall, about the middle of the chancel, between the two first north windows now open nearest the altar, is fixed a neat old mural monument of variegated marble, with these arms at top, in a shield of 15 Quarters,[d] 5, 5, and 5; and Crest, a griffon passant Argent. 1st. Sa. a chevron inter three leopard's faces Or, a crescent Sa. on the chevron for a difference, for Wentworth; 2d. Quarterly A. and Gu. on the A. one a bend Sa. charged with 3 escalops A. and on the Gu. two frets Or, for Spenser; 3d. Or, three chevrons Gu. for Clare; 4th. Or, 3 bars Sa. A. a fess inter two bars gemels Gu. for Badlesmere; 11th. quarterly, 1 and 4, Gu. three shields A.; 2 and 3, A. a fess int. three crosslets Sa. for [Fitz-Simon]; 12th. S. a fess engr. Ermine, a fess checquy O. and B. for [Arden]. At the bottom Wentworth impales Ermine, on a canton Sa. a fleur-de-lys Or, for Aunsham. On the black marble table is this inscription in gold letters:

"Here lyeth buried the body of PAULE WENTWORTH, Esquier, sonne of Sir Nicholas Wentworth, Knight; he dyed the 13 of January 1593, beinge in the 60 yeare of his age, and as he lived most christianlike, so he dyed most comfortably, stronge in Fayth, stedfast in Hope, fervent in Love, a zealouse professoure of the Truth, & an earnest detestor of all Superstition. He tooke to wife Hellen, daughter of Richard Aw'shã, who was before wife to William Tildsley, Esquyer, & had Yssue by her 4 sonnes & 4 daughters; the names of his sonnes weare Francis, Paule, Peter, & William; Frances dyed in his childehode, & lieth here buried: his daughters wear Anne, Hellen, Elizabeth, & Mary; Anne, marryed to Norton Knatchbull, Esquier, dyed & lieth also here buried; Hellen, the second daughter, nowe wife to William Day, Esquier. Here lyeth also the body of Dame JANE WENTWORTH, mother to the same Paule Wentworth, & wyfe to Sir Nicholas Wentworth, whose bodies are here to expect a joyfull Resurrection."

On a compartment below this in gold letters painted on a blue ground, is further added as follows:

"Aunsham pro Amundesham, alias Agmundesham. Anno Domini 1593."

The same two impaled coats, on a brass shield, fixed on a rough marble, which lies north and south just under this monument, are only remaining, the inscription being quite gone. One Peter Wentworth, probably him mentioned in this epitaph, as well as I remember, was a very busy and factious Puritan in the House of Commons against the King and the Bishops; and so was Paul, temp. Eliz.

Close above this, and about four feet from the north wall, lies a handsome black marble slab, with the arms of Antrobus at top, and this inscription below them:

"Sub hoc Marmore conduntur Cineres

Above this, on the north wall, between the two lowest windows, is fixed an elegant mural monument of white marble, adorned with cherubs and foliage, and these arms at top, Lozengy Or and Azure, on a pale Gules three estoiles Or. Crest, an unicorn's head Argent, horn Or, with a wreath of laurel round his neck, issuing from golden rays. On the tablet is this inscription:

" Huic Loco prope absunt Cineres et Amicis Amandus.

Si Fortunam, plura meruit quam tulit.
In memoriam defuncti posuit hoc marmor
Frater { amantissimus / mœstissimus } J. Rogers, A.D. 1731."

On the black marble slab on the floor is affixed an oblong brass plate with the arms of Rogers and Antrobus impaled, close to the engraved arms of Antrobus on the stone, which disfigures it: a crescent is on the pale of Mr. Antrobus's arms on the floor, for a difference; and at the bottom of the stone is this inscription added:

" Under this stone lyes the body of JONATHAN ROGERS, of Stoke-Poges, in the county of Bucks, gentleman; dyed 21 Oct. 1742, aged 64."

On the south wall, near the screen, and just above my brother's servants' pew, is a very elegant large mural monument of black and white marble with these arms at top, viz. Argent, a chevron Or, inter three bucks currant Sable, for Rogers, impaling Antrobus. Crest, a man's head in a helmet Proper. The chevron I suppose should be Sable also, as they are the arms of Rogers of Kent. On the tablet, between two Tuscan pillars, is this inscription:

My ingenious and learned friend, Mr. Thomas Gray, late of Peter House, and now of Pembroke Hall, in Cambridge, where for the sake of so many good libraries he chooses to reside, was nephew to Mrs. Rogers and Mr. Antrobus, both whose fortunes, at least in part, he inherited, and for whom, as I apprehend, he composed the two latter Latin epitaphs.

Mr. Cole here introduces several particulars relative to the Poet Gray, which have been published in his Life by Mr. Mitford.

On the south wall, about three feet from the last mural monument for Mr. Rogers, to the east, is a most elegant mural monument of white marble, with cherubs and other ornaments, with an urn at top, and these arms at bottom in a lozenge, Gules, 6 crescents Or, 3, 2, 1. Under them is this inscription:

" Near this place lyes the body of ELIZABETH DEWELL, late of St. Peter Poor, London, spinster. She was a dutifull and obliging daughter, a very kind and loving sister, a chearfull, pleasant companion, & a faithfull good friend. She dyed the 22 Febr. 1733, aged 50 years."

In the middle of the chancel, and under this last monument, partly close adjoining on the south to Mr. Antrobus his gravestone, lies a large old grey marble with two original brasses on it, and a small brass coat between them, with these arms on it, as well as I could discover, viz. on a chevron between three crescents, or annulets (for I could not well distinguish which), a crescent: on the upper scroll is the following inscription, and below the arms, on another slip of brass, these verses:

"Here lyeth buryed Willm Tyldsley, Esquyer, who departed from this frayle and transytorye Lyffe the XXI day of June, in Anno Dñi MCCCCCLXIII.

"Fessus eram curis, quas vita molesta ferebat:
Optima curaram mors medicina fuit."

Vide Strype's Ecclesiastical Memorials, vol. iii. p. 171 of the Appendix, where he is miscalled Tillxley.

On the same south wall, about the middle of the chancel, and near the steps of the altar, is a very noble monument of white marble, from the ground, and about twelve feet high. On the pediment at the top are these arms; Sable, a chevron Ermine, inter three buck's heads caboshed A.; impaling, A. a lion rampant Sable. Under the pediment is a sarcophagus of red-veined marble, on which lies a coffin covered with a black pall edged with white, and gilt tassels, on which lies a cushion, and on it a death's head. Under the sarcophagus is this inscription in a compartment:

"Now shall I sleep in the dust; thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be. Job 7. 21."

On a white marble tablet below this, is this epitaph.

"In memory of BRIDGET, the beloved and lamented wife of WILLIAM FRIEND of Hitcham, Clerk; she died in the prime of her days, which she seriously employed in discharging the duties of good Christian, a loving wife, and an affectionate mother, of great charity and compassion to the poor, in whose hearts she erected a monument more durable than this marble: she was daughter of William Glover, the worthy Minister of this parish for 40 years, who dyed 1707, aged 77, & of Mary his wife, who dyed 1711, aged 56, by whom he had issue two sons, William, who dyed 1706, aged 19, & Benjamin, a Fellow of King's Col-ledg, a youth of great hopes, dyed 1714, aged 23, all buried here. The said Bridget left two daughters, Anne and Harriotte. Ob. 25 Aug. 1721. Æt. 26."

The nave is divided from the chancel by a screen under a large arch. The north aisle has a large chapel or transept, in which are erected two or three handsome pews, one of which belongs to Mr. Crayle, formerly a Fellow Commoner at Cambridge. The pews are ascended to by some steps, and under them a vault. On the east wall of this transept aisle hang two achievements of the Boyle family: on the first are these arms; Party per bend embattled [crenellé] A. and Gu. a crescent Sable in chief for a difference; encircled with the collar of the Order of the Thistle, the motto on it, "NEMO ME IMPUNE LACESSIT," with St. Andrew hanging in a glory below on a cross. Motto; "HONOR VIRTUTIS PREMIUM." Over the arms is an Earl's coronet: Crest, a lion's head erased, party per pale embattled A. and G. Supporters, two lions rampant, that on the dexter side, per pale embattled G. and A. the other per pale embattled A. and G. This belonged to Charles Earl of Orrery, who was by Queen Anne created Baron of Marston in England. He was Knight of the Order of the Thistle, and died 28 Aug. 1731, in the 57th year of his age. The second achievement of this noble family is thus blasoned, viz. Party per bend embattled [crenellé] A. and G.; impaling Quarterly of four pieces: 1st. B. a ship at anchor, within a double tressure flowered and counter-flowered with fleurs-de-lys Or, for the Earldom of Orkney; 2d and 3d. Quarterly, 1st. and 4th. G. three cinquefoils pierced Ermine, for Hamilton; 2d and 3d. A. a ship with its sails furled up, Sable, for the Earldom of Arran; 4th A. a human heart imperially crowned Proper, on a chief B. three mullets A. for Douglas. Motto, "HONOR VIRTUTIS PREMIUM:" Earl's coronet. Supporters, on the dexter side, a lion rampant parted per pale embattled G. and A.; on the sinister side, an antelope A. attired Or, gorged with a ducal coronet and chain Or. This belonged to John Earl of Orrery, who married in 1728 the Lady Harriot Hamilton, youngest daughter to George Earl of Orkney, who had a most noble house at Clifden, about a mile from this parish, in which the late Prince of Wales, father to our present King, long resided; as also at Taplow, just by it; which was the occasion, I suppose, of these achievements being here.

[Additional note. Lord Orrery lived at Britwell, the house of Mrs. Crayle at present 1778. See his Lordship's Letters from Italy, published by Mr. Duncombe 1773. Preface, p. xiv.]

Upon the same east wall of this north transept, in the middle arch, against a lancet window, hang two other achievements, with these arms on the upper one, in a lozenge frame, viz. Quarterly, 1st and 4th. Argent, a maunch Sable, with a crescent Gules for a difference, for Hastings: 2d and 3d. Party per pale Gules and Azure, a saltire Or, and a crescent Argent in chief for a difference, for Cage. Underneath is wrote:

"HENRY HASTINGS, Esqr. onely childe of his father (whom hee survived), but dyed an infant, at two years and odd weeks old, the XVIII day of Aprill, A^o. Dñi 1658."

On the other larger achievement, in a square frame, is the largest coat I ever met with, having just an hundred quarterings [of Hastings with a crescent for difference, and] the arms of Cage in the centre as an escutcheon of pretence. On each side of this shield are three other coats; those on the dexter side are, 1st. Hastings with an escocheon of pretence, viz. Vert, a fess [cottised] engrailed inter three [pigeons] Or, [each having in its beak a cross formée fitché, all Or, for Port] an Earl's coronet above it; 2d coat, Hastings quartering the said coat, and an escutcheon of pretence, Or, on two bars Gules three water-bougets A. for Willoughby; 3d coat, Hastings above and Willoughby below, impaling, Party per pale Arg. and Azure, a fess inter three fleurs-de-lys, all Counterch. [Freke]; above all, the crest of Hastings, viz. a bull's head erased Sable, horned Or and gorged with a ducal coronet Or. On the sinister side are these three coats of Cage, viz. 1st, Cage with an escutcheon of pretence, Arg. on a fess Azure inter three crescents Gules [paly wavy Gu. and Ar.] three fleurs-de-lys Or [Haynes]; 2d coat, Cage at top, and the last coat at bottom, impale Argent on a pile Az. three martlets Or [Wood]; 3d coat, Cage and an escutcheon of pretence, Or, on a bend cottised Sab. three cinquefoils Or [Sayer]. Crest of Cage above all, viz. a buck trippant Ermine [armed Or].

Mr. Cole has carefully drawn with pen and ink, and coloured, the hundred quarterings of Hastings, on the verso of fol. 18. It would be useless to fill the pages of the Collectanea with what may be found in many printed books.

In a compartment of this achievement below the Arms is the following inscription:

Buck' Esqr. by whom hee had issue onely Henry also defunct and buried with his father in the vault hereunder, who dyed the viiith of Maye Ao 1656."

Britwell is in this parish, where probably Mr. Hastings might chuse to live; as Sir [Henrye] Hastings, Lord Hastings of Loughborough, lived and died at Stoke-Poges, the adjacent village; which Lord Hastings, being 2d son to [Henry] Earl of Huntingdon, was consequently [second cousin] to this Mr. Hastings of Woodlands; who was [grandson] of that Mr. [Henry] Hastings of the Woodlands, the 2d son of [George] Earl of Huntingdon, of whom a very odd and whimsical character is given in Mr. Francis Peck's collection of Historical Pieces, published in 1740, at the end of his Memoirs of Oliver Cromwell, p. 89. The Cage's of Britwell give the arms and crest as the family of that name in Cambridgeshire, seated at Long-Stow; v. my MS. Collections, vol. ii. p. 126, and vol. xi. p. 11.

On the east wall of the nave on the north side, close to the arch and screen, is a mural monument of white marble, with two black pillars on the sides, and above are these arms alone, viz. B. a chevron A. inter three ears of corn O. for Eyre: below Eyre impales Vert, on a chevron inter three trefoils slipt Or, a crescent Gules for a difference, for Symons. On the table is this inscription:

"Here lyeth buried under this seate the body of EDMUND EYRE, Esqr, late owner of the mannor of Allerds in East Burnham, in the parish of Burnham, in the county of Buck. who married Margaret the daughter of Richard Symons, Esqr. deceased, by whom hee had issue three sonnes and four daughters, of which Margaret, now wife of William Adderley, Gent. is onely liveing, who is daughter and heyre of the sayed Edmund, who dyed the xxv day of December, Anno Dñi 1650, Anno Ætatis LXXIIII."

Near this, in the middle isle, between the pews leading to the north isle or transept, lies an old marble of a greyish colour, with two brasses on it; the upper one a scrole, on which is the epitaph, and below it an oblong square with eight Latin verses:

[e] Cole, in the original, confusing him with the former Lord Loughborough (1558), has written "Henry, son to George;" and then confusing George the first and George the fourth Earl, adds, "consequently uncle." Other corrections have also been found requisite.

"Here lyeth buryed JACOMYNE, sumtyme ye wyfe of WYLL'M TYLDSLEY, who depted frō this frayle & transitory Lyffe ye vth. Septēber, Ao Dñi 1556. Etatę suæ 36.

"Morte immatura jacet hic Jacomina perempta,
Quam tulit in lucem Braia benigna Parens,
Atque Robertus erat Sitellus olim Pater illi:
Willelmo Tyldsley postea nupta fuit.
Cum quo vivebat annos perchara viginti;
Omnibus indulgens, obsequiosa Viro.
Cui conjuncta domum seu sedula Martha regebat,
Dextra pauperibus larga ferebat opem."

The abbey of Burnham was granted to this William Tyldsley; and I was informed by my brother's curate, Mr. Tarrant, who was curate also to Mr. Tate for many years, and from whom he possibly might have his information, that he was a great destroyer of the vicarage of Burnham.

A little to the south of this stone, about two feet, and above it, exactly in the middle of the middle isle, and the foot about ten feet from the chancel door, lies an old grey marble with two inscriptions on it; the uppermost had a man and his wife in brass, now stolen away, and at their feet this on a brass label:

"Of yor Charite pray for the soules of Wyllm Aldriche and Agnes his wyf on whose soules Jhu have mercy. Amen."

Under him are nine sons, and under her fifteen daughters, still remaining in brass. Just below them are the figures of a man in a gown with a pouch by his side, and his wife with a long girdle, in brass, and at their feet this inscription:

"Of yor Charite pray for the soules of Gyles Eyre and Elizabeth his wyf, on whose soules Jhu have mercy. Amen."

At his feet were several sons now gone, and one daughter only remaining at her feet.

On the south of this about a foot, lies a narrow black marble, broke in the middle, on which is this inscription:

"Hic jacet THOMAS EYRE, qui duxit in uxorem Annam Nudegate, per quam habuit Thomam et Edmundum, Elizabetham et Katherinam; & postea duxit in uxorem Mariam Dannet, per quam habuit Egidium. Mortuus vero est decimo die Martii, Añ Dī 1606. Anno etatis suæ sexagesimo septimo."

At the head of these, and exactly before the pulpit, which is affixed to the first pillar on the north side, in the middle aisle, lies a very handsome grey marble stone full of brasses. At the four corners are the arms of Eyre singly all but the first, which has the peacock for the crest: on it are the effigies of a man in a furred gown, with his wife, and between them their children, three boys and two girls: at their feet the following inscription, and below it, on a square of brass, these verses in acrostics:

"Here lyeth buried the body of EDMUND EYRE, Gentelman,[c] late of Est-Burnham, in the county of Bucks, & had issue by his wyfe 3 sonnes & 2 dowghters, who resteth with God.

"T he life I lead may witnesse of my deathe,
H ope in my Christ & Faithe hath saved mee.
O happye I, whilst yet I haled breathe!
M ore now, yea happye in the best degre!
A s firste I liude full fourscore yeeres to dye,
S o last I dyed to live eternallye.

E nsue that sample which I have begone
Y ou that live yet: bee fathers to the poore:
E nforce yourselves to dooe as I have doune:
R emember Jesus also hath a doore."

Below these, on the same stone, are the effigies of a man and his three wives,[d] he in a furred gown, and at their feet the ensuing inscription, below which are the figures of three daughters and four sons:

"Here lyeth buryed under this stone the body of THOMAS EYER, Gent. late owner of the mannor of Allerds, in Estburnham, in the county of Bucks, & had three wyves, & had by his second wyfe all his children, that is to say iiii sonnes and iii dowghters; the which Thomas deceased the 3 day of June, A°. Dñi 1581."

At the head of this, exactly in the midst of the middle aisle, and between the first and second pillars to the east, lies a freestone with this inscription:

"Here lyeth the body of THOMAS GOLDWIN, of Cantes Hill, who departed this life the 28 day of March 1710, aged 81 years 4 months."

Close to this on the north and touching the Clark's desk, lies a blue marble, and on it these arms at top, Eyer, & a dove for the crest, impaling Billetté, on a cross flory five roundles, for Morice: and under them this inscription, and verses:

"Here lieth buried the body of that vertuous & religious gentlewoman, Mrs. MARY EYRE, widow, one of the daughters of Francis Morice of Wanstead, in the county of Essex, Esqr. deceased, & late wife of Thomas Eyer, of this parish, Esqr. to whom she was married XXVIII yeares, and after her progress in this vale of misery of fiftie yeeres, she departed this life the XIII day of January, An^o Dñi 1646.

"Staye, gentle Reader; this doth but relate
The fraile condition of hir mortal state;
Staye, & with patience marke howe here belowe,
She hir Creatour's tallent did bestowe.
Inquire of the Poore, and they will tell,
Howe much in charitey she did excell.
The sicke, the naked, hungry, thirsty, shee
For to relieve deem'd hir felicitie," &c.

There are eight more verses, but so trod on, and worn, that it required more time to decypher, than I thought they deserved.

At the head of this lies a large black marble by the pews, and on it this inscription:

"Here lyes REBECCA, the wife of Captain THOMAS BURGES:[d] she was one of the daughters of Mr. Grover, of Boveney in this parish, & departed this life November the 12, 1740, aged 21 years. Eliseus, an infant son of the said Thos & Rebecca his wife, was buried in the church-yard, April the 8, 1739."

At the east end of the south aisle is erected a very large pew, with a canopy over it, for Mr. Eyer's family: at the foot of the steps into it, in the middle of the said south aisle, lies a black marble slab on which is wrote:

"Here lyeth the body of Mrs. FRANCES LIDGOLD,[e] daughter of John Lidgold, Esqr. She departed this life Octob. the 23, 1729, in the 21 year of her age.

"Underneath this stone doth lye
As much Virtue as could dye,
Which when alive, did Vigour give
To as much Beauty as could live."

Which verses are taken from a tomb in Westminster Abbey.

[d] They were married here, Oct. 4, 1737; and "Colonel Thomas Burgess, of Hampstead, Middx." was buried here, Aug. 24, 1760.

At the head of this, on a freestone, is this inscription:

"Here lyeth the body of Mr. JOHN LIDGOLD,[f] who departed this life the 21 of June 1697, aged 61 years. Here also lyeth the body of ELIZABETH, the wife of Mr. John Lidgold, who departed this life the 31 of March 1689, in the 50 year of her age.

"Here lyeth the body of ELIZABETH LIDGOLD, late wife of Mr. John Lidgold, who departed this life the 30 of August 1700, aged 25 years & 2 months."

On the south wall, just above this stone, is fixed a mural monument of white marble, with an urn at top, and below it these arms: B. a St. Catharine's wheel Or; impaling, Or, two bars Vairé A. and Sable. Underneath is this inscription:

"Near this place lyeth the body of AUDRY BEVER, late wife of Thomas Bever,[g] citizen & Stationer of London, (& daughter of John Lidgold late of this parish,) who departed this life the 19 of August, in the year of our Lord 1704."

The arms assigned to Lidgold, viz. Or, two bars Vairé A. and S. belong to the name and family of Lytcott of Oxfordshire: those assigned to John Lydgold of Burnham, who was High Sheriff for this county 1728, by Mr. Browne Willis, in that part of the History of Buckinghamshire which he published in 1755, at p. 22, are thus blazoned, Sable, a Bezant in fess point and chief Argent, which seems to bear some respect to both the syllables of his name.

In the passage between the pews, leading from the east end of the south aisle into the nave, lie three old grey marbles, each robbed of a small brass label.

There are three round pillars on the north side of the nave, which divide it from the north aisle, and three octagon pillars on the south side; that against which the pulpit is placed, is out of its perpendicular, and is cramped round with three or four iron hoops.

The font of stone stands near the west end of the middle aisle, and near the west door, and has a cover of wood, on which is carved:

[f] "Mr. Lidgold of Sidenham, [or Cipenham,] bur. 24 June 1697. Mr. Wm. Lidgoles of Bray in Berks. bur. July 7, 1705. Mr. John Lidgol, 50*l.* p' an. was married at London, June 9, 1698." Par. Reg.

"Edward Goldwin gave this cover Anno Domini 1637."

In the lower window of the north isle, opposite to this font, are the remains of an old coat of arms, viz. Gules, on a chief Argent three lozenges Gules; being the arms of the Abbey of Burnham.g This is the only piece of antiquity of that sort that I could discover throughout the whole church.

On some tables of benefactions to the parish hanging over the west door, and by it, is wrote as follows:

"Burnham, Bucks.

"Given by Mrs. Alice Cotton, a native here, the sum of 100*l.* to purchase free-hold lands, to be vested in certain trustees, to perpetuate a charity of 4*l.* per an. for ever; viz. 3*l.* to establish a Charity School in the said parish for teaching eight children annually to read English, belonging to such as are poor and parishioners of the same. The other 20*s.* a-year, after the donor's decease, to be disposed of by the trustees, half to the Minister of this Church to preach a sermon yearly herein on the Sunday before Christmas; and the remaining half to be distributed to ten poor women that are parishioners, and do not take alms of the said parish, to be paid them annually at Christmass for ever.—Note: the above sum, with 20*l.* left by Mrs. Eliz. Conisby of Cipenham, and interest raised by both sums, has made up 130*l.* which said sum is now laid out in freehold lands in the parish of Cookham, in the county of Berks, by estimation seven acres, more or less, by lease for twenty-one years at 6*l.* a year, from Michaelmas 1746, for the uses above-mentioned.

g "Coming here on a visit in April 1762, I immediately went into the Church to reconnoitre these arms, which I did not know to be those of Burnham abbey when I was here last year, and noted them down: but my indignation was not small to find that an ignorant glazier, one Day of this parish, in order to make all the windows alike, in repairing them had taken this venerable old coat away, the only remains of any painted glass in the church; and tho' it was done not above a month or six weeks ago, and I was with Dr. Apthorp at the glazier's to make search for it, yet it was fruitless, and no arms to be found."

At the back of fol. 19, Mr. Cole relates—

"In a sort of lumber chamber in the vicarage-house at Burnham, in one of the windows, are the following arms in painted glass twice, tho' one is almost worn plain, by reason of the painted side being turned to the weather: viz. Sable, on a chevron Argent, inter 3 hawk's legs and part of the thigh, with a part of the feathers joined to it, Proper, or Argent, an annulet Or." Added afterwards, "I brought one of these coats to my house at Milton, near Cambridge, and put it in one of the windows in Dec. 1774." Mr. Cole imagined these were the arms of Bray: but qu? In the coat of Bray the colours were reversed.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PARISH REGISTERS.

Besides extracts from the parish registers of Burnham in his vol. xxxii. pp 29—33, and vol. xlv. p. 439, Mr. Cole has in his vol. xlvi. pp. 419—437 gone through them all. A selection only of his extracts can here be made: several have been already given with the epitaphs, and others are wholly unimportant.[i] In vol. xlvi. p. 419, Mr. Cole says: "1774. Nov. 16.—Here are no less than seven parish Registers belonging to this place, all folios, and on parchment. 1. The oldest Register begins in 1561, is unbound through age, and contains not thirty leaves

[P. 422.] From 1588 to 1623 no register of births or marriages; and from 1595 to 1623 no register of burials.

[P. 424.] "2d Register begins in 1653. On the first leaf of parchment is this entry: 'Memorandum, That on the 20 day of Sept. 1653, Wm Gouldinge of Burnham was then approved and sworne to be the parish Register for the parishe of Burnham, accordinge to the tenor of

By Margaret Hawtrey 7 acres of arable land.
By Richard Randal 70 2*d.*-loaves 0 11 8
For a Sermon 1 acre.
By Elizabeth Robinson 20*l.* to put out 3 boys and 3 girls to school.
N.B. This and Alice Cotton's money is layd out in the purchase made at Cookham in Berks.

[i] No person of the name of Cole was ever passed over; there was in the parish of Burnham a flourishing family of a blacksmith of that name. In "1773, Susan Cole, spinster, dau. of John Cole, blacksmith, of Cippenham, was there delivered of a bastard child, for which offence she did, on Midlent Sunday, March 21, 1773, do public penance in a white sheet in the parish church of Burnham, Bucks, having first taken her oath before one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, that ..... Stevens of Eton was the father of the child." (Vol. xlvi. p. 432.)

Another instance of female punishment, now obsolete, may be added from the same place: "1766. This Summer, Sarah wife of Wm. Guerney, and Dorothy Norman spinster, both of Cipenham, were publicly whipped thro' the town of Windsor, for pilfering goods, at sundry times, out of the shops of several tradesmen in the towns of Eton and Windsor."

the Acte of Parlyamt for the registeringe of marriages and also birthe & burialls. Rob. Aldridge. Benjamin Pirkins.' But in this 2d Register is inclosed an 8vo. Register of ordinary paper, worn and ill kept by the clarks from 1636 to 1652." [P. 425.] The fourth Register begins in 1695. [P. 427.] "The 4 former Registers are in black covers and thin: the 3 following are large and rough-coated." "The 5th Register begins in 1726: but it being chiefly written by Mr. Tate, in his shaking hand, the parish had it copied into the 6th Register." The 6th is only a copy of the 5th. [p. 433.] In vol. xxxii. p. 29, Cole says: "My brother has begun a new one since he was Vicar there (in 1759);" this must be the 7th. Dr. Apthorp took the trouble to count the number of baptisms, marriages, and burials in every year, and formed tables of them at the end of each volume, which Mr. Cole has transcribed. By an account taken of the inhabitants of the town of Burnham in 1740, it appears that there were then 560 souls. In 1767 no Papist, nor reputed Papist (vol. xlv. p. 427); and a few years after was buried "Maria, wife of Tho. Rose, husbandman, of Lake End, a dissenter, and the only one in the parish, March 2, 1771." (Vol. xlvi. p. 436.)

[o] "On a piece of paper in Dr. Apthorp's writing is this: 'Mr. Walpole Eyre, one of those unfortunate gentlemen who dined at Salt Hall, Mar. 29, 1773, and died Apr. 18 following; as did Mr. Isherwood, brewer, of Windsor; Mr. Benwell, draper, of Eton; the Hon. Mr. Needham of Datchet, died April 17; Mr. Birkham of Colebrook on Apr. 24; Mr Mason of Datchet, one of the Justices who attended that day, died some time after, and, as it is supposed, of the same disorder. Mr. Suter Williams was taken very ill soon after, but happily recovered; as did Major Mayne of Iver, who layd dangerously ill for a long time.' It is generally believed that arsenic had been put in the wine to refine it, and occasioned their deaths. Mrs. Partridge at the Castle at Salt Hill, lost her custom for near a twelvemonth: she would persuade the people that it came from an infectious pauper who came there for a pass. Mr. Tho. Eyre of Huntercombe told me on Monday Nov. 21, 1774, that it could be nothing but poison. He said that Sir Robert Walpole was Godfather to Mr. Walpole Eyre, and gave him his name. Wm. Cole, Burnham, Nov. 25, 1774." Mr. Walpole Eyre left a widow (see p. 289). "Sarah, dau. of the late Walpole Eyre, Esq. was buried April 15, 1774."

Mr. Cole copied this document from a transcript in the "bad hand of his predecessor Mr. Tate;" and has appended the following note: "No such Archdeacon of Oxon as Urcard de Wexham occurs in the list of those Dignitaries in Le Neve or Browne Willis. Query: if 'D'no de Keanebelle Priore de Missenden,' should not be Rob'to de Keenebelle Priore de Missenden? as one of that name occurs Abbat of that Monastery, in the year 1323, and who might be Prior in 1266. See Mr. Willis's History of Abbies, vol. ii. p. 30."

RECTORS AND VICARS OF BURNHAM.

From the same volume, p. 35. This catalogue was compiled by Browne Willis, and communicated by him in 1739 to the Rev. Mr. Tate, then Vicar of Burnham. (Cole, p. 34.)

Galfridus de Burgo, Archdeacon of Norwich, was presented to the Rectory of Burnham in 1202, by King John, and was in 1225 made Bishop of Ely.

William Brewer resigned a mediety of Burnham rectory in 1218 (afterwards, A° 24, made Bishop of Exeter), and was succeeded by Tho. Nevill, presented 1218, on Brewer's resignation, by Ralph Hodeng.

Stephen Segrave was presented to a mediety of Burnham rectory 1222 by the King.

Hugh de Hodeng voided a mediety of Burnham rectory 1231, and was succeeded by Thomas de Bosco, instituted 1231.

John de Nevill was instituted to both medieties of Burnham 1252: he was, as it seems to me, last Rector; for it was appropriated, cum capella de Boveney, to Burnham Abbey 1265. I have the account of the Ordinatio Vicariæ.

Alan de Aston occurs Vicar of Burnham 1326.

Wm de Navesby was instituted Vicar, March 2, 1374, ad presentationem Conventus de Burnham. One of both his names died 1386, having been Archdeacon of Chester, and was buried at Drayton, co. Salop. [He had been also Rector of Olney in this county, which he exchanged in 1364 with one Adam de Navesby, for the rectory of Boresworth, or Bosworth. W. C.]

Wm Wedon resigned it 1431, and was succeeded by

Tho. Tyler, instituted Jan. 29, 1431. He resigned it next year to

Robert West, who was instituted Sept. 24, 1432, per resignationem Tyler, ad presentationem Conventus de Burnham. [Qu. if not Sept. 27? W. C.]

Richard Alfred is the next in my account, who died possessed of it in 1485, and was succeeded by

Edmund Mandefeild or Mandeville, for his name is wrote in my account both ways, who was instituted Oct. 6, 1485. He died 1504, and was succeeded by

James Mallet, A.M. instituted Nov. 8, 1504, on the death of Mandefeild. He was executed very barbarously on pretended treason. See the account in Wood's Athenæ, Ao 1542, having above ten years before resigned this vicarage to Richard Screwen, Ao 1521. John Mallet did not agree with his Patrons, I believe: for the Abbess and Convent complained at the Visitation that year, of his keeping horses and hogs in the church-yard. [Mr. Willis in the last place styles him John, though before he calls him James, which was his true name; for being Master of Arts in Cambridge 1501, a grace was put up in 1509, that leave might be granted Mag'ro Jacobo Malet ut studium 9 annorum post Regentiam, &c. sufficiat ei ad apponendū in Theologia. Registr. Acad. Cantabr. He was Canon of Windsor, and his crime was speaking slightingly of the dissolution of Abbies then going forward. W. C.]

Richard Screwen instituted May 22, 1533, on Bp Longland's presentation, by the grant of Burnham Abbey.

Robert Lister succeeded, being instituted Nov. 23, 1548, on the King's presentation, and dying in 1550, left all to his wife Julian, as I think I saw, or a good deal.

Richard Davies was presented by the King 1550, and deprived by Queen Mary for marriage, as it seems to me, 1554. He was restored 1559; but quitted it next year, being made Bishop of St. David's, and getting several other preferments.

David Roberts was presented by Queen Mary, May 2, 1554.

Tho. Benson was instituted April 6, 1556, on Roberts's death, on the presentation of John Lewis. He willed to be buried in Burnham chancel, Feb. 1, 1558, and died soon after.

Griffith Williams was presented by John Lewis, and instituted Feb. 13, 1558, on the death of the last incumbent not named; but had little enjoyment of it, for in 1559 he appealed against the restoration of Davies; but it came to nothing; for

Richard Davies was restored 1559, and made soon after Bishop of St. Asaph, and thence translated to St. David's. [See my vol. 41, p. 150, where mention of a MS. letter to Archbishop Parker concerning his predecessor at St. David's, Bishop Sulgenus, and p. 153. W. C.]

John Wright, A.M. was instituted Oct. 8, 1560, per resignationem Rici Davies, Epi Menevensis, ad presentationem Will. Tyldesley Armigeri. He was buried at Burnham May 7, 1594. [According to his own entry in the Register, it was not before 1561 that he had possession of this living;[x] which also seems to agree with the words of his presentation, if they may be depended on; for Ric. Davies was not made Bishop of St. David's till the summer of 1561; and therefore did not quit this Vicarage while Bishop of St. Asaph. W. C.] He was succeeded by Randal Wright [his son] inducted May 19, 1594. He was buried here June 16, 1623, and was succeeded by [his son]

John Wright, who was inducted June 19, 1623. He died May 18, 1642; and was succeeded by Edward Hawtrey, A.M. instituted Aug. 24, 1642. He was sequestred in the Rebellion,[y] but lived to be repossessed, and died in Oct. 1669, being also Rector of Denham. He was presented to this living by Margaret Wright. [See p. (267), where is his epitaph; this Margaret Wright he married, who was the widow of his predecessor. He died Oct. 29, and was buried Nov. 1, 1669. W. C.]

[x] "Jesus. + Johannes Wrighteus inductus fuit Vicarius Burnhamiensis ipsis calendis Novembris A.D. 1561; videlicet, ipso die Omnium S'c'oru'. Nullu' Registru' hic invenit"

[y] On the opposite page Mr. Cole has made the following note: "In the historiette of King's College, it is said Joseph Brookes, M.A. and Fellow of King's College, was for a time in 1645 Parson of Burnham in Buckinghamshire, and was that year replaced in that college by another person, but was removed from Burnham in less than a year to the living of Mortimer by Eton College. (My vol. 15, p. 124.) This looks as if he was placed here on Mr. Hawtrey's sequestration, by the authority of Parliament. Benjamin Perkins, Curate to Mr. Edw. Hawtrey, complying with the times, was put in as Vicar, which he quitted before the Bartholomew Act took place, quietly, when Mr. Hawtrey was restored."

Wm Glover, A.M. was instituted on Hawtrey's death, Feb. 26, 1669, on the presentation of Mr. John Hawtrey. [who afterwards gave this Vicarage to the College of Eton, where he was chosen Fellow, being also Vicar of Maple Durham, and had been Fellow of King's College in Cambridge, as had been his father. Mr. Glover died June 23, and was buried here June 25, 1707.[z] W. C.] He was succeeded by Matthew Tate, A.M. who was instituted Oct. 3, 1708, on Glover's death, on the presentation of Dr. Hascard and Robert Young, Clerks, and William Prisley, Esq.

[Mr. Tate was a very tall and worthy man; was educated in St. John's, Camb.; I suppose the patrons above named were trustees for Mr. Hawtrey, Fellow of Eton, whose sister was wife to Baron Edlin of Scotland,[a] whose sister was the wife of Mr. Tate, by whom he has two daughters still living in Scotland with the Baron since the death of their father; who had the Vicarage of Lacock[b] and a Lay Prebend in the Cathedral of Salisbury, of the gift of Sir John Talbot, before he came to Burnham, and was also Rector of Englefield to his death; which happened in the spring 1759,[c] having been Vicar here near 52 years, at the age of 97, and was buried, near his wife, on the left hand as you go out of the court garden, before the Vicarage house, at the west end of the church yard, March 2, 1759, without any memorial, according to his own desire.

afterwards to Steventon in the same county, by a private patron; was unanimously elected Fellow of Eton College in Aug. 1758, by which he was presented to this Vicarage, and inducted 2 June 1759, having resigned his two livings in Hampshire, and is now Vicar here Jan. 7, 1762. In 1774, he was presented by Eton College to the Rectory of Worplesden in Surrey.

Wm Cole, M.A. late Rector of Blechely, in this County, was nominated and presented by Eton College, on the cession of my half-brother, Dr. Apthorp, Vice-Provost of Eton, to this Vicarage of Burnham; to which I was instituted by the Bishop of Lincoln, in his residentiary house, in Amen Corner, near St. Paul's Cathedral, on Friday June 10, 1774. W. C.]

In vol. vii. of his Collections (MS. Addit. 5808) pp. 79—87, Mr. Cole has transcribed at length his presentation and induction to the Vicarage of Burnham; and in vol. xlv. (MS. Addit. 5846) p. 393, he has described more at length the circumstances attending this preferment.[a] These need not be transcribed here; but it may be mentioned that, yielding at once to the impulse of his spirit of antiquarian collecting, he immediately took with him to Milton an old register and a parcel of loose papers relating to the vicarage, most of which he has transcribed in his vol. xlv. pp. 395 et seq. They relate chiefly to tithes. The first, in p. 395, entitled, "These be the portions of tithes that nowe are made doubtfull and in varience betwixt one Wm Tyllyseley, the King's Highnes servant and fermor of the Parsonage of Burnham, of the one partye, & Richard Scriven, Pastor & the King's Highnes Vicar of Burnham, on the other party," and referred to the arbitrament of Dr. Longland, Bishop of Lincoln, is, from the names, evidently of the reign of Henry VIII. though Cole says, "written about the time, as I guess, of King Charles I."

"There are five Terriers; one a very old one in Mr. John Wright's hand, on vellum; a 2d, a copy of it in Mr. Tate's hand; a 3d by Mr. Tate in his own writing; and the two others in my brother's hand, one on parchment and the other on paper, properly signed; yet all different from that which I copied into my 32 vol. at p. 34, in Mr. Tate's hand." Mr. Cole afterwards found two more; so that in all there are eight, or rather seven: 1. that of 1634 and its copy, vol. xlv. p. 397; 2. one of 1707, p. 399; 3. one of 1724, p. 398; 4. one of 1725, in vol. xxxii. p. 33 b, 5. one of 1760, vol. xlv. p. 399; 6. one of 1770, ibid.; and 7. one of 1773, p. 400. From the Terrier of 1725 the following extract may be made:

canons.[d] The flagon for the comuñion table is of pewter only: the chalice, with the cover, of silver, washed with gold, weighing together 23 ounces. The inscription on the cover in the middle is, "Año Dom. 1567°," and engraved in capital letters about the rim: "GOD BE IN MI HART, AND IN MI VNDERSTANDING," and about the cup itself, or chalice, "GOD BE IN MI HART, AND IN MI THINKING." The plate or patten is large, of plain silver, weighing 13 ounces and a quarter, with this inscription: "Given for the Use of the Parish of Burnham 1708, by Mrs. Margaret Edlin," &c. There is also a silver dish or plate, for collecting the offerings, weighing ten ounces and a half, inscribed, "Burnham Parish, in the county of Bucks, May 22, 1713."

The Chapel of Boveney in this parish hath no house, no land, nor any endowment for serving the cure. The Minister's dues are only small or privy tithes there, which none are exempted from paying, and which are given him as Vicar of Burnham, as appears by the said Composition. The Chapel is repaired by the inhabitants, who have lands and water in the river Thames, of about 5 pounds value p annū in all, left them for it. The Chapel is furnished with all things that the canons require. There is

[d] In the MS. Lansdowne 1045, among other original inventories of church plate in the same neighbourhood, is (at fol. 21) that of Burnham, dated 18 Jul. 6 Edw. VI. and signed with the autographs of the commissioners, Lord Russell, Sir Maurice Berkeley, Sir Edmund Peckham, Sir Robert Denny, and William Tyldesley, Esq. The following are the articles enumerated:

Imp'mis a chalice parcell guylte.

At a later period, we have the following, extracted by Mr. Cole, vol. xlv. p. 411, from "an old piece of paper, in an old hand of the time:"

"Ewstace Noke, Churchwarden for the yeare of our Lord 1629, delyvered upp to John Askew and John Sexten, Churchwardens for the year of our Lord 1630, Twoe sylver cupps, one with a cover and the other without, Three towells, Twoe brasse potts, Eyght peeces of pewter, One box of writings, and one pewter flaggon."

one silver cup with a cover for the sacrament, weighing together about 19 ounces, without any inscription. The rest of the furniture is of pewter only. M. TATE, Vicar.

[Vol. xlv. p. 433.] Boveney Chapel is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

[P. 412.] On a piece of paper, marked on the back with a title in Mr. Tate's bad shaking hand, the rest in a large ordinary hand, and noted at bottom by Dr. Apthorp that he had entered it in the Register, is this:

"Bovney Chapel Lands, for repair of the Chapel, 4*l.* 10*s.* per añum. M. TATE.

"Two butts of land in Northfield, commonly called Chapel Buts; it is leet for one pound a year; and one Illand or Ayte, called Linings Ayte, with water and land covered with water, part of the river Thames, called Chappell Water; it is leet for 3*l.* 10*s.* a year, in all 4*l.* 10*s.* a year towards reparation of the Chapell."

From documents at pp 413, 427 of the same volume, it appears that in 1767 the privy tithes of Boveney amounted to between 4*l.* and 5*l.* annually, and the addition of Queen Anne's Bounty was 4*l.* per annum more. Divine service was performed on the first Sunday of every month. In p. 413 is transcribed, "The Reasons that the Hamlett of Boveney hath to alledge before the High Commissioners, why they are not to be charged with any contribution towards the repairing Burnham Church;" and in several succeeding pages are lists of the inhabitants at various times, with the amounts of the dues and rates they paid.

In vol. xxxii. (MS. Addit. 5833) p. 29 b, are copied "two loose sheets of paper wrote very close in Mr. Tate's hand, being Answers to the Queries Mr. Willis had sent round the county when he was preparing materials for his History of Buckinghamshire in 1712. On the back is wrote: An extract from these papers sent to Browne Willis, Esq. at the Visitation, Octob. 29, 1712."

Querie 1st.—The name of the town, Burnham, thus and always spelled. It gives the name to both the Hundred in the Civil, and to the Deanery in the Ecclesiastical division; the parishes next adjoining to it are, on the east Farnham Royal; on the west Hitcham; on the north Woburn and Beconsfeild; on the south Dorney and the Thames, as dividing us from Bray and Cluer, in Berkshire. The extent, north and south, is about seven miles, or something more; from east to west (taking the measure at two different places, i. e. either along the great road from London to Maidenhead, &c. which lay directly cross the parish; or else from Hitcham Gate upon the Gore by the Town's End, and so directly forward to where Farnham begins) is in either place about two miles over; so that the whole compass is about sixteen or seventeen miles, as near as I can compute; or probably something more; not less I am persuaded.

The number of houses or families, comprehending cottages, &c. are about 200, within one or two over or under, as appears by a just account lately taken, and which I have by me.[d]

Our church is probably dedicated to St. Peter, the lane or street leading from the main body of the town to it, being called in ancient writings, St. Peter's street. I know not of any feast day that is kept here. The benefice is a vicarage endowed with a glebe, and some part of the great tithes. It formerly had the great road from the West to London laying through the town, before the bridge at Maidenhead was built. There are, besides the town, four or five villages or hamlets in the parish, viz. East Burnham, which lays above a mile eastward of the town; Britwell, half a mile the same way; Lent or Lient, about a quarter of a mile westward; Sydenham, or Cippenham, southward a mile; and Boveney the same way, but somewhat more westward; besides some seats, and noted farms and places which stand alone; as namely, Huntercomb, Burnham-abbey, West-town, and Sydenham or Cippenham-court, at some distance from the village of that name. Here are two ancient fairs kept in the town, in pretty good esteem; one on May Day, the other on St. Matthew's, 21 Sept. but when they began,[e] or on what account, I know not.

Query 2.—The Gentlemen's Seats in this parish are these.

1. Huntercombe, which was the seat of Wm. de Huntercombe, when the abbey was built, and is now in the possession of Tho.

[d] In 1831 the population of Burnham was 1930, and of Boveney 207, total 2137.

[e] "The original grant to Ralph de Hemenhale for a fair at Burnham in crastino die [July 23] Beatæ Mariæ Magdalenæ, and four days after, by Edward 3, anno regni sui 21, is in the muniment room at Eton College, from whence I transcribed the above account, August 25, 1787. Eyre, Esq. lord of the manor of East Burnham, and is about a mile south of the town and the church, and near to the great London road.

2. Britwell-court, which formerly belonged to the Cages, afterwards to the Clarks, and has been sold by Edm. Reaves, Esq. Barrister at Law, to one Mr. Mack Colsy, an army tailor.[f]

3. The manor-house of Thos. Eyre, Esq. at East Burnham.

4. The mansion-house of John Alayn, Esq. Justice of the Peace, at East Burnham likewise.

Besides these, there is Cippenham-court, which is now a great farm; West-town, another large farm; Cant's-hill; Burnham-abbey; Boveney-court; and some others of lesser note.

Query 3.—The Provost and Fellows of Eton College, are now patrons of the living, it being given them by Mr. John Hawtrey, of the family of the Hawtrey's of East-court, in the parish of Ruislip, in Middlesex, and one of the present Fellows of that college. The present incumbent is Matthew Tate, A.M. formerly of St. John's College in Cambridge, who was instituted to the vicarage Oct. 3, 1707. His predecessors—

Mr. Tate then enumerates the Vicars, as far as he knew them.

Query 4.—Our church is an ancient large fabric, built of stone and flints,[g] and hard chalk, &c. Its antiquity we know not, but suppose it must be very old, both from what appears, and that it is the Deanery church; nor do we know of any former here, &c. The north cross aisle has a vault under it belonging to Britwell-court, where Hastings and Cage have their arms, and were formerly lords of it. The length of the church is 66 feet. The breadth of the area betwixt the pillars is 25 feet; and the aisles, or two outward rows, from the pillars to the walls, on each side, are about twelve feet and a half over; the whole breadth being forty feet. The chancel is 48 feet long, and 16

[f] Servants of Lord Orrery, who then resided at Britwell, occur in the parish register in 1716 and 1722.

[g] Mr. Cole has sketched in pen and ink a south-west view of the church in his vol. xlvi. p. 438. There are also in pp. 439-442, four sketches (one taken from each side) of the Vicarage, and three of its offices; together with a very full description. The latter, in connection with the sketches, possesses some curiosity; as the greater part of the house was an ancient structure of timber; but it would be uninteresting without them.

and a half broad, and the height of both church and chancel proportionable to their length and breadth. The steeple is a square tower, formerly set off with a spire of wood, but being decayed, was taken down about twelve years ago, and finished with boards above the stone work. The five bells have no inscription or date.[h] A little bell hangs over them in a little square turret, on which the clock strikes. The height of the tower from the battlements to the ground is 58 feet. The breadth at the bottom, taken on the outside, on one side of the square, is about 19 feet, &c. We have no public or charity school, or hospital, which are much wanted.

Query 5.—There is a Chapel of Ease at Boveney belonging to this parish. It is built of stone and rough materials, with a wooden steeple at the west end, wherein are three bells. It stands near the Thames, about a mile and a half above Windsor bridge.

The answer to the 6th Query relates to the monuments already described, and the following passages only need be extracted:

George Evelyn, who enjoyed the estate at Huntercombe, died 26 April 1699, aged 68 years. He left a son, Wm Evelyn, Esq. who sold that estate about nine or ten years ago to Anthony Collins and Thomas Eyre, Esqrs. Mr. Eyre has now bought the whole, and is in possession of it, as also of the manor of East Burnham in this parish.

In the isle or chapel belonging to Britwell-court, there is a vault belonging to that estate, over which there is upon a flat stone this inscription: "Here lieth the body of John Cage, Gentleman, who departed this life the 15 day of January 1637, in the 36th year of his age."

The answer to the 7th Query relates to the Abbey; on the ancient history of which we cannot here enter.

A good part of the Abbey is yet standing, but ruinous;[i] it still belongs to the Crown, but is let out in long leases to some great men. It formerly belonged to the Darrells, after them to the late Lord Lovelace, who sold the lease and tenant's right to the

EPITAPHS, AND EXTRACTS FROM THE REGISTER, AT STANWAY CHURCH, ESSEX.

The ancient church of All Saints, Stanway, is ruined and deserted; it was last repaired by Sir John Swinnerton, of Stanway hall, who made it a chapel to his house.[a] The present church was formerly the Chapel of St. Ethelbright, or Alburstow. It has been recently increased in size by an addition made to its east end, which is recorded by the following inscription, placed under a carving in stone of the arms of England, at the opposite end of the interior:

"This Church was enlarged anno Domini 1826, by means of subscriptions amounting to 316*l.* and a grant of 50*l.* from the Society for Promoting the Enlargement and Building of Churches and Chapels. In consequence of the above grant fifty sittings in the body of the Church at the west end are declared free and unappropriated for ever. The Rev. Walter Birch, Rector."

The font is octagonal, its panels ornamented alternately with blank shields and sacramental cups surrounded with rays. At the altar is a painting of the Last Supper, and in the ceiling where the old and new building unite, is a painting of three panels which formerly was its canopy.

In the time of the Rev. Samuel Baldock, Rector, the arms of Tey, of Layer de la Hay, were in the east window, Ar. a fess Az. in chief three martlets, and in base a chevron of the Second. (Symonds' MSS.)

There are only three sepulchral inscriptions within the church:

In a black marble ledger in the aile:

"Here ly buried William Eldred,[b] Esq. and Joannah his wife, daughter of John Goodwin, Esq. She died July 15th 1696, aged 58 years, and he dyed May 3d in ye year of our Lord 1701, and in the 63 year of his age."

On marble tablets on the north wall:

"Sacred to the memory of the Rev. William Day, sixteen years Rector of this parish, died March 19, 1791, who, through an exemplary life of sixty-one years, was an example of the truly Christian doctrine which he taught."

"Erected to the memory of the Rev. William Deacle, D.D. late Rector of this parish, died Dec. 13th 1816, aged 72 years, whose remains, with those of his brother Thomas Deacle, are deposited in a vault in this church yard."

The following epitaphs are in the church yard:

Foot stone.—"Here lieth the body of Mrs Ann Catherine Young, wife of the Revd Mr Robert Young, Rector of Little Thurrick, in the county of Essex, daughter of the Revd Mr John Jenner, the Rector of this parish. She departed this life the 21 of Septr 1762, in the 22d year of her age."

On a head stone.—"Here lieth the body of Mary Jenner, eldest daughter of the Revd Mr. John Jenner, late Rector of this parish. She departed this life July 15th, 1770, aged . . years. Susanna Jenner, third daughter of the same, Decr 28, 1779, aged 38 years."

On a flat stone.—"In memory of Thomas Deacle, surgeon, late of Banbury, in the county of Oxford, who died[b] Sepr 9th, 1813, aged 66 years. Also of the Revd Wm Deacle, Rector of Stanway, brother to the above, who died Decr 13th 1816, aged 72 years."

On a flat stone within rails.—"In a vault underneath this stone are deposited the remains of the Revd Walter Birch, B.D. Rector of this parish and Vicar of Staunton St Bernard, in the county of Wilts, who departed this life the 8th of December 1829, in the 56th year of his age."

On a flat stone within rails.—"In memory of Harriet Mary Frances Green and Anne Sophia Shiply Green, who died 1st July 1819, aged 17."

[b] He was accidentally drowned returning from Stanway Hall at night, in a pond at the end of the adjoining glebe field.

BURIALS IN THE CHARTERHOUSE, LONDON.

In the Second Volume of these Collectanea, p. 91, was printed an account of the Arms of Governors of the Charterhouse, founded by Thomas Sutton, temp. Jac. I. from a MS. in the library of the College of Arms. In the same library is a MS. containing notices of Burials in London, apparently in a handwriting of the time of Henry the Eighth, from which the following list of persons buried in the Monastery of Charterhouse is taken. Stow, in his Survey of London, book 4, p. 62, has given this list, but with some manifest errors, either of the press or of the MS. to which he referred:—as, for instance, "Sir John Derwentwater" is made two persons, "John Dore, Want Water, Knight;" and the name of the Duchess of Ireland is omitted.

[a] Sir Walter Manny, about the year 1360, had contemplated the foundation of a College for a Warden, a Dean, and twelve secular Priests; but his occupation in the wars of Edward III. compelled him for a time to lay aside his design. In the next year Michael de Northburgh, who upon the death of Stratford in 1354 had been advanced to the See of London, by his will bequeathed two thousand pounds for the founding and building a Convent of Monks of the Carthusian order, with certain leases, rents, and tenements for its endowment. Upon this event Sir Walter Manny determined upon the completion of his former design, and obtaining the concurrence of Bishop Northburgh's successor, who was charged with the execution of his will, he obtained a licence on the 6th Feb. 45 Edw. III. 1371, to found a Convent of Monks of the Carthusian order, and upon the 28th of March following he sealed the charter of foundation. Bishop Northburgh and Sir Walter Manny therefore were the Co-Founders of this Monastery. And Archbishop Parker is accurate in his Antiquitates Britannicæ, when he says in 1370, "Carthusianorum item Cænobium Londini, sumptibus Michaelis de Northburgh Londinensis Episcopi, et Walteri de Manny Militis, incohatum; Londonensi Episcopo mortuo, etiam hoc anno perfectum est."

[b] Sir Walter Manny did not long survive the foundation of the Charterhouse, as he died 13 Jan. 1372-3. He was one of the earliest Knights of the Garter, having succeeded Sir John Grey, one of the founders of the Order. He was summoned to Parliament from the 21 Edw. III. 1347 to 44 Edw. III. 1371. His will is dated on St. Andrew's day 1371, wherein he directs to be buried if it may be in the midst of the quire of the Carthusians, called our Lady near West Smithfield. His wife was Margaret, dau. and heir of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk and Marshal of England, relict of John Lord Segrave (who died 27 Edw. III.) She was created Duchess of Norfolk for life in Sept. 1397, and died 1399.

This deed is dateless; but the handwriting would seem to assign it to the latter end of the reign of Richard I., and this conjecture is partially confirmed by the standard of measurement which it employs, viz. Joh.) in the same collection, being a grant from Thomas son of Henry son of Ailwine of London to "Adam de Gardino," of land in St. Mary's "Newchereche," between a lane "quæ quondam vocabatur Breckeslane et terram quam Gocelin Cupere de me tenuit," there occurs a similar form of admeasurement, viz. SOME ACCOUNT OF THE ISLAND OF LUNDY. BY G. STEINMAN STEINMAN, ESQ. F.S.A.

The island of Lundy is situate in the mouth of the Bristol Channel, and forms part of the hundred of Braunton, in the county of Devon. Lat. 50° N. Long. 4° 29′ W.

The earliest mention of it that has occurred to me is in the 1st John (1199), when its lord, William de Marisco, son and heir of Sir Jordan de Marisco, by Agnes, daughter of Hamelin Plantagenet, natural son of Geoffrey Earl of Anjou, the father of King Henry the Second,[a] being in rebellion, the King gave it to the Knights Templars, and, until such time as they could obtain possession, the revenues of certain lands in Somerset, lately enjoyed by Nicholas de Knovill.[b] In the 4th of the same reign (1202) it was still held by the said William, when an aid, by way of hidage, was levied upon the counties of Devonshire and Cornwall for its seige.[c] In the following year he was received into the King's favour;[d] but whether the Island was then wrested from him, or whether he was allowed to retain it, does not appear. In the 15th of the same reign (1213) the Templars received out of the Treasury the sum of ten pounds for the Island,[e] awarded them the 25th Oct. in the preceding year,[f] and in the 5th Henry III. (1220) the further sum of a hundred shillings, the same being in exchange for it.[g]

William de Marisco was one of the prisoners taken by the English in the sea-fight with the French, Aug. 24, 1217, when the celebrated "arch-pirate" called Eustace the Monk was slain.[f] By letters patent dated Nov. 17 following, having given the King surety of his faithful service, he was reinstated into possession of Lundy; and his wife, four sons, and two daughters, who had been captured in it, were restored to him.[g]

In the 7th year of the same reign (1222) William de Marisco obtained permission of the Sheriff of Somerset to remove to Lundy the mangonells which he had erected on his lordship of Camley, co. Somerset.[h] In the 18th of the same Henry (1233), he was again a rebel and a prisoner, when he paid a fine of three hundred marks to the King for his ransom.[i] As he this year obtained a grant of the Island from Henry,[k] it is probable that by his rebellion it had escheated to the Crown. When this William de Marisco died, does not appear; but Stowe has recorded an epitaph formerly in Bath Abbey, which tells us he was there buried [l] with his father and others of his family. As he left no issue,[m] Geoffrey de Marisco, sometime Viceroy of Ireland, and his next brother, succeeded him in the Island,[m] which he held only a short time.

In 1238 an attempt was made upon King Henry's life at Woodstock by a clerk, supposed to have been tutored to the act by Sir William de Marisco a younger son of Geoffrey, and in this treason he appears to have been implicated.[n]

"In these days (says Matthew Paris) William de Marisco, son of Geoffrey de Marisco, taking refuge in an island not far distant from Bristol, called Lundy, impregnable from the nature of the place, and having attached to himself many outlaws and malefactors, subsisted by a piracy of goods, more especially of wine and provisions, making frequent sudden irruptions on the adjacent lands, spoiling and injuring the realm by land and by sea, and native as well as foreign merchants in various ways. But when many nobles of England and Ireland, unable to remain at home with honour (the King being averse to the risk of war beyond sea) passing over into parts not far distant from the above mentioned Island, had learned more fully how the said William and his followers could not be surprised except by stratagem, they apprised the King that the securing this malefactor must be effected not by violence, but by policy. The King thereupon ordered his faithful subjects, under the hope of full retribution, to exert themselves strenuously in capturing him and liberating their country. This same William was very odious to the King, in as much as it was reported of him, that, at the instigation of his father, he had conspired against the King's life, and had basely incited to the crime of high treason that miscreant who came by night to murder the King at Woodstock, and after that had killed a certain priest, a messenger from some person of authority from Ireland, in the King's presence at London."[o]

In a subsequent passage the same historian adds; "About the same time," (that the King was in Poictou and Gascony in 1242) "William de Marisco, Knight, while he abode in the island pursuing a course of rapine and treachery, was surprised by the King's lieges, taken, thrown in chains, brought to London, and confined in the Tower.

"On the eve of St. James however, on receipt of the royal warrant, the said William and sixteen accomplices taken with him was legally convicted and sentenced to death with peculiar ignominy by the King's express command. Being first dragged from Westminster to the Tower, and thence to that engine of punishment vulgarly called the Gibbet, when he had there breathed out his wretched soul, he was suspended on a hook, and when stiff in death was lowered, disembowelled, his bowels burnt on the spot, and his wretched body divided into quarters, which were sent to the four principal cities in the kingdom, by that pitiable spectacle to strike terror into all beholders. And all his sixteen associates, after being dragged at the horse's tail through the city of London, were hanged at the gallows.

"Nevertheless, the said William, after capital sentence had been passed upon him, and when on the eve of suffering death, so long as he yet lived, constantly affirmed, invoking the judgment of God, that he was free from and utterly guiltless of the crime of high treason charged against him, and the same of the death of the before-mentioned clerk, i. e. of Clement; and that his only motive for withdrawing to the island had been by avoiding to turn aside the anger of the King, which by whatever judicial expiation, or other humiliation, it had always been his first wish to appease; but when he had fled to the island, and called some friends to his assistance, he was driven, as he had said, to support his wretched existence on necessaries snatched from every quarter. Pouring out then his soul before God in confession, he acknowledged his sins to I. of Saint Giles, one of the order of the Preaching friars, not betrayed into expressions of malice in his own excuse, but rather accusing himself. And thus with soothing words of consolation, the discreet preacher and confessor dismissed him in peace, persuading him to sustain his approaching death as an evidence of penitence. And thus, as aforesaid, horrible to relate, he suffered not one but many deaths."[p]

Upon the execution of Sir William de Marisco, and the flight of his father, who made for Scotland, and thence for France, where he died anno 1245,[q] the island was seized by the King, who, in the 29th of his reign, 1245, appointed Henry de Traci, baron of Barnstaple, governor of it, with the stock and profits of the island, during pleasure;[r] as he did in his 34th year, 1250, Robert de Waleran[s] (also a Baron of Parliament) as successor to Traci; and in his 39th, 1255, Sir Ralph de Wyllyngton;[t] who was succeeded, says Risdon, by Humphrey de Bohun. Previously to the death of Henry, the keeping of the island was confided to Sir Oliver, afterwards Lord Dynham,[v] who yet held it in the 4th Edw. I. 1275.

In the 3rd Edw. I. (1274), on the vigil of St. John the Baptist, an extent was made of the island, then the property of the Crown. The jury[u] reported that, "There may be there twenty acres of arable land which may be sown with barley or oats. Each acre is worth per annum 2*d.* either tilled or not. There are also five acres of meadow, worth 3*d.* an acre. Also pasture for eight oxen and twenty cows, with their offspring, for two years. Also that, in all, the pasture can bear sixty-eight head of cattle, the pasture of each beast being valued at 1*d.* Also four mares and one stallion, with their offspring for two years, to wit, thirteen head, the value of the pasture for each head 2*d.* There is also there pasture for 300 wethers and 200 ewes with their offspring for two years; to wit, pasture for 900 sheep, the value of the pasture for each head, four head at 1*d.* total 18*s.* 9*d.* Also the taking of rabbits is estimated at 2000, 5*l.* 10*s.* and the estimate is at 5*s.* 6*d.* each hundred skins, because the flesh is not sold. Also the rock of gannets (or wild ducks) is worth 5*s.*; other birds, but they are not sold. There is also one eyre of butcher falcons, which have sometimes three young ones, sometimes four, sometimes more, and sometimes less. This eyre the jury knew not how to estimate, and they build their nests in a place in which they cannot be taken. 7*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*

"The burdens incumbent on the island are: in summer, even in time of peace, it is necessary to have fourteen servants and a constable to watch the defences of the island, and in winter ten servants."

On the back of the inquisition it is recorded,

"That the jurors being asked by him who made the extent, what the turf, gorse, and brushwood (turberia, jamprium, et felgeria) and the fresh water were worth to the King's benefit, answered, that none of these could take value, and that no man would buy them, nor account for the value; but the auditing clerk perceives that all these things may be considered of such value to the keepers of the island, as to lessen their wages to the extent of 5*s.*; and the fowls beside, although they cannot be sold, nor are the keepers willing to eat them .... [x] yet he estimated them at 40*d.* Of quarrying stone (querera), minerals, or timber, none was found there. As for the flesh of the rabbits, what it is worth to the keepers of the island he leaves to the discretion of the King's Council to estimate. Be it mentioned, however, that for all these matters the keepers of the island have been wont to take nothing less in wages.

"The island contains two miles in length, and in breadth towards the south one mile, and so almost continually diminishing in breadth, towards the north, it scarcely contains the fourth part of a mile." [y]

In the ninth year of this reign, 1281, it was granted for the service of one tenth part of a knight's fee, to Sir William de Marisco,[a] son and heir of Jordan, son and heir of Geoffrey sometime Viceroy of Ireland. This Sir William died in 1284,[b] seised of the island, leaving John his son and heir, who died five years after, leaving Herbert his son and heir. Upon the death of John de Marisco, Olivia, his second wife and widow, reclaimed the entire possession of the island from her step-son, as part of her dower.[c]

In the 15th Edward II. 1321, Herbert de Marisco, at an assize of novel disseisin, held before John de Foxlegh and John de Stonhere, justices itinerant in Devonshire, recovered the island of Sir John de Wyllyngton, of the same family as the governor of the name, and the Justices issued their precept to the Sheriff of Devonshire to put Herbert in re-seisin; but still the said Sir John, not permitting the law of the land to be exercised, by force and by arms defended the island, whereby Herbert could not have his seisin, nor obtain his damages.[e] At the same time, Sir John de Wyllyngton being implicated in the rebellion of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, his lands were seized by the King, when De Marisco came into Court, and prayed that this island, with all its lands, tenements, and their appurtenances, should be restored to him.[d] In this suit he appears to have been unsuccessful, as the island, with all other the lands of De Wyllyngton, were this year given by the King to his favourite Hugh Lord le Despencer,[f] "who rested not," says Dugdale, "till he had gained a release from the said John de Wyllington of all his right and title thereto."[g]

Upon an inquisition being held upon the estates of Sir John de Wyllyngton, the jury reported that "the said Sir John held the island of Lunday, with all its appurtenances, in which is a certain castle with a barton, for which they made no valuation, as the same was destroyed and burnt by the Scots.[h] There are also there in demesne forty acres of arable land worth yearly 10*s.* at the rate of 3*d.* per acre. Also 200 acres of pasture worth 16*s.* 8*d.* per annum, at the rate of 2*d.* an acre. Also three acres of meadow, worth yearly 2*s.* 6*d.* at the rate of 10*d.* an acre.

Also waste land, by estimation 200 acres, worth yearly 8*s.* 4*d.*, so little, because all the tenants in the island have common in it. There is also a rabbit warren worth in ordinary years 100*s.* but this year destroyed in great part by the men of John de Wyllyngton and the Scots. Also a certain rock, called the Gannets' stone, with two places near it where the gannets settle and breed, worth in ordinary years 66*s.* 8*d.* but this year destroyed in part by the Scots. When the unhappy Edward resolved to retire out of England in order to avoid his Queen and rebellious Barons, he looked first to Lundy as a place of refuge. "Having come as far as Chepstow," writes Sir Thomas de la Moore his contemporary, "with the Earl of Gloucester,[j] Robert de Baldock, and a very few others, he took sea in a small vessel, intending to make for Lunday; which is an island in the mouth of the Severn, two miles over every way, abounding in pleasant pastures, and producing from day to day rabbits, pigeons, and stares (termed by Alexander Neckham, Ganymede's birds [k]), in great plenty; well supplied with water furnished to the inhabitants from fresh springs. Though surrounded every where by the sea, it has only one approach, and there two men on foot can scarcely proceed abreast. In every other part of its ragged shores overhanging heights forbid any access.

"To this island, abounding, as has been said, with all necessaries of life, and moreover stored with wine, oil, honey, corn, malt, salted fish, meat, and pit-coal, a contrarywind altogether prevented the King from sailing, though anxious so to do; whence with difficulty escaping the severity of the weather, he landed in Glamorganshire, and proceeded to the abbey of Neath."[j]

The following lines on this subject are taken from a MS. history of Devon, compiled by one Thomas Westcot, Esq. between 1646 and 1656, and are said by him to be the production of a modern poet:[k]

"To Londy, which in Sabrins mouth doth stand,
Caryed with hope still hoping to find ease,
Imagining it were his native land—
England it self: Severn, the narrow seas:
With this conceit (poor soule) himself doth please,
And syth his rule is overruled by men,
On byrd and beaste he'll King it o'er agayn.

"'Tis treble death, a freezing death to feele
For him on whom the sunn hath ever shene;
Who hath byn kneld unto, can hardly kneel,
Nor hardly begg what once hath byn his own,
A fearfull thing to tumble from a throne;
Fayn would he be a King of a lyttle Ile,
All were his Empire bounded in a myle."

Upon the execution of the favourite 30th November 1326, and the abdication of Edward the Second, the island again returned to the Crown, when Edward the Third, in the first year of his reign, 1327, gave the keeping of it to Otho de Bodrigan,[l] Herbert de Marisco being just dead. In the same year the seisin was granted to Philip Lord de Columbers and William de Botereux;[m] from whom it seems to have been reclaimed, as the same King, in his sixth year, granted it to Sir John now Lord de Wyllyngton,[n] who the same year passed it in fee to Ralph his son,[n] who sold it to William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury.[n] This nobleman upon purchase obtained the King's confirmation.[n]

In the 11th Edward III. 1337, John Lord Wyllyngton died, when Lundy, valued at 10*l.* per ann. was found to be held of him by Sir John de Luttrell, brother to Andrew Luttrell, of Irnham, (ancestor of the family of Luttrell Earls of Carhampton,) by the tenure of military service.[o] In the twenty-third of this reign (1349) on the 23rd May, Sir Henry de Wyllyngton, son and heir of Sir Henry brother to Lord John, died, when the James Earl of Wiltshire fell by the axe May 1st, 1461, from which time until the 16th Hen. VII. 1488, it remained unappropriated, when it became the property of his brother and heir Thomas Earl of Ormonde and Carrick, by virtue of the deed of partition of the estates of the before-mentioned Guy Lord Bryan, dated on the 16th December.[s] Thomas Earl of Ormonde died 8th Aug. 1515, leaving issue Anne and Margaret his heirs.

To which of these ladies the island was apportioned I am unable to tell. Anne, the eldest coheir, married Sir James St. Leger of Annery, co. Devon, whose only son the issue of this marriage, Sir George St. Leger, had by Ann, daughter of Edmund Knevyt, Esq. an only son Sir John, who, by Katharine daughter of George Lord Abergavenny, had issue:—John and Dudley, who both died s. p. and three daughters, of whom Mary, the eldest, had to her husband the gallant Sir Richard Grenville, of Bideford, co. Devon, Admiral of England, and by him was mother of the equally gallant Sir Bevill Grenville, who died in the cause of Charles I. at Lansdowne, and whose son and heir appears to have held Lundy at his death.[t] If the island descended through this Mary to her grandson, it passed for a time from the family, as will presently be seen. The two other daughters were, Frances, married to John Stucley, Esq. of Affeton, Devon, and Eulalia, the wife, first of Edmund Tremain, Esq. of Cullacomb, Devon; secondly, of Tristram Arscott, Esq. of Annery.

Having traced the blood of the Earl thus far, we return to the other coheir, Margaret, married to Sir William Boleyn, K.B. whose son and heir Thomas was created Earl of Wiltshire and Ormonde, and died in 1538, leaving the Princess Elizabeth, his granddaughter, and his daughter Mary, widow of William Carey, Esq. (the father of the first Lord Hunsdon,) and wife of Sir William Stafford, his coheirs.

On the 16th February 1646, we find William Viscount Say and Sele writing to Thomas Bushell, Esq. appointed by Charles I. Governor of Lundy, praying him to deliver into his possession "his inheritance," at the same time informing him, that, in the event of his being desirous of purchasing it, he should have the same for the sum of 3000*l*. The Governor had, on the 19th of February the preceding year, expressed his wish to retain it, in consequence of its vicinity to some silver mines in which he had engaged at Combe Martin in Devonshire, offering his Lordship, in lieu, any part of the lands he had in Oxfordsire.

After some negociation, and a summons on the part of the Parliament, dated 10th April, the following letter was addressed by the Governor to Charles:

"May it please your Majesty,

"The inclosed I received from my Lord Say's servant, who is now Governor of Swanzey, which I conceive was sent by his Lordship's direction, wherein he invites me to the surrender of this Isle, being his Lordship's known purchase; in the perusall of which I was not at all startled at the threats therein; but must confess my self moved at the obligation it minds me of, with which I formerly acquainted your Majesty in the presence of my Lord of Dorset, since which Captain Crouther, Vice-Admirall of these seas, summoned me to surrender this place. And not long after, Sir Tho. Fairfax sent a drummer with his letter and an order from the Committee of both Kingdoms, wherein they proposed their assistance in restoring me to my interest in the silver mines, if that I would deliver up this Island to my Lord Say. Your Majesty well knoweth how I have maintained Lundy at no other contribution but my own, and how cheerfully I have exposed my friends and my own credit for your service, as well as exhausted them in the discovery of the mines royall; besides the place in it self is useless, except in some advantages it may yield to me, if your sacred Majesty would be pleased to vouchsafe me leave to express my gratitude to my Lord Say by my quiet and free surrendring it, which I hope your goodness will not deny me; but if, otherwise, your Majesty shall require my longer stay here, be confident, Sir, I shall sacrifice both life and fortune before the loyalty of

"Your obedient humble Servant,

"THOMAS BUSHELL."

"Lundy, 14 May 1646."

The reply of Charles to this letter is too remarkable to be omitted; it is as follows:

"Bushel,

"We have perused your letter, in which we finde thy care to answer thy trust we at first reposed in thee; now, since the place is unconsiderable in it self, and yet may be of great advantages unto you, in respect of your mines, we do hereby give you leave to use your discretion in it, with this caution, that you do take example from our selves, and be not over-credilous of vain promises, which hath made us great only in our sufferings, and will not discharge your debts.

"From Newcastle, 14 July 1646."

On the 24th February 1647, the island was delivered up to the honourable Richard Fiennes, deputed by his father to take possession of it. The following letter, addressed to Sir Thomas Fairfax, conveys an interesting account of this proceeding:

"May it please your Excellency,

"To be informed, that according to your commands, and Mr. Bushel's promise, both me and my souldiers met him at the Kay of Crovelly, being the place appointed, and the nearest harbour to take shipping for Lundy, where we were forced to stay fifteen dayes for a winde, before we could arrive into the road of Lundy; and his lieutenant having notice that it was us by their governour Mr. Bushel's shooting off a pistoll, gave us at our landing a salutation with all his guns, and a volle of shot as an entertainment of friendship and free-welcome, which made me so confident of his former profest fidelity in surrendring the same, that both my selfe and my men marcht through his guard unto the castle, commanding his own men to remain in another house, lest the ignorance of some men on both sides might beget a difference through exchange of language and mis-understanding of the truth; but so soone as they had understood the King's consent for a surrender to the right owner, and the conditions made on their behalfe by their governour, Mr. Bushell, with your Excellency and my Lord, the morning tide following they took shipping for Ilford Combe, where he purposeth to imploy them in his chargeable adventures of recovering the distressed works of Commartyn Mynes and his other minerals in Wales. The garrison being thus freely surrendered, with all things thereunto belonging, for ammunition of guns and household stuffe, according to his engagement upon the word of a gentleman, but having demanded of his lieutenant Mr. Richard Cock, what store of provision was left in the island, he replyed with a deep protestation, that for six monthes before Mr. Bushell went over to treat with your Excellency, according to your letter sent by your drummer, they nor their governor had not eaten a bit of bread in six months, nor scarce drank a barrell of bear in two yeares, alleaging the occasion was the governour's known losses by land and sea, which caused divers of the souldiers to decline the service, upon his proposall of eating horse-flesh. And made the hearts of those that staied more willinger to endure all kindness to obey his commands, without trespassing of any by land or sea, were it to the loss of their lives; this integrity of theirs, and the honesty of the governour, as also his publique imployment in minerals for the common good, being confirmed by the countrey, makes me humbly present their names here underwritten as officers and souldiers of the last garrison, and men that have done the least of injuries notwithstanding their sad condition, which I wish for the president of others, they may be lookt upon as the best of enemies that have conditions from the honourable Parliament and your Excellency.

Echard tells us that Lord Say and Sele, "after he had liv'd to see all his fine projects and ambitious designs defeated by the over-ruling power of his friend Cromwell, was first content with a voluntary retreat, or rather imprisonment in the isle of Lundy, and after to employ the same parts and industry in promoting the restoration of the old government." [v]

A glowing picture has been drawn [w] of the prosperity of the island previous to a descent of the French in the reign of William the Third. Its population at that time is estimated at the probably far exaggerated number of 100 persons, and it "bore exceedingly fine barley, potatoes, and almost every kind of garden stuff in great abundance." At this period, a ship of force, pretending to be a Dutchman, came with a request to bury the body of her captain in consecrated ground; the stratagem succeeding, the crew carried into the chapel a stock of arms in the pretended coffin, and, having made themselves masters of the place, carried off or destroyed all the cattle on the island,[x] spoiled all the provisions in the castle, threw the guns over the cliffs, and "left the island in a most destitute and disconsolate condition."

We return to the Grenvilles. John, son and heir of Sir Bevill, was created Earl of Bath, 20th April 1661, and died in August 1701. His son and successor Charles survived him but a few days,[y] and was succeeded by his son William Henry, who died s. p. 17th May 1711, when the island, if it descended as we suppose, devolved to John Leveson, Lord Gower, created Earl Gower 8th July 1746, through his grandmother Lady Jane, aunt and coheir of the last and eldest daughter of the first Earl of Bath. Benson, Esq. a notorious smuggler. "This man," says the author of the Beauties of England and Wales, "though a representative in Parliament," (he was member for Barnstaple from 1747 to 1753,) "finding it adapted to his vocation, having obtained possession, refused again to surrender it, and for some time carried on an illicit traffic in tobacco and other articles. Being at length detected in making false insurances, guilt urged him to a precipitate flight; he went to Lisbon, where it is understood he assumed the order of priesthood." Upon the death of Earl Gower, 24th December 1754, the island remained with his executors till the 15th February 1775, when, for the sum of 510*l.* they conveyed it to John Borlase Warren, Esq. afterwards the Right Honourable Sir J. B. Warren, Bart. G. C. B. Admiral of the White, who resided here, amusing himself with a yacht, till the breaking out of the American war. A suit in Chancery arising from this sale and purchase, John Hett, Esq. a Master in the Court, attended by the solicitors of the plaintiffs and defendant, officially visited the island in 1776. From the report of the said Master[a] we extract an interesting description of the island—the evidence of a very eminent naturalist:

"The Rev. Thomas Martyn of Triplow, in the county of Cambridge, Batchelor in Divinity, and Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge, sworn the 28th day of February, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, that he knows the said island of Lundy, having spent about ten days there in the month of September one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and that the said island is about three miles in length and one mile broad, and that he estimated the said island to contain about three thousand acres of land, and that about five hundred acres thereof, situate at the south end of the said island, were covered with a coarse grass, and might feed lean Welch cattle, but that all the rest of the said island was, in his judgment, and as he verily believes, uncorrigibly barren, and bore little else to cover the rock than heath and moss, and that where there was any soil the staple was mostly very shallow, and incapable, without very great expense, of any considerable improvement; and that the said island was so very high, and so subject to winds, that it would be difficult to grow corn thereon to much advantage; and that the said island was so over-run with rats and rabbits, that any crop which might be produced thereon would, as he apprehended, be infallibly devoured by such rats and rabbits; and that he was persuaded no trees had ever grown upon the said island, nor could be forced to grow thereon to any purpose, without great care, expense, and difficulty, and that the said John Borlase Warren, now Sir John Borlase Warren, Baronet, having caused many trees to be planted in the said island, in the spring of the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, the said Thomas Martyn found that the same were all withered and dead, and that in his judgment the greatest advantage that could be made of the said island, would be by agisting of cattle; but that there would be great drawbacks upon that advantage from the great expence that would necessarily attend the carrying the cattle to and from the said island, which is about three leagues from Hartland Point in the county of Devon, which is the nearest land to the said island; and that the said island is distant eight leagues from the town and port of Ilfracombe, which is the most certain port or place within that distance where proper vessels can be procured to carry passengers, cattle, or goods to the same island; and that there was but one dwelling-house and the remains of an old castle in the said island, and that the said dwelling-house consisted of two stories, and three several rooms on each floor, which was in a very ruinous state and condition, notwithstanding the said Sir John Borlase Warren had caused the same to be repaired; and that he, the said Thomas Martyn, was the better able to depose with respect to the soil of the said island, as he had made natural history and agriculture the chief study of his life."

In 1781, by deed bearing date the 1st and 2d February, Sir J. B. Warren, who had previously let the island on lease of twenty-one years, conveyed it to John Cleveland, Esq. of Tapley, co. Devon, Member for Barnstaple from 1766 to 1802, in consideration of the sum of 1,200*l.* This gentleman conveyed it by deed dated 13th and 14th June 1803 to Sir Vere Hunt, Bart. of Curragh, co. Limerick, for the sum of 700*l.* Sir Vere died 11th Aug. 1818, and was succeeded by his son Sir Aubrey de Vere Hunt (since de Vere) who sold it by deed dated 21st June 1830, to John Matravers, Esq. F.S.A. one of his Majesty's honourable band of Gentlemen at Arms, for 4500*l.* Of this last gentleman, and of William Stiffe, Esq. of Somerset, who had a joint interest in it, Lundy has recently been purchased by William Heaven, Esq. of Bristol.

Having traced the descent of Lundy down to the present time, I now come to speak of the island itself. Its dimensions have been fairly given both by the extent of 1275, and by Professor Martyn; its extreme length being exactly three miles, and its greatest width seven furlongs. It is accessible only by a narrow avenue at its south-east point, through which, as Sir Thomas de la Moore remarks, two men can scarcely proceed abreast; the rest of the island is surrounded by rocks[a] whose irregular summits rise some hundred feet out of the sea. At the northern extremity is among others a very high pyramidical rock, designated as "the Constable," and half a mile lower down on the east side, the rock already spoken of, called to this day "Gannetts' Rock." At the south-east point is a little island connected by a narrow neck of land called "Lamitry," (anciently Lamitor,) whereon samphire flourishes; and adjoining it is "Rat Island," remarkable from the number of rats[b] burrowing about it.

Overlooking the entrance to the island stand the ruins of Marisco Castle, supposed to have been built by the first William de Marisco, and originally a fortification of considerable strength, as is apparent from the remains. A few old dismounted cannon, doubtless some of those which graced its battlements in the time of Governor Bushell, and were thrown over by the French in the reign of William, are yet to be seen. Under the Castle is a curious cavern.

About half a mile from the Castle, travelling northwards, is the ruin or rather site of St. Helen's Chapel, in which divine service is said to have been performed in 1747, when the then lord of the island was here with a party of friends. Attached to it is the burial ground, wherein several

The granite is stratified on part of the west coast, and presents steep cliffs almost on every side toward the water. Some singular caves have been formed by the action of the sea on the weaker portions of the granite." Mr. Greenough, in Lysons's Britannia.

[b] "Rats are so numerous here as to be very troublesome; they are all of the black sort; the great brown rat, which has extirpated this kind all over England, not having yet found its way into the Island of Lundy." Account written in 1775, and printed in Grose's Antiquities.

shipwrecked mariners were interred some twelve years ago, and a piece of ground known as "the Friars' garden."

There is a light-house near the ruins of the chapel, erected by the Corporation of the Trinity-house, who hold a lease of it for 999 years commencing from the 1st July 1819.

The farm-house—that repaired by Sir J. B. Warren—stands between the castle and the light-house; and this is the only residence on the island, except a cottage for the accommodation of the Trinity Company, "Jonney Groat's house," a small cottage at the north point, and two residences for workmen.[c]

Many are the springs of fresh water,[d] bearing out De la Moore's description; but timber or wood it hath none, beyond a few elders and a solitary ash. Westcot tells us that in his time "stinking elders" alone were to be found, and these so haunted by the multitude of stares or starlings that flock in numbers, that there was no coming to them for their dung. Its chief profit then arose from hogs, conies,[e] and sea-fowl, of which last there was so great an abundance, that in the time of breeding Risdon had seen their eggs so thick on the ground that, unless he had looked to his way, he tells us, he had trodden upon them. It then also, according to his account, afforded horses, kine, sheep, swine, and goats. Rabbits, mures, puffins, and the usual rock birds[f] are still to be found here in plenty, as also

[c] In 1794 there were seven houses in the Island and twenty-three inhabitants. In the account in Grose are enumerated, besides the castle and chapel, "a house near St. Helen's well, where a brewhouse is now building, a watch-tower at the landing-place, and another at the north end. There are two walls of moor stone running across the Island; one called South Wall, dividing the South from the Middle Island, the other called Half-way Wall, dividing the North from Middle Island, and placed about half-way between the south and north end. Many ruins of old walls are to be seen, which were fences to inclosures, and plainly prove a great part of the Island to have been once cultivated."

[d] "In the South division are St. Helen's, St. John's, and Parson's Wells; from the two first of which flow rivulets, discharging themselves down two vallies on the east side of the Island. In the Middle division there is a spring called Golden Well, and two rivulets towards the north end of this division; one discharging on the east side, and the other on the west down Punch-bowl Valley. The North island [or division] has no springs, but is very dry and barren." Account in Grose.

[e] In 1794 there were 80 head of cattle, 400 sheep, 12 deer, with pigs and poultry. 400 acres in cultivation, of which 300 were arable, the rest pasture: wheat the principal produce, potatoes and turnips good. Feltham's MS. penes John Britton, Esq. F.S.A.

lobsters, crabs, cray-fish, and mackarel in the season. Woodcocks and a few other birds are also to be met with.

No taxes are paid; nor can it maintain a revenue officer. In the time of Sir J. B. Warren, one was placed upon the island, whose collection during a seven years' residence did not amount to more than 5*l*.

A very complete map of Lundy Island is given in sheet xxviii. of the Ordnance Survey; a plan of the castle and its premises, and two views of it, drawn in 1775, may be seen in the third volume of Grose's Antiquities. Drayton has made the "Argument" of the Fourth Song of his Polyolbion:

> England and Wales strive, in this Song,
> To whether Lundy doth belong:

and the subject of their dispute [g] is thus described:

> This Lundy is a Nymph to idle toyes inclin'd,
> And, all on pleasure set, doth whollie give her mind
> To see upon her shores her fowle and conies spread,
> And wantonly to hatch the birds of Ganimed.[h]

> Of trafique or returne shee never taketh care,
> Nor provident of pelfe, as many Islands are:
> A lustie black-brow'd girle, with forehead broad and hie,
> That often hath bewitch't the Sea-gods with her eye;
> Of all the inlaid Isles her soueraigne Severne keepes,
> That bathe their amorous breasts within her secret deepes,
> (To love her Barry much, and Scilly, though she seeme,
> The Flat Holme and the Steepe as likewise to esteeme,)
> This noblest British Nymph yet likes her Lundy best,
> And to great Neptune's grace preferres before the rest.

[g] In the accompanying personified map, or tableau vivant, in which every river and hill has its genius, the Nymph of Lundy is a very principal figure, standing between Neptune and Amphitrite, a gannet on her head and two conies at her feet; while the opposing shores of England and Wales are thronged with companies of nymphs, bearing every kind of musical instrument, and banners inscribed "St. George for England," "Wales and St. David," determined to "clear the doubt" by a musical contest. Sabrina pronounces the sentence in the Fifth Song; but leaving the question undecided,—

> "That Lundy like ally'd to Wales and England is."

[h] Drayton borrowed this phrase (one poetical enough) from Walter Baker, the Latin translator of De la Moore's life of Edward II.; but at the same time he appends a note candidly confessing that he did not understand it, unless it meant eagles or ostriches, and even suggests as an amended reading, "Palamedis aves," or cranes; but there can be little doubt that it was a whimsical paraphrase for the Gannets, of which the reader has already heard so often.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE PEDIGREE OF THE FAMILY OF BEKE OF ERESBY, IN THE COUNTY OF LINCOLN, BY CHARLES T. BEKE, ESQ. F.S.A.

In the Registrum de Alvingham,[a] which is one of the principal sources from which Sir William Dugdale compiled his account of the family of Bek or Beke[b] of Eresby, in the county of Lincoln, (the ancestors of the Lords Willoughby de Eresby,[c]) the pedigree of the family is thus stated:

"Walterus Bec fuit primus, et venit cum Conquestore, et habuit hæreditatem suam in Flandriâ; et de dono Regis habuit Eresby, et multa alia maneria. Hugo fuit filius primi Walteri, et habuit quatuor fratres, Henricus Bec, Walterus, Johannes, et Thomas. Hugo, in redeundo de Terrâ Sanctâ, decessit sine hærede de corpore suo: Henricus, Walterus, et Johannes diviserunt hæreditatem, quia Henricus primogenitus non fuit multum sapiens. Thomas habuit omnes Ecclesias quæ spectabant ad donationem fratrum suorum. Henricus retenuit Eresby, Spillesby, [Kirk-]by, Wisperton; Walterus, Lusceby, Wynceby, Newton et Fulestowe; Johannes, Beby [Boby] in Kesteven et alia dua maneria.

"De Henrico Walterus. De Waltero Johannes, qui nunc est.

"De Waltero de Lusceby Henricus, qui vendidit Stephano de Langeton manerium de Fulestowe. De Henrico Walterus Bec, qui fuit pugil, et constabularius Castri Lincolniæ."

Dugdale, taking for granted the correctness of the assertion that Walter Beke came to England with the Conqueror, has regarded John Beke, the grandson of Walter, as being the individual who, in 7 John, obtained a licence to marry the widow of William Bardolph,[d] and from him he has carried down the lineal descent of the family to Henry Beke, Walter Beke, and John Beke, which last was summoned to Parliament in 23 and 24 Edw. I. In justice to that great genealogist it must, however, be stated that he has done no more than follow the example of Glover; who, having been employed for that purpose by Peregrine Lord Willoughby de Eresby in 1582, drew up the pedigree of the family in the same form.[e]

The venerable antiquity of this statement in the Register of Alvingham, would alone seem a sufficient guarantee for its correctness, even had not such men as Glover and Dugdale (the former, too, having had access to the private documents of the family,) become, as it were, vouchers for its truth. Accordingly, its authority has been unhesitatingly received by all genealogists and antiquaries down to the present day. The fact, in particular, that Walter Beke came over with the Conqueror, is regarded as established, and as being therefore undeserving of a question. Hence we find that Sir Harris Nicolas, in his "Synopsis of the Peerage," gives the succession of the several members of the family as stated by Dugdale, with the corresponding dates, that against the name of Walter Beke being 1066: whilst Sir Henry Ellis, in his "Introduction to Domesday Book," in a note under the name Walterus Flandrensis, refers to Dugdale as shewing that Walter Beke came to England at the time of the Norman Conquest, and adds, "whether Walter Flandrensis and Walter Bek were the same person, remains yet to be ascertained."[f]

The object of the present observations is to shew, that the foregoing statement in the Register of Alvingham respecting the first Walter Beke of Eresby, is totally incorrect, for that, so far from coming to England at the Conquest, he was not even living at that early period; that the John Beke in whose time that statement was written ("qui nunc est") is identical with the John who was summoned to Parliament by Edw. I. and who has hitherto been regarded as the great-grandson of the former; and that the three following names in the pedigree given by Glover, Dugdale, and other genealogists (viz. Henry, Walter, and John) are consequently superfluous, and must be struck out.

First: that the first Walter Beke of Eresby was not living at the time of the Conquest.

Sir William Dugdale in his "Baronage," in treating of the Lords of Tateshall, says, "at the time of the Norman Conquest Eudo, who, together with one Pinco his sworn brother in war (although otherwise not allied), came to England with Duke William, merited so well from him in that service, as that for recompense thereof they obtained of his gift the lordship of Tateshall, with the hamlet of Thorp and town of Kirkby, in com. Lincoln, to be equally shared between them; Eudo to hold his proportion immediately of the King, and Pinco his of St. Cuthbert of Durham."

The entire correctness of this statement may perhaps not very easily be proved; but these facts, at least, are quite clear,—and they are sufficient for the present purpose, that at the time of the Norman Survey Eudo fil. Spirewic held large possessions in the places mentioned, namely Tateshall, Thorp, and Kirkby, and also in Wispington, Wadingwerde, Berg, Newton, and many other townships in Lincolnshire; and that on Henry the Second's levying an aid for the marriage of his daughter Matilda (A. D. 1167), Hugh the son of Pinco or Pincheun was returned by the Bishop of Durham,[g] as holding of him seven knight's fees in Lincolnshire,[h] de vetere feoffamento,[i] which tenements, as is found from other sources, were situate in the very townships in which Eudo fitz Spirewic's possessions lay in the Conqueror's reign.[k]

[h] The Bishop held only sixteen knight's fees in all. See Surtees's Durham, vol. i. p. cxxvi.

[i] i. e. "tempore Henrici primi, et etiam ante." Dugdale, in his account of the family of Beke, refers to a charter of Henry the first, confirming to Hugh all the lands which his father Pinco formerly possessed. It seems, however, more likely that this charter is one of Henry the second, as in 12 Hen. IV. Robert de Willoughby obtained a confimation to him of the lands granted to Hugh fil. Pinchionis by three charters of King Henry the Second. Cal. Rot. Patent. 12 Hen. IV. m. 6.

From Dugdale's "Baronage," and from numerous other sources, we learn that Walter Beke married Alice, the daughter and heiress of Hugh fitz Pincheun; so that the possessions forming part of those belonging to Eudo fitz Spirewic, which are afterwards found in the tenure of the Bekes, and which down to the present day have continued to compose a portion of the property of their descendants, the Lords Willoughby de Eresby, can only have been acquired by Walter Beke in consequence of his marriage. This fact is, indeed, indisputable; and as Hugh fitz Pincheun (as is above shewn) continued in possession of these lands until the year 1167,[1] it is manifest that Walter Beke could not, as the Register of Alvingham asserts he did, have received them of the Conqueror's gift; and further, as it was not until after that late perod that he can have acquired these possessions in right of his wife (Hugh's daughter), it is absolutely impossible that he should have accompanied William I. in his descent upon England, and indeed morally impossible that he should even have been born at the time of the Norman Conquest.

Walter Beke gave the church of Newton to the monks of Alvingham.[m] An inquiry as to the earliest possible date at which this gift can have been made, will afford a result entirely in accordance with the conclusion thus come to.

The order of St. Gilbert of Sempringham, to which the priory of Alvingham belonged, and which in its foundation must of course have been anterior to the latter, was only established in the time of Pope Eugenius the Third, between 1145 and 1153. From the charter of Hamelinus Decanus, the founder of the Priory,[n] it appears that the church of Alvingham was by him given to Robert de Chesne, Bishop of Lincoln, who filled that see from 1147 to 1167, and that the latter invested therewith the monks of Alvingham at a chapter of Sempringham. Walter Beke in his deed of gift of the church of Newton [o] covenants to obtain the consent of the then reigning King Henry; and as Henry the First had already been dead twelve years before the earliest possible date that can be attached to the priory's foundation, viz.

[1] That Hugh f. Pincheun was was actually living at this late period, is proved by a deed of gift to Kirksted Abbey of Thomas f. Robert de Arcy (Monast. Angl. vol. i. p. 809) dated 9 Hen. II. (1163) to which he is a witness.

1147, this can only have been the second monarch of that name, who reigned from 1154 to 1189. Hence Walter Beke's gift cannot, under any circumstances, have been made previously to the former of these dates, i. e. eighty-eight years after the Conquest; so that we have here a proof entirely independent of the former one, that he was no companion of the Conqueror. I say independently of the former proof, for it must not be lost sight of that, as Newton formed a portion of the possessions of Hugh fitz Pincheun, Walter Beke's gift could not, in reality, have been made so early as the year 1167, when Hugh was still living.

The second point to be established is, that the John Beke in whose time the statement respecting the family was inserted in the Register of Alvingham, is the individual who was summoned to Parliament in the reign of King Edward the First, and not the John Beke who was living in the reign of King John.

Nothing, in fact, can be easier than to establish this; and the wonder is, not so much that the error on this point, when made, should not have been detected, but that it should ever have been committed, since internal evidence alone is sufficient to have prevented it. The statement itself mentions that Fulestowe was sold to Stephen de Langton by Henry Beke of Lusceby, and that this Henry had a son, Walter, who was (not is) Constable of Lincoln Castle. Now Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, filled that see from 1213 to 1228; whilst Walter Beke, the son of Langton's contemporary, was Constable of Lincoln Castle during the later portion of the reign of Henry III. and as late as the ninth year of Edward I. (1281).[p] The entry in the Register was, as itself says, written posterior to these events; and, consequently, it cannot have been contemporaneous with the John Beke who in 7 John (1206) wanted to marry the widow of William Bardolph, and who, as he must at that time have been more than twenty-one years of age, would (if living) have been 100 and upwards at the time when the entry in the Register was made. The only other individual of the same name mentioned in the pedigree, is John Beke who was summoned to Parliament in 23 and 24 Edw. I. (1295-6). This John Beke was Lord of Eresby as early as 39 Hen. III. (1255), when he obtained a charter of free-warren in Spilsby;[q] and as his grandson Robert de Willoughby was born in 1271,[r] he must, at the very latest, have been born previously to the year 1230.[s] It is he, then, and no other person, who is the John Beke "qui nunc est" of the Register of Alvingham.

It is thus seen that the separate conclusions come to with respect to the date when the first Walter Beke possessed Eresby, and gave the church of Newton to the monks of Alvingham, and to that of the entry in the Register of Alvingham itself, entirely correspond: they have both been hitherto regarded as about a century earlier than they really are. The whole pedigree has accordingly to be brought this century lower down; and the natural and inevitable consequence is, that the three generations, introduced by Glover and Dugdale after the John Beke of the Register, in order to fill up the interval supposed by them to have existed between the time of this individual and that of the John Beke who lived during the reign of Edward I. become unnecessary and superfluous.

Hence also it follows, that it was the John Beke of Boby, fourth son of the first Walter, who in 7 John obtained leave to marry the widow of William Bardolph; whilst Hugh Beke, Walter's eldest son, who is stated to have died in returning from the Holy Land, if a crusader, as is most probable, cannot have been engaged in any earlier crusade than the third, which took place in 1189-92.

But it may now be objected that, as the statement of the monks of Alvingham has been shewn to be incorrect in so important a point, the same becomes altogether devoid of authority. This objection, however plausible, is, nevertheless, met by proof from an entirely independent source, that, as to the descent of the family itself, the statement is in all material points perfectly correct. This proof is afforded by the charter of John Beke Lord of Eresby,[t] by which he confirms to the abbey of Kirksted the various gifts made to the same by his ancestors from the time of its foundation by Hugh fitz Eudo fitz Spirewic in 4 Stephen, (1139), and in which he enumerates those ancestors seriatim, and describes their relationship to him in the following precise terms: "Hugo filius Pincionis abavus meus,"—Walterus Beke "proavus meus,"—"Agnes filia Hugonis filii Pincionis, quondam uxor predicti Walteri Beke,"—"Henricus Beke avus meus,"—and "Walterus Beke pater meus." This deed is witnessed by William de Willoughby (that is, John Beke's son-in-law), and by Walter Beke (namely, of Lusceby, the above-named Constable of Lincoln Castle), and Henry his brother.

The corrected pedigree, given hereafter, will place the whole subject in the clearest light, by shewing the entire accordance of each link of the descent, with every document concerning the family to which I have had the opportunity of referring.[u]

Seeing then that the statement in the Register of Alvingham, although in fault with respect to the first Walter Beke, is still entitled to credit in many important respects, it becomes desirable to consider how the error in this particular instance may have arisen.

That it did not originate with the family of Beke itself may well be conceived. They had a perfectly honourable and legitimate title, confirmed to them by several grants of their sovereigns, and held their possessions of the church of St. Cuthbert by a secure and easy tenure. They could, therefore, have had no inducement to set up a spurious title. Still less is it to be imagined that, in the short space of less than a century,[x] they should have fallen into ignorance as to the real state of their pedigree. In fact, John Beke's charter to Kirksted abbey, in which his true descent is fully set out, entirely rebuts any such idea.

It is, then, to the monks of Alvingham alone that the error must be attributed, and the only question is whether it was occasioned by ignorance or by design. If we look to their motive for recording the pedigree, we shall find that it was (as in all other similar cases) merely to preserve a memorial of the benefactions made to their house, in order to prove their own title to them in [u] I may be allowed to state that I had come to the foregoing conclusions, and had drawn up the pedigree in this form, several years before the existence of the charter of John Beke accidentally became known to me.

[x] The interval between the death of Hugh fitz Pincheun and the birth of John Beke of Eresby, cannot by any possibility be made to exceed sixty-three years, taking the very earliest date for the former (1167) and the very latest for the latter (1230). It may have been, and was most probably, much less.

case of need. This, as it has been seen, they did with scrupulous fidelity so far upwards as to include the first Walter Beke of Eresby, that is to say, just so far as their own interests were concerned, the first gift from the family (that of the church of Newton) having been made by him. Beyond this they had little (if any) inducement to concern themselves with inquiring into the origin of the family; still less had they any interest in falsifying their account of it: and it is to be borne in mind that it is only with respect to a fact anterior to the existence of their establishment, and consequently anterior to their connexion with the family, that their statement is found to be incorrect.[y] That they would gratuitously have been guilty of a wilful and deliberate misrepresentation of facts is, of course, not to be imagined. There must, consequently, have been a substratum of truth for what is thus so distinctly and formally recorded; and we are warranted in believing that the family of Beke had really such an origin as that which is attributed to it; that, in fact, the first of the name was a Fleming, who came over with the Conqueror, and had several manors of that monarch's gift. The good monks could scarcely have failed to become acquainted with this traditional account of the origin of the family; for, independently of other connexions, two daughters of Walter Beke had been professed at Alvingham, and a sister of John Beke himself was actually a nun there at the time. But in their eyes Walter Beke was the first of the name: that is to say, he was the first whom they knew or cared to know any thing about: and hence they were led to imagine—their simplicity and good faith can be the only set-off against their consummate ignorance—that he was the individual in question, overlooking the slight inconsistency of making a follower of Duke William in 1066, a benefactor to their Priory, which did not come into existence till nearly, if not quite, a whole century afterwards!

The Flemish origin of the family may, therefore, be admitted on the authority of the monks of Alvingham, corroborated as it is by the fact, that the name is significant in the Low German dialects, in which beke[z] means a brook or stream[a] (the beck of York and Lincolnshire); and we are warranted in believing further, upon the same authority, that the first of the family really accompanied the Conqueror to England, and shared in the rewards bestowed by that leader on his followers.

[y] The Monks of Kirksted, who in that unlettered age were, doubtless, the scribes that drew up John Beke's charter, had an interest in preserving a memorial of the family as far back as it was connected with their house. Hence by them every step as high up as Hugh f. Pincheun is faithfully recorded.

Upon turning to Domesday Book we find two persons of similar name recorded, namely, Walterus Bec and Goisfridus de Bech (i. e. Bek[b]). The former was a small undertenant in Bucks, in no particular corresponding with the monks' description, except in the coincidence of his Christian name with that of the first Walter Beke of Eresby, who, however, is shewn to have not been in existence at the time. The latter (Goisfridus de Bek) had truly "de dono Regis . . . multa maneria," not in Lincolnshire, indeed, but in Herts; and it is far from improbable that he is the individual in question, although it must be confessed that there are no actual traces by which the Walter Beke of Eresby of the succeeding century may be connected with him.

In Herts all traces of the name abruptly and unaccountably cease with Goisfridus de Bek himself; but in the next generation frequent traces of it occur in the adjoining county of Cambridge, and in Norfolk. May the Bekes of Lincolnshire have derived their origin through this channel? In the following generation (temp. Hen. II.) we find also a family of the name (whether connected with the Bekes of Eresby cannot be said) of some consideration in Kent and Sussex, Hugh Beke holding in grand sergeanty of the King "ministerium de Esnetka (?) sua de Hasting,"[c] with Livingsbourn (since Bekesbourn), the chief member of that Cinque-port, by the service of furnishing one ship.[d] By a curious coincidence, Hugh Beke of Livingsbourn, like Walter Beke of Eresby, whose contemporary he must have been, acquired his possessions through his marriage with the heiress of the preceding owner. Bekesbourn appears to have passed into other hands about the end of the 13th century;[e] but the name is met with in the neighbourhood about the beginning of the 15th century, from which time down to the present day the descent of the family is to be regularly traced.

But to return to the Bekes of Eresby. Independently of the error which has been pointed out with respect to the first Walter, there appears to exist another of some importance in the pedigree of the family as usually received. It is stated by Dugdale, on the authority of Glover, that John Lord Beke of Eresby "died 31 Edw. I." leaving issue Walter his son and heir, and also three daughters; viz. Alice, the wife of Sir William de Willoughby, Margaret, married to [Richard de] Harcourt, and Mary. Which Walter departing this life without issue, Robert de Willoughby son of Alice, and John de Harcourt son of Margaret (his sisters) became his next heirs.[f] The errors here is, that Walter Beke is stated to have survived his father. True it is that the son was living at the date of his father's will in July 1301[g] (and even on the 1st August,[h] between two and three years previous to the latter's death);[i] but he must, notwithstanding, have died before his father, for on an inquisition de quo warranto taken 4 Edw. III. (1331), William de Harcourt, Margaret the widow of Robert de Willoughby (John Beke's grandson), and her son John de Willoughby, established their right to a market and fair in the manor of Plesley, in com. Derby, by thus tracing their title thereto by inheritance from Thomas de Bek, Bishop of St. David's (the brother of John Lord Beke], to whom the same was granted by Edw. I. "Et de prædicto Thomâ qui obiit sine hæredibus de se descendentibus prædictum manerium cum pertinentiis cuidam Johanni [Walter's father] ut fratri et hæredi, &c. Et de ipso Johanne descendit manerium quibusdam Aliciæ et Margariæ ut filiabus et hæredibus, &c.[k] Now it is quite clear that if Walter Beke had survived his father, (and the fact could not have been in doubt at that period, only twenty-seven years after John Beke's death,) the title of his sisters Alice de Willoughby and Margery de Harcourt must have been derived through him as heir to his father, and not from the father direct.

Another circumstance is to be adduced, which is totally unintelligible, if the fact be not that Walter Beke died in his father's lifetime. It is that, as Alice and Margery survived both their father and brother, the family possessions would have descended to the sisters as coparceners, and Robert de Willoughby (Alice's son) could have taken no estate in any portion of them until after his mother's decease. This result will be the same whether the father or the son be supposed to have died first. But in 33 Edw. I. (1305), little more than a twelvemonth after John Beke's decease, his grandson Robert de Willoughby was seised of the entirety of Eresby, as in that year he obtained a charter of free-warren therein.[1] Hence it is not possible that his title should have been derived by descent from his mother, unless it be assumed that she, as well as her brother Walter, had died within the twelvemonth which had elapsed since her father's death; an assumption beyond the bounds of all reasonable probability. He must, consequently, have acquired Eresby by gift, and not by descent; and thus we may account for John Beke's notice to his free-tenants dated 30 Edw. I. (1302).[m] the year after the making of his will, in which he states that he has given his manor of Eresby to his grandson Robert de Willoughby, and desires them to attorn to him, by supposing—and there seems no other mode of reconciling all the circumstances of the case,—that Walter Beke, although living on the 1st August 1301, died in the following year in his father's lifetime; and that thereupon John Beke adopted Robert de Willoughby, the eldest son of his eldest daughter Alice, and made over to him his estates, he being at the time a very old man (his grandson himself was at the time 30 years of age), and not expecting, as the case turned out, to live much longer.

Walter Beke, consequently, had never any right to the Barony of Beke; nor has any title to it or to the estates of the family, been derived through him.

ADDITIONS TO DUGDALE'S BARONAGE; FROM THE MS. COLLECTIONS OF FRANCIS TOWNSEND, ESQ. WINDSOR HERALD.

In some of the preceding portions of this work will be found Sir William Dugdale's own manuscript additions to a copy of his BARONAGE, now preserved in the Gough Collection, in the Bodleian Library. (See vol. I. pp. 51, 209; II. pp. 1, 179, 329.) In furtherance of the views with which those notes were transferred to the pages of the COLLECTANEA, viz. of improving any future edition of Dugdale's great work, and of illustrating the descents of the ancient Peerage, the following additions and corrections for the several articles to which they refer, taken from the MS. collections of FRANCIS TOWNSEND, Windsor Herald, now in the Library of the College of Arms, are also preserved here.

Mr. Townsend (who died in 1819) had for many years contemplated the publication of a new edition of the work of his distinguished predecessor, and had ardently devoted a great portion of his time to the collection of materials requisite for that purpose. It is to be regretted that an individual so competent, died without having effected an object long cherished, or even arranged, to any great extent, the mass of matter which he had accumulated. That regret is not lessened by the reflection that, between the period of his death and the acquisition of the manuscripts by the present possessors, many portions have been dispersed and others irrecoverably lost.

Henry son of David King of Scotland, by Maud, daughter and coheir of Earl Waltheof, is ranked by Ordericus and others among the Earls of Northumberland. He died anno 17 Steph.; but it is certain that, if he did enjoy that honour, it did not pass to his issue. Matthew Paris also adds Hugh de Pudsey, Bishop of Durham, and says he bought the Earldom of King Richard the First, who, when he was girding the Rev. Prelate with the sword (as the custom of that time was) used these words, "Am not I a good craftesman, that have made a new Earl of an old Bishop." These two are also admitted in Vincent's corrections of Brooke's Catalogue.

He desires to be buried in the porch of Kempston Church; leaves 40 marks each to his daughters, Maud, Joan, and Elizabeth, and his sons Giles and Thomas, and appoints his wife Margaret, and his brothers Thomas and William Daubeney, his executors. His eldest son John is not named in the will; but by the inquisition taken anno 4 Hen. IV.[b] it appears that John was his son and heir and then only nine years old. This John died in his minority, in the 11th year of the same reign, and Giles his brother was found to be his heir of the age of 14.[c] This is the Giles who was Sheriff of the counties of Bedford and Bucks, in 10 Hen. Brooke inserts this Reginald amongst the Earls of Somerset, and says that by that title he gave the manor of Axminster to the Abbey of Newham, but this does not appear in the charter itself, which is printed in Mon. Angl. vol. i. 928. It seems by Vincent's notes upon this article in Brooke, that Pope Innocent ordained this Reginald to be Earl of Ests, which, in a French book belonging to the house of Mohun, was translated Somerset,[h] by delivering to him a golden consecrated rose, and a yearly pension to be paid upon the high altar of St. Paul's in London.

——— l. 64. After "Joane," note. This Joan was not the daughter of Reginald Fitzpiers, but of William de Ferrars Earl of Derby, and sister of the whole blood to Isabella above mentioned, as second wife to Reginald de Mohun. This is unquestionably proved by Inq. p. m. of John de Meriet, in 1 Edw. III. where the inquiry was as to the heirs of Mary his wife, amongst whom John de Mohun, son of this Joan, is found to be one, as nephew of the said Isabella by her said sister Joan.[i] the sons, Robert, who was lord of Purbeck, Reginald, who was a Knight, and Laurence, were all married and left issue: from Sir Reginald descended Sir John Mohun, who, in anno 4 Car. I. was created Lord Mohun of Okehampton, co. Devon, to him and the heirs male of his body; of whom see in vol. II.[k]

——— l. 60. After "Knocking," add, I have not been able to discover the time of his death, nor have I met with any trace of him subsequent to the 47 Edw. III.; but, as he had been regularly summoned to Parliament up to that year, I conclude that he must have died about that time. His widow survived him, and in 15 Ric. II. had the custody of the property of Maud, one of the daughters and coheirs of John de Burghersh, and in that character, together with John Grenville and Margaret his wife, the other coheir, consented to the dower assigned to Ismania, the widow of said John de Burghersh.[l]

She (i. e. the widow of Lord Mohun) died a° 6 Hen. IV. having had issue three daughters, viz. Elizabeth, then living, and wife of William Earl of Salisbury; Philippa also living, and then wife of Edward Duke of York; and Maud dead, having left issue, by John Lord Strange her husband, a son Richard then Lord Strange, then 20 years old and upwards.[m]

The Barony continued in abeyance amongst these three coheirs for several years, but at length devolved wholly upon the said Richard Lord Strange.

Elizabeth Countess of Salisbury died without issue in the reign of Henry the Fifth.[n]

Philippa Duchess of York, who before her marriage with the Duke had been successively wife of Walter Lord Fitzwalter and of Sir John Golofre, Knt., departed this life in the 10th of Hen. VI. without issue by either of her husbands.

Sandford, in his Genealogical History of the Kings of England, makes two mistakes relative to this Philippa; first, in stating that she married to Lord Fitzwalter after the death of the Duke; and secondly in asserting that she was the mother of Walter Lord Fitzwalter who died in the 10th of Hen. VI.; both these assertions are completely disproved by what follows:

Amongst the several Inquisitions that were taken after her death in divers counties, there is one in Essex, which shews that she held the manor of Wimbish in dower from Walter Lord Fitzwalter her late husband, as parcel of the Barony of Fitzwalter, which was at her death to revert to Walter then Lord Fitzwalter, grandson of her said husband; and another in Somerset, stating that she held in her demesne as of fee a moiety of the manor of Codcombe, which was part of her paternal inheritance, and that "Ricardus le Strange, miles, Dominus de Knokyn, est consanguineus et hæres ejusdem Philippæ, videlicet, filius Matildæ sororis ejusdem Philippæ alterius filiarum Johannis Mohun et Johannæ de corporibus suis legitime," &c. et "ætatis 40 annorum." [o] It cannot be necessary to adduce further evidence to prove that she had no issue: it remains, therefore, only to be shewn that Lord Fitzwalter preceded the Duke in the list of her husbands. This is established by a record of knight's fees that were assigned to her in dower as his widow in a° 11 Ric. II. [p] The Duke of York was then not more than 14 years of age, and he lived till a° 3 Hen. V. when he was slain in the battle of Agincourt.

I have dwelt upon this point because Sandford's work is, and deserves to be, held in great estimation, and had I passed it over unnoticed on this occasion, I might have been suspected of error myself, in asserting that the Duchess died without issue. That point, however, being clearly established, it follows that the abeyance of the Barony of Mohun terminated at her death in favour of her nephew and sole heir Richard Lord Strange, which is further proved by the Patent Roll of 26 Hen. VI. wherein I find a pardon granted to Alexander Hody and others for having purchased "de Ricardo Lestrange milite, Domino de Knokyn et Mohun, ac consanguineo et herede Johannis de Mohun, militis," the manor of Codcombe Mohun, co. Somerset.

From this period the Barony of Mohun, following the descent of that of Strange of Knokyn, passed with it into the Stanley family, and with it fell into abeyance amongst the coheirs of Ferdinando Earl of Derby, and remains in that state to this day.

next year without male issue, and, leaving three daughters his coheirs, his Barony fell into abeyance. Of those daughters Isabella the eldest was unmarried at the time of her father's death, and thirty-eight years of age; Christiana the second was thirty-four years old, and the wife of William Morers; Margery the youngest thirty-two, and the wife of John Dukes.[r] His lands were in Wilts, Kent, Somerset, and Dorset.

P. 561[b], l. 42, note. In the inq. p. m. of this Ralph de Haye, a° 38 Hen. III. it appears that William de Munchensi, son of William, was his next heir, and 24 years old.[t]

P. 562, l. 29, note. He was certainly dead before 16 Edw. I. (probably 14th), for in an extent of the manor of Staunton in Painswick, co. Gloucester, the Jury say that the manor belongs to Dionisia, daughter and heir of William de Munchensi, and was held of her by serjeanty, by one Peter de Staunton then deceased, whose son and heir Robert was 14 years old.[u]

P. 562[b], l. 12, note. The death of William took place in 13 Edw. II. at which time Thomas his son and heir was three years old.[x] Thomas came of age a° 11 Edw. III. and, doing homage, had livery of his inheritance as in the text.

ton-upon-Severn, co. Glouc. and in a° 13 Edw. II. by the description of Isabella de Paegne, Lady of Frampton-upon-Severn, in the county of Gloucester, formerly wife of Robert Fitz Pagan, gives to William de Clifford (her cousin) and Katharine his wife, and John their son, one croft at the Wood-end in the said town, called Winchcroft, which gift her son afterwards, in the same year, confirmed by the style of Robertus Filius Pagani miles, filius et hæres Dñi Roberti Filij Pagani, Dñi de Frampton super Sabrinam.[z]

P. 573, l. 31. There is much confusion and error in the latter part of this article—the following will be found to be a more correct history:

In the 17 Edw. II. Robert Fitz Pain and Ela[a] his wife mentioned above (line 3) levied a fine of the manors of Stoke Curcy, Radeway, Cary, and Charlton, and of the hundred of Canyngton, and other possessions, and settled the same upon themselves and the heirs male of their bodies, with remainder to Robert de Grey, son of Richard de Grey of Codnor, and Elizabeth wife of the said Robert, and the heirs male of their bodies. The said Robert Fitz Pain died in 28 Edw. III. and Ela his widow in the 30th, without issue male; but left an only dau. named Isabel, wife of Sir John Chideoke, heir of the blood of her parents, and of such lands as were not intailed upon Grey. The issue of Isabel continued in the male line till 28 Hen. VI. when Sir John Chideoke died, leaving two daughters his coheirs, Katharine, wife of William Stafford, Esq. and Margaret, wife of William, son of John Stourton, between whom the Barony created by Writ of Summons 25 Edw. I. fell into abeyance.

Katharine had issue Humfrey Stafford, who was created Earl of Devon, and died without issue. She afterwards married to Sir John Arundell of Lanherne in Cornwall, Knt. from whom Arundell of Lanherne and the present Lord Arundell of Wardour.

Margaret's issue continued in direct lineal male succession to the present Lord Stourton; so that the abeyance rests now between Lord Stourton, Lord Arundell of Wardour, and whosoever may be the representative of the other dau. and coheir of Richard Bealing Arundell of Lanherne.

Having thus given au outline of the descendants from Robert and Ela, it remains now to speak of their adopted heirs, Robert de Grey and Elizabeth his wife. This Robert, upon coming into possession of the lands so entailed upon himself and his wife, assumed the surname of his benefactor, and was, like him, called Robert Fitz Pain.

Dugdale, in his printed list of Summons to Parliament, page 276, ascribes a Writ in a° 43 Edw. III. to this Robert Fitz Paine, but upon referring to the Record[c] his name does not appear on the roll; so that, although he possessed the chief of the baronial lands, he did not enjoy the dignity. He married Elizabeth, the dau. of Sir Guy de Bryan, and by her had issue an only dau. his sole heir, named Isabel, who at the time of his death, which happened in the 16th of Rich. II. was 30 years old, and wife of Sir Richard Poynings.[d]

Margaret, married to Sir Robert Howard, Knt. and had issue Sir John, whose only son Sir John left an only daughter, his heir, named Elizabeth, who married to John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, father by her of the Earl above named; Sir William Tyndale was the son of Thomas, son of William Tyndale, by Alice his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Simon Felbrigge, son and heir of Sir Roger Felbrigge, by the said Elizabeth Scales. The Earl of Oxford's portion fell again into abeyance along with the other Baronies of that family, amongst the sisters and coheirs of his nephew John Earl of Oxford (son of his brother Sir George), who died in the 18 Hen. VIII. [For their issue see Vere.] Sir William Tyndale's posterity continued in regular male succession for several generations in the counties of Norfolk and Essex, as appears by their pedigree recorded at the Heralds' Visitation of the latter county in 1634.[g]

Margaret, wife of Sir Thomas Peverell, whose representative and heir is the present Marquis of Hastings.

Joan, wife of Sir John Dynham of Hartland, in Devon, Knt. whose great-grandson, John Lord Dynham,[h] dying without issue in the 16 Hen. VII. his four sisters became heirs to this portion; of whom Joan the eldest was the wife of John Lord Zouche, ancestor of the present Baron.

Katharine, the third, married Sir Thomas Arundell of Lanherne, in the county of Cornwall, Knt. whose lineal descendant and heir in 1666 was Sir John Arundell, then of Lanherne.

Margaret, the fourth, was the wife of Sir Nicholas Carew; their grandson Sir William Carew's only child that left issue, was Cecily, who was the second wife of Sir Thomas Kirkham of Blackdown, in Devon, Knt. by whom she had a daughter Thomasin, wife of Thomas Southcote of Bovey Tracy, whose grandson Thomas recorded his pedigree at the Heralds' Visitation of Devon in 1620,[i] at which time he was married, and had five sons and three daughters; his eldest son, Sir Popham Southcote, was knighted in Aug. 1629; he married[k] Margaret, daughter of Sir Maurice Berkeley of Bruton in Somerset, by whom he had several sons.

It does not appear whose daughter this Maud was, nor at what time she died, but in 21 Edw. III. Katharine was the name of his son's then wife, as is shown below.

III.[l] and in the same year Katharine, his father's widow, had dower assigned to her. This Henry was found heir to his brother Richard in 35 Edw. III.[m] He died 7 Ric. II.[n] being then styled Chevalier, leaving Ankaret, his second wife, surviving, and Henry his son and heir, of the age of 22 years. The time of the death of Elizabeth, the first wife, not being known, it cannot be precisely ascertained which of the two gave birth to the son; but the distance of time between the first marriage in 21 Edw. III. and the death of the husband in 7 Ric. II. including a period of 34 years, renders it probable that the son, who was only 22 when his father died, was the issue of Ankaret.

This Henry, however, did homage in 7 Ric. and had livery of his lands,[o] viz. Hartyng and Pulborough in Sussex; Harcombe and Danhurst in Surrey; Southmorton in Berks; a moiety of Saperton in the county of Gloucester, &c. Ankaret, his father's widow, died in 13 Ric. Henry his son and heir, who had just attained his full age, and who, a° 35 Hen VI. settled all his lands, in case of his own death without issue, upon his brother Nicholas Husee, and the heirs of his body. Afterwards Henry died s. p. and Nicholas succeeded, and died seised on 5 Dec. a° 10 Edw. IV. leaving two daughters his coheirs, who were both minors: Custance, of the age of 12, and Katharine 10. Katharine married Sir Reginald Bray, K.G. but had no issue; so that Custance became sole heir.[r] She married twice, first to Sir Henry Lovell, Knt. and secondly to Sir Roger Lewknor. By her second husband I believe she had no issue; but by her first, who died 20 April a° 16 Hen. VII. (at which time she must have been 40 years old) she had two daughters, Elizabeth and Agnes, whose wardship and marriage was given to their uncle Sir Reginald Bray, who directs in his will (dated 1503, and proved in Nov. that year) that they should be married to two of the sons of his brother John Bray. One of them, Elizabeth, did marry Edward Bray, son of John, by whom she had no issue. But in 24 Hen. VII. she was the wife of Anthony Windsor, younger brother of Andrew Lord Windsor, and her sister Agnes wife of John Empson, and they had livery of the lands in that year.[s] Their present representatives are unknown to the Editor.

Between line 44 and 45 insert a note. This Henry (who died a° 23 Edw. III.) having had three sons and a daughter by his first wife, upon taking a second wife levied a fine and divided his lands amongst his children, which was probably the cause of the discontinuance of writs of summons. The issue of the first son (Mark) failed; another son (Richard) died without issue in 35 Edw. III. and Henry, who survived Richard, became then sole heir and representative of his father. This Henry died in a°. 7 Rich. II. and it was his son Henry who did homage in that year, not the Henry mentioned in the text.

——— l. 47. After "him," add, The discontinuance of writs has not of late years been invariably considered as a positive bar to the claim of a Barony in the lineal heir of the first possessor, how numerous soever the intervening generations may be (see the case of Fitzwarin), notwithstanding that Sir William Dugdale, acting probably according to the received notions of his day, thought fit to dismiss it.

Her mother was Jane, daughter and heir of Edmund Gunville, son and heir of John Gunville, Esq. son and heir of Sir Nicholas Gunville, Knt. brother and heir of Sir Edmund Gunville, sometime parson of the parish church of Rushworth, and founder of Rushworth college in the time of King Edward the Third. A good account of her and her family may be found in the first volume of Bloomfield's Norfolk, p. 216.

VII., and Elizabeth, born 1502, of whom Glover, in a pedigree compiled by him, says, "Obijt in infantia, et parturiendo cum ipsa nasceretur mater obijt."[y] Glover himself died in 1588.

P. 657[b], l. 42. After "Durham," note. The latter part of this paragraph is very erroneous, and should be thus corrected from "1592," viz. He had two wives, the first was Mary (not Eleanor) daughter of Edward Lord North; and the second Margaret.

GORGES.—Vol. II. 55.

[Ralph Gorges was summoned to Parliament on the 4th March 2 Edw. II. 1309, and continued to be so summoned to the 18th Sept. in the 16th year of that reign, 1322. He died in 17th of Edward II. and it is stated by different writers that neither he nor any of his descendants, who continued in the male line for several generations, were ever again summoned. The fact, however, is that he died leaving an only son aged 15 and two daughters. The son dying a minor soon after, the daughters became his heirs, when the Barony upon his death fell into abeyance.]

Page 55, line 22. "To whom succeeded Theobald de Gorges," &c. This is an error. Theobald de Gorges was not the successor, but the younger son of a second daughter, who took the name and arms of his maternal grandfather, and that circumstance probably led Dugdale into the mistake: the truth is, that Ralph died before the Parliament[y] of 17 Edw. II. was called, and consequently could not be summoned after the 16th. At his death he left a widow named Eleanor, who afterwards married Sir Guy de Ferre, and a son and three daughters; the son, who was also named Ralph, was then only 15 years of age, and he dying a minor the Barony fell into abeyance amongst the daughters, Elizabeth, Eleanor, and Joan, and the lands were parted between them.[z]

Elizabeth married ..... Ashton, and had a son named Robert, who died without issue, and upon whose death his mother's portion passed to the issue of her sisters.[a]

Eleanor married to Sir Theobald Russell of Kingston Russell in the county of Dorset (heir of a moiety of the Barony of Newmarch) by whom she had issue Sir Ralph Russell[b] her son and heir, and Theobald her younger son,[c] who assumed the name and arms of Gorges, as above noticed, and from whom sprang the family of GORGES of Wraxall, in the county of Somerset. Sir Ralph Russell, the eldest son, died[d] ao 49 Edw. III. and was succeeded by his son and heir Sir Maurice, who married two wives; by the first he had issue two daughters, and by the second one son Sir Thomas, who died[e] ao 10 Hen. VI. leaving his wife pregnant of a daughter, who died on the second day after her birth, and the heirs of Sir Thomas were found to be his two sisters Margaret and Isabel, the daughters of Sir Maurice; Margaret, the eldest, was then the wife of John Kemeys of Syston, in the county of Glouc. Esq. but had been formerly married to Sir Gilbert Dennys[f] of Derham, in the said county, Knt. and her issue by both her husbands is still existing (1812).

Isabel, the second daughter of Sir Maurice Russell, was the wife[g] of Stephen Haytfield at the time of her brother's death; but I have not been able to trace any issue from that match.[h]

Joan, the third daughter and coheir of Ralph Lord Gorges, married Sir William Cheney, to whom she was the second wife, and upon his death in 19 Edw. III.[i] she had dower assigned to her in Somersetshire, adjoining to those lands on which Eleanor her mother then widow of Sir Guy de Ferre resided. She had issue[k] Sir Ralph Cheney; whose son and heir Sir William married Cecily, daughter and heir of Sir John Streeche, Knt. and had issue Sir Edmund, who died anno 9 Hen. VI.[l] leaving by Alice his wife, who was daughter of Sir Humphry Stafford, three infant daughters, Elizabeth, Anne, and Cecily, the eldest only six years old, the second three, and the third one year and ten weeks. Of these it seems Anne was the only one who left issue; she married to Sir John Willoughby, Knt. and the present Lord Willoughby de Brooke is the heir and representative.

[f] C. 17—116, in Coll. Arm. [g] Esc. 10 Hen. VI. ut antea.

[h] Rudder and Atkins, in their Histories of Gloucestershire, say that the manor of Dirham, which had long been of the inheritance of the Russells, and was settled by Sir Maurice for their sole use, was divided between Margaret and Isabel his daughters, and that Sir John Drayton, the husband of Isabel, sold their moiety to Sir Gilbert Denys, the husband of Margaret, in anno 10 Hen. V. (Esc. 20 anno) and I see no reason to question this statement; it is certain that the family were long lords of the entirety, and sold it to Winter, anno 13 Eliz. The match of Isabel with Drayton must therefore have been prior to that with Hatfield, whose wife she was in 10 Hen. VI. The heirs of these two sisters, Margaret and Isabel Russel, are also heirs of a moiety of the Barony of Newmarch by descent from the grandmother of Theobald Russel, great-grandfather of the said two sisters, which grandmother of the said Theobald was daughter and coheir of James de Newmarch, who held the entire Barony (Dugdale, i. 436) and whose other daughter and coheir married Nicholas de Moels, whose grandson possessed the other moiety anno 3 Edw. I.

to this period, differs so materially from the preceding account that I give it here as I find it.

Robert Burnell, a knight in the army which Earl Roger de Belesme brought over to this kingdom with William the Conqueror, died here in anno 1087, and was buried at Buildewas in Salop; he was succeeded by Sir John Burnell, who married Petronilla Corbet, and died in 1107; Sir Roger, who died in 1145; Helena in 1147; Sir Hugh in 1169; Sir Richard in 1189; and the heart of Sir William, who died in the Holy Land, in 1211, were all deposited in the same Abbey. This Sir William married Isabella Longespe, and had issue Sir Hugh, who died in 1242, leaving by Petronilla Cheyny, his wife, three sons, Sir Robert, who continued the line, Sir William, and Sir Philip, who were both drowned at Nevyn, 6th Nov. 1282. Sir Robert died in 1269, and his eldest son Philip in anno 10 Edw. I. leaving Robert his son and heir.[m]

P. 61 [b], line 47. After "Chastelyn." This John de Handlo had two wives: the first was Joan, daughter and sole heir of John Fitz Nigel, Lord of Borestall in the county of Bucks, by whom he had Richard, the father of Edmund above mentioned; and if the two Writs of Summons of 1st and 16th Edw. III. can be considered as creating a Barony,[n] that Barony upon the death of Edmund without issue fell into abeyance between his sisters Elizabeth de la Pole and Margaret Chastelyn. [For Elizabeth's issue see De la Pole.] Margaret had no issue by Chastelyn; but she had another husband named John de Appulby, at the time of her mother's death (who was a daughter of John de St. Amand, Baron of Widhey), by whom she had Joan her only child, wife of John Conghull, and their only daughter and heir married to Sir John Osbaldeston, from which union proceeded the family of Osbaldeston of Chadlington, and the heir of the last Baronet of that name is the lineal representative of Margaret Chastelyn.

The second wife of John de Handlo was the said Maud Burnell, in whose right he held at the time of his death, as tenant by the curtesy of England, the manor of Enham Militis, &c. (as

His first wife and the mother of his son was Joan, daughter and heir of Sir John Devereux, and widow of Walter Lord Fitzwalter.[c] To the end of the article add, Joice had no issue by Erdington; Margery was ancestor of the Hungerfords of Down Ampney, Cosham, and Cadenham,[q] and the heirs of the Down Ampney line are her representatives, which I take to be Sir Henry Oxenden and the Duke of Manchester (1812). Catharine was ancestor of the Radcliffes Lords Fitzwalter. The Barony is therefore now in abeyance; one moiety in the heirs of the Barony of Fitzwalter, and the other between Sir Henry Oxenden, Bart. and the Duke of Manchester.

ADDITIONS TO THE PEDIGREE OF THE FRESCHVILE FAMILY, AND A FEW CORRECTIONS. BY THE REV. JOSEPH HUNTER.

The references are to former pages of the present volume.

(67.) p. 211. Issue of Sir Peter Freschvile, who died in 1558. The marriage of a daughter with Lassels [of Gateford] is stated by Col. Colepeper (Adversaria, vol. ii. MS. Harl. 7588); but it seems, as is here observed, to be a mistake. No such marriage appears in the better authorities, and the accounts of Lassels of Gateford which have come down are good, and yet contain no such marriage. It ought, however, to have been added, that Rosamond, after the death of Ellis Markham, married George Blount of Eckington, a somewhat remarkable person, the son of Robert Blount of the same place, one of the many children of Sir Thomas Blount of Kynlet. The marriage appears in Harl. 1982, f. 76 b, a good authority, and is confirmed by the following passage in manuscript memoirs of Arthur Mower, a servant of Mr. Peter Barley of Barley, grandson of Sir Peter Freschvile, who says, "and after this time Mr. Barley decayed greatly, and [was] very sickly and weak, and in Lent went to his aunt Blont to Eckyngton, who was his mother's sister, and married Mr. George Blont, and there did continue till Wednesday in Easter week, and he then died and was buried at Barley chapel, in the Lady's quire, of Thursday at morn about sun-rising, anno Dom. 1588, and the 11th April." Eckington and Staveley are adjoining parishes. Barley is, ecclesiastically, dependant on Staveley.

(61.) p. 210. "Margaret was heir of Arthur Kay of Woodsam." This is a mistake. She had two brothers, and was in no sense the heir to her father. The lands of Woodsome and the other estates of the Kayes descended in the posterity of her elder brother. It ought also to have been added that she was a widow when Peter Freschvile took her to wife. In manuscript memoirs of the family of Kaye, written by two or three members of the family in succession, I find this notice of her, "He [Arthur Kaye] dyd marry Margrett his dowghter to Frauncis Woodroffe of Woolay, Esq. and dyd gyve with her in marriage VIII. or IX. hundrith marks at the leaste. He died withowt issue. Margrett was after maried to Peter Freschvile of Staley, Esquire, who, God be thanked, has issew Peter, John, and Rosamond now maried to Mr. Darcy." If more were wanted for the proof of this, there is the following entry in the parish register of Almonbury (the parish to which Woodsome belongs) "1559, May 22. Francis Woodrove, esquier, was maried to Margaret, the daughter of Arthur Kaye of Woodsome, esq.; at the solemnization of whose marriage the ministration of the Holy Communion began in our church." Her death is thus recorded by her brother John Kaye of Woodsome, "Mem. that my deare and natural sister Frechvile departed this life at Staley, upon St. Andrew's day in anno Dom. 1591," so that the query respecting the year of her death "35?" might be omitted. When I examined the Register of Staveley, many years ago, I did not observe any entry of her burial.

The baptisms of her three children are all entered in the register, viz. Peter, 13 May 1574 (according to my notes taken 19 April 1804, but perhaps in error); Rosamond, 5 June 1576; and John, 2 March 1577, who was born on the 26th Feb. preceding.

(62, 70, 71.) The marriages of the second Sir Peter Freschvile. The first is correctly and fully shown. They were married at Wales, a village in the neighbourhood, 18 Oct. 1604. "Mr. Wolley has given no reference to any proof of the second marriage. She is mentioned, however, in Sir Peter's will, and survived him." The second marriage is very imperfectly set forth in the pedigree, nor does the lady appear in the pedigrees of the family to which she belongs, in any of the more ordinary manuscripts. I have met with her, however, in a contemporary manuscript of good authority, where she appears as "Isabel, daughter of Hercy Nevile of Grove in Nottinghamshire, mar-riel 1. to Sir John Harpur, 2. to Sir Peter Freschvile, and 3. to Sir Gerard Fleetwood. She had no issue."

(72.) The question of the time of the birth of John Lord Freschvile, seems to be determined by the register of Staveley, where, if the note from it be correct, he is said to be born on 4 December 1606, and baptised Dec. 21 following. His two sisters, Elizabeth and Margaret, were baptised 5 May 1605, and 18 Dec. 1608. Elizabeth was born on the 24 April. She died an infant, and is no doubt the "Elizabeth Freschvyle," who was buried the 10th October 1605. Margaret (whose posterity ultimately became the representatives of this ancient house) married Sir John Ramsden in 1624, on the 10th day of ....., the month not easily to be determined. The statement that Lord Freschvile was born 26 Feb. 1577 (p. 214) is a mistake arising from attributing to him what belongs to his uncle, also named John.

(72.) p. 213. I know not why any doubt should be intimated whether Sarah the wife of Lord Freschvile (then John Freschvile, Esq.) was the heir of her father Sir John Harrington. It is frequently so stated by Col. Colepeper, and there is no reason to doubt that she was so. As there were several Sir John Harringtons living about that time, it may be proper to add a more full description of him than is given in the pedigree or the notes. He was the eldest son of Sir Henry Harrington, a younger son of the house of Harrington of Exton. I do not observe in Colepeper's Adversaria any notice of the wife of Sir John Harrington; but she was an Offley.

Christiana, the eldest daughter of Lord Freschvile, was born at the house at Hazleborough in the parish of Norton, a few miles from Staveley, and baptized at Norton 19 Dec. 1633.

The three latest entries of the family in the parish register of Staveley are the following:

Sepulti.

1668. Sep. 1. Radulphus Freschville armiger de Mansfield.

1682. Apr. 9. Johannes Dominus Frescheville, Baro de Staveley, et patronus dignissimus hujus ecclesiæ parochialis; et decem libr. pauperibus hujus parochiæ .....

1689. Mar. 9. Honorabilis Elizabetha Comitissa Holdernesse.

Amongst the Colepeper papers is the draft of a letter from Mrs. Colepeper, sister to the Countess, entreating of the family to whom Staveley had been sold, permission to inter the body near the remains of her ancestors.

If it had been intended to enlarge on the personal history of Lord Freschvile, his wives, his daughters, and his sons-in-law, there are ample materials in the Colepeper papers, of which some one no doubt will one day avail himself. It may be added, that of Lord Freschvile himself there are frequent notices in the published Life of Comber, Dean of Durham.

John Freschvile, the uncle of John Lord Freschvile, and younger brother of the second Sir Peter Freschvile, was seated at Hazleborough, where a good old mansion, apparently built about his time, was lately, and probably is still, standing. He married, as is here stated, Barbara, daughter of Gervas Eyre, not of Knyveton, but of Kyveton in the county of York, where the Dukes of Leeds had formerly a seat. The daughters, Rosamond, Mary, Elizabeth, and Joyce, for that is the order in respect of age, were baptized at Norton 28 Nov. 1602, 29 April 1606, 28 April 1608, and 19 April 1610. The daughter Margaret does not I believe occur in the register. Of these ladies nothing more is known, except that Joyce married, as is shown in the pedigree, Thomas Dykes, Esq. of Cumberland, in which family (as well as in that of Ramsden) the name of Freschvile has sometimes been given as a Christian name, in memory of this descent. John Freschvile of Hazleborough, the father of these coheirs, died on January 5, 1610-1, leaving them very young, and was interred at Staveley. His widow is said, I cannot at this moment refer to the contemporary authority, to have remarried with Richard Bland.

The burial of Ralph Freschvile, Esq. at Staveley, on 1 Sept. 1668, has been noticed above. When the John Freschvile we have just mentioned was dead without issue, and Sir Peter Freschvile had only one son, the chance of perpetuating the name and family was reduced to the lives of the said son (afterwards Lord Freschvile) and this Ralph Freschvile, who was of a junior branch of the family. Sir Peter Freschvile, with a view, as it seems, that Staveley should descend in the name of Freschvile, entailed it by his will, dated 16 March 1632, on his only son John Freschvile and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his "Cousin and Godson" (which is the true reading of the passage, misquoted p. 212; where also for Hauley read Hanley, and for Echington, Eckington) "Ralph Freschvile and his heirs male of the body." The settlement in his favour never took effect, for he died without male heirs in the life-time of John Lord Freschvile. It was probably the death of this Ralph which enabled Lord Freschvile to sell Staveley, which he did some time before his death, to William Earl of Devonshire. Col. Colepeper says that Lord Freschvile never saw Staveley after he had sold it. (Adversaria, vol. xvi.)

When Col. Colepeper accompanied the body of Lord Freschvile his father-in-law to be interred at Staveley, he affected to take formal possession of the estate.

The descent of this Ralph Freschvile is correctly shewn in the pedigree (p. 5) but the line is very imperfectly exhibited. His grandfather, Ralph Freschvile, was the 2nd son of the first Sir Peter Freschvile, who became seated at Carlton in Nottinghamshire, and married Milicent, daughter of Brian Lassels of Gateford, which is near Carlton, as is shown in the pedigree. His lady was buried at Staveley 20 June 1628. Their son Peter was baptised at Carlton 7 Jan. 1574, and buried there 6 June 1612. I know not whether the Rosamond who appears in the pedigree is the person of whom there is this singular notice in the will of Sir Peter Freschvile (1632): "To my cozen Rosamund Osborne 10*l.* to be employed in binding Francis Osborne her son to a tailor or some other good trade." Peter Freschvile the son married as in the pedigree; but beside Ralph and Mary who appear in it he had many other children, viz. Peter, Henry, Dorothy, Winifred, Theodosia, Sarah, and Margaret. The baptisms of all the nine children are found in the register of Carlton between 1600, when Ralph was baptized, and 1611, when Henry was baptized. Peter was buried in 1611, and it is probable that Henry died young; but some of the daughters appear to have lived to advanced ages, and Mary, one of them, to have become the wife of Eustace Seymour, gent. Seymour resided at Carlton, and had Freschvile, Martha, and Susannah, whose baptisms occur in the register.

I know not what is the precise authority for the marriage of this Ralph Freschvile (the heir to Staveley if he had survived his cousin John Lord Freschvile) to Ann Atkins, nor whether he (or a Ralph Fretwell his contemporary of Hellaby in Yorkshire) is the person (p. 211) who married Mrs. Ann Burbidge; but what Colepeper states is important (Adversaria, vol. xiv.) that he had a daughter Sarah who married Sir Charles de Vick, by whom Miss de Vick a Maid of Honour in 1697. It would seem also as he is described as of Mansfield in the register of his interment at Staveley, that the following entry in the parish register of that place may belong to his family, "1673. May 22. Robert Hall, gentleman, and Anne Fretchvill, gentlewoman." She was probably his widow. J. H.

XLVIII.

ROLL OF THE ARMS OF THE KNIGHTS AT THE TOURNAMENT AT DUNSTABLE, IN 7 EDW. III.

The following list of the tilters at Dunstable, in the 7th of Edw. III. with their coat armour, will be found in MS. Cotton, Otho, D. IV. 92. and among the Sloane MSS 1301. 257, as already stated in page 63 of this volume.

It was, perhaps, rather too hasty an assertion, in printing the preceding Roll, to affirm that the tournament of the 2nd of Edw. II. was undoubtedly the one held at Stepney and not at Dunstable. There certainly was one held at Dunstable in that year; although the evidence favours the supposition that the Roll before printed belongs to the one at Stepney. Besides the copy of the Roll of Edward II. made by Cole, there are two other transcripts in the Museum; one an unfinished copy without date in MS. Harl. 6148, f. 145; the other a correct copy in 2213, f. 24. In both cases the tournament is stated to have been held at Dunstable. It will have been observed that the names of the tilters are numbered. This was done for the convenience of adding notes respecting the individuals; but circumstances prevented the research necessary for that purpose. In MS. Harl. 2213. the names are numbered in three divisions; the first headed by the Earl of Gloucester; the second by the Earl of Lancaster; and the third and last headed, "De la Com'une."

P. 313. The Barony of Howland was not conferred immediately on Wriothesley Marquis of Tavistock, but on his grandfather William the first Duke of Bedford; who, having contracted to marry his grandson (then only fifteen) to Miss Howland, was, by patent dated 13 May 1695 (previously to the marriage) created Baron Howland for life, with remainder to his grandson Wriothesley Russell, and the heirs male of his body by Elizabeth Howland, daughter and heiress of John Howland, Esq. deceased. This correction is necessary to the accounts of the family of Russell generally, including Nicolas's Synopsis of the Peerage and Wiffen's Memoirs, ii. 301; though the latter author, with obvious inconsistency, proceeds to mention that it was proposed to introduce the Marquis into the House of Commons as Member for Middlesex, shortly before the death of his grandfather, a plan which could not have been entertained, had the barony then been vested in him. He was not quite twenty years of age when he succeeded as second Duke of Bedford (and of course as Baron Howland) Sept. 7, 1700. There had been no sitting under the patent of the barony of Howland until the present Marquis of Tavistock was summoned by that title; and the following extract from the Lords' Journals, recording the proceedings which then took place, will confirm the preceding statement, and set the matter at rest:

"Die Veneris, 1 Feb. 1833. The Lord Speaker signified to the House, That His Majesty King William the Third, by Letters Patent bearing date the 13th day of May in the seventh year of his reign, was pleased to create William Duke of Bedford a Baron by the name, style, and title of Baron Howland of Streatham, in the county of Surrey, to hold to him during his life, and after his death with remainder to Wriothesley Russell, commonly called Marquess of Tavistock, grandchild of the said Duke, and to the heirs male of the body of the said Wriothesley Russell, begotten of the body of Elizabeth Howland (daughter and heir of John Howland, Esquire, deceased,) for ever.

"That, upon the death of the said William Duke of Bedford, in the month of September 1700, the said barony descended to and vested in the said Wriothesley Russell, who became Duke of Bedford and Baron Howland.

"That the said dignity has continued to be merged in the Dukedom of Bedford ever since, and is now vested in John the present Duke of Bedford.

"That His Majesty has been graciously pleased to issue his writ summoning Francis Russell, Esq. called Marquess of Tavistock, to sit in his father's said barony of Howland; and no person in whom the said barony has been vested had ever been introduced.

"Whereupon his Lordship was (in his robes) introduced," &c.

Buried Feb. 4, Francis Lucy . . .	0	8	0
Sent me by Mis Lucy a G. [guinea] . .	1	1	6

It appears from the same book that Mis Lucy paid the Minister, Mr. John Wade, 1*l.* "pewage" from Lady-day 1685-6 to Lady-day 1686-7; and from the Register-book of Benefactions it appears that in 1685 Francis Lucy, Esq. gave some land for the enlargement of the Chapel-yard at Hammersmith. (Faulkner's Fulham, p. 160.) That the person buried was this gentleman is shown by a coffin-plate recently found in or near Hammersmith church, bearing this inscription: "Here Lyeth ye body of Frances Lucy, Esq. youngest son of Sr Thomas Lucy of Charlecott, in ye county of Warwick. Died January ye 30th in ye 90th yeare of his age, anno dom' 1686-7." He was Member of Parliament for Warwick 1676—1685, and brother to Dr. William Lucy, Bishop of St. David's 1660—1677. Francis married in Feb. 1631, Elizabeth, dau. and coh. of Bevill Molesworth, of Hoddesdon, co. Herts. Esq. and left issue three daughters: 1. Elizabeth, marr. to Sir Edward Atkins, Baron of the Exchequer; 2. Constance, marr. to Sir Philip Meadows, Ambassador to Sweden, and was grandmother of the first Earl Manvers; and, 3. Martha, marr. to Sir Samuel Eyre, Judge of the King's Bench. Sir Philip Meadows was buried at Hammersmith in 1718, as were others of his family (see vol. iii. p. 318).

P. 49. In the library belonging to the Cathedral Church of Durham, among the MSS. of Dr. Christopher Hunter, are two common-place books, which belonged to the family of Wakefield, two of whom were Rectors of Horseheath. In MS. Hunter 19, f. 453, occurs the following:

"Memorandum that Thomas Wakefield, Bachelor of Divinity, &c. Rector of Horsheath, in the County of Cambridge, was born at Radwinter in the county of Essex, June 16, anno 1560, and buried at Horsheath Dec. ..., 1626.

"And Thomas Wakefield, sonne of the said Thomas, was also Rector of Horsheath, and born there Octobris 23, and baptized October 28, 1600; and buried at Horsheath aforesaid, Feb. 8, 1668.

"And Mary, the wife of the said Thomas the sone, was buried at Horsheath Maij 20, Anno Domini 1638.

Arts in Cambridge, Anno 1659, and married by Mr Punter, Sep. 13, 1660."

On the first leaf of the same is this: "Elizabeth Wakefeild, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth, baptised August 5, 1645."

And shortly after: "Twenty shillings distributed to the poore of Horsheath, in consideration of 50*l.* bequeathed by my father and remayning yet in my hands; which distribution was made on Munday in Easter weeke 1628." A list of names, the sums attached to which amount to 23*s.*; and others of the same kind follow, one of them being headed: "April 18, 1630. Given to the poore out of the rent of nine acres land purchased with the abovesayd mony."

At f. 72 b: "Nathaniel Wakefield, Master in Arts, and Minister of Wendens,[a] in the county of Essex, was baptized at Horsheath in the countie of Cambridge, Sep. 21, 1631, and married to Elizabeth Chapman, widow, Sep. 13, 1660."

Then follow these memoranda: Nathaniel and Elizabeth, twins, at West Wickham, co. Camb. from June 28, bap. July 9, 1661; Mary, born at Pampisford, co. Camb. Apr. 17, bap. 29th, 1663; Alce and Judith twins, born and bap. at Pampisford May 7, 1665; Alce died May 21, 1666, and bur. there May 23; Ann, born at Wendens Feb 27, bap. Mar. 8, 1667.

In the MS. Hunter, No. 74, are entries of several baptisms of Horseheath in 1600 and 1601, of which the following belong to the families of Allington and Wakefield:

"Anno D'ni 1600, Reginæ Elizabethæ 42.

"Thomas Allington, filius Egidii Allington arm'i et Doritheæ, natus erat 24 die Decembris, baptizatus secundo die Januarii proxime sequente: mortuus est infra annum."

"Thomas Wakefeild, filius Thomæ et Judethæ, 28 Octob."

"Memorandum, the sayde Thomas Wakefeild was born 23 of October betwene vi. and vii. of the clocke at night, being Thursday, and the signe being then in Libra, and his father was born at Radwinter, June 16, 1560."

"Anno D'ni 1601, Reginæ Elizabethæ 43.

"Egidius Allington, filius Egidii et Dorotheæ, 14 Julij."

At the end of the book (among other memoranda):

"The first year at Pampisford, I had 14 tith pigs, Martii 26, 1664."

"Martij 8 [no year]. The King came to Audlyend'."

P. 144. In Glover's miscellaneous collections in the College of Arms, vol. B. are several extracts from the cartulary of the Abbey of Robertsbridge, made by Glover in 1587, when that cartulary was in the possession of Sir Philip Sidney. The following passages relate to the family of Lundreford, and its connection with Alured St. Martin, the founder of Robertsbridge:

(f. 36.) "Ego Aluredus de S'c'o Martino dedi Monachis de Ponte Roberti tenementu' de Holbemershe, quod ten' comes H. Augi dedit mihi pro servicio suo. Et sciend' quod terram præfati tenementi postea dedi Ricardo filio Hugonis de Lundreford cum filia Mabiliæ de Cant'worthe, nepte mea, in maritagium.

"Ego Aluredus de S'c'o Martino dedi Marg' de Calcea neptæ in maritagio quicquid habebam apud Osindoune in terris, in villanis, in redditibus, sicut de hæreditate mea, quam Comes Joh'es Augi dedit mihi cum cæteris tenementis meis pro servitio meo, &c.

"Ego Hugo de Lundreford dedi Monachis de Ponte Roberti pro salute animæ meæ et Agathæ uxoris meæ et Ricardi filii mei, redditum salis mei, vidz. 20 ambras salis quas feudum de Legh' debet mihi annuatim, &c.

(f. 41.) "Ego Matildis filia et hæres Hug' de Lundreford in libera viduitate mea dedi monachis de Ponte Roberti unam acram prati quam Hugo pater meus dedit eisdem, et totum tenementum de Henneherste quod iacet iuxta forestam Com' de Augo contra Blakebroc. Quod tenementum Aluredus de S'c'o Martino dedit dictis monachis in fundac'one Abb'iæ de Ponte Roberti, &c.

"Convenc'o facta inter Abb'em de Ponte Roberti et Agatham quondam uxorem Hugonis de Lundreford, et Matildem filiam ejusdem Agathæ ex altera, in viduitate ipsarum viz. quod ipsæ resignaverunt præfatis monachis totum tenementum de Henherste, &c.

"Ego Johannes de Lundreford confirmavi monachis de Ponte Roberti duas acras prati in Lundreford, &c. quod habent ex dono Matildis filiæ Hugonis avunculi mei de Lundreford, &c.

"Concordia f'c'a inter Abb'em de Ponte Roberti et Adeliciam quondam uxorem Ric'i filij Hugonis de Lundreford, &c.

"Ego Robertus filius Alani de Lundreford dedi," &c.

In f. 43, Simon de Lonsford is witness to a charter of John de Bogeselle, dated at Robertsbridge Abbey on the feast of St. Lawrence 1293.

These extracts, whilst they show the foundation for the asserted connection of the family of Lundreford with Alured de St. Martin, are at the same time perfectly condemnatory of the pretended extracts from the same cartulary put forth (see p. 144) by the compiler of the pedigree of Lunsford. It is evident that if those passages had been in the book, Glover, who copied so much more, would have transcribed them; and it is also evident that, if the compiler of the pedigree had actually seen the cartulary, he would have obtained documents far superior in value to those he has set down. The fact seems to have been that it was known that the cartulary contained some proof of a connection between St. Martin and Lundreford, and the genealogist, on the faith of that reputed knowledge, framed a marriage to help him on a generation in his ancestral tree.

The real connection is confirmed to be the same which is shown in the brief pedigree in p. 151, as derived from the plea roll of the 9th John; and it further appears that the wife of Hugh de Lundreford was Agatha (and not Beatrice) by whom he had issue Matilda, the same who in 9 Joh. was the wife of William Gulafre, and then (as shown in p. 150) impleaded Alicia, the widow of her brother Richard de Lundreford. On the death of Richard, the male issue of his father Hugh had evidently failed; for we see that the monks of Robertsbridge obtained a charter from John de Lundreford, nephew of Hugh, confirmatory of a gift of his cousin Matilda. It appears therefore that the actual position of Hugh, Richard, and John was not as represented in the pedigree, p. 140; but thus:

Henr. de Knyghton, in Twysden's Decem Scriptores, 2375, 5; confirmed, in almost the same words, by William of Malmesbury, Rer. Anglic. Script. post Bedam. Richard I. "fecit etiam fieri ulnas ferreas quas diminuere de facili nemo poterat." Chronicon Johannis Bromton, ap. Twysden, 1258, 35. King John must again have renewed the standard, as we have found the "ulnæ Regis Johannis" (see p. 311); but no notice of that fact has been discovered in the chronicles.

P. 329. A great part of what Westcot says of Lundy is derived from Camden, who mentions it at the end of his Britannia, under "Islands to the West of Britain." The notes Drayton's Polyolbion (p. 330, note) were written by Selden.

Vol. I. pp. 75, 403. Battle abbey, Sussex. These cartularies, with all the other MSS. and Charters, (of which a Catalogue was printed in 1835, 8vo. pp. xii, 221) were sold by Mr. Thorpe in 1836 to Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart.

Vol. I. p. 198. Christ Church, Twinham, Hampshire.—The Cotton MS. Tib. D. VI. supposed to have been lost by the author of the Cotton Catalogue, and the editors of the new Monasticon, has lately been recovered by Sir F. Madden from the refuse of that collection, preserved in the British Museum, and proves to be, as conjectured, the Speculum Prioris examined by Dodsworth.

Vol. I. p. 400. The MS. relating to Meaux abbey, now in possession of Mr. Nichols, consists principally of the annals of the monastery entitled, "Chronica Mon' de Melsa, de fundacione et progressu eiusdem, perquisicionibus, amissionibus, et infeodacionibus tenementorum eidem pertinencium, placitis, processibus, oneracionibus, et aliis ipsum concernentibus distincte et per vices et tempora singulorum Abbatum separatim et successive eidem presidentium." The volume contains also: 2. Status generalis Mon'. 3. Processus diminucionis taxe Mon'. 4. Feodarium Mon' breviatum. 5. Retracciones serviciorum et redditum. 6. Mensuraciones terrarum. 7. Extracta de compotis et alia memoranda Mon'. The whole consists of 216 folio leaves of vellum, in fine preservation. It contains the signatures in several places of Sir William Alford (whose pedigree has been printed in the present volume),—"Will. Alford oweth this booke;" of "Richarde Gascoigne, 29 August 1622;" and of "Henry Paget, 16 Feb. 1650." It is probably therefore the same MS. as was mentioned by Dugdale, and of which Sir Thomas Phillipps's volume, noticed in vol. i. p. 399, (and some extracts printed in vol. i. pp. 9—12) is a copy. It was presented to the late Mr. Nichols about 1795, by a Lincolnshire clergyman.
